Methodist Episcopal Church. From an able and interesting letter written by Rev. Dr. Durbin, and published in the Naturn Magazine, we glean the following important facts relative to the organization and unparalleled growth of Methodism in the United States. The accompanying table will be found exceedingly interesting to Christians of every denomination, and valuable

The Methodist Episcopal Church was not organized in this country until 1784, at which time there were about 13,000 members and 100 preachers.— The Missionary Society of the Church was formed about thirty years ago, and the contributions of the membership to this cause average about twenty-one

The whole number of communicant members i the Church, now reach 1,200,000 - and estimating three hearers to one communicant in each congrega tion, there are 4,800,000 people composing the congregations and families of the Methodist Epis copal Church in the U. States-being about one sixth of the entire population of the States and Ter-

The Dr. concludes his letter as follows:

About two months since I said, in a public missionary discourse, that the Methodist communion, taken as a whole body, was the wealthiest Church in this country. This declaration was received with great surprise, general incredulity, and some little censure. A few weeks afterward, an abstract of the returns of the census of the United States, taken by the General Government in 1850, was published, in which my opinion was fully sustained.—

It was ordered that the value of the property of each church should be returned in the census: the value of the property of the several churches may each church should be returned in the census; walue of the property of the several churches may be fairly taken as an index of wealth of their respective populations. This being the rule of estimate, we find the census returns make the Methodist Church the wealthiest in the land. I will give the whole table, and ask attention to the fourth column; headed, "Total value of church property:" 1 2 1 4 1 1 1 6 6

I am aware that the remarks and results given above will surprise almost everybody, and con-found many; but a moment's reflection will explain the whole matter. The general opinion his been that the Methodist Church is not rich, nay even is poor, because but few remarkably rich persons as found in her communion. But we do not note the found in her communion. But we do not note the vast number of her members, viz: twelve hundred thousand, and the vast numbers besides that compose her congregations. The wealth of the whole body distributed among so many hundreds of thousands does not attract attention in any one church, or city, or town, as is the case oftentimes in other churches. The great wealth of individuals in some other churches, and their munificent donations, to other churches, and their munificent donations, to other churches, and their munificent donation, together with the grandeur of their church edifices, attract public attention. In the Methodist Church this is rarely, if ever the case. Our people, considered individually as persons or churches, are not wealthy; but being sober and industrious, most of them have substance, and many of them are rich, and the aggregate wealth of so large a body is very great. This explains how we are, contrary to com mon opinion, the wealthest Church in the country, as shown by the census of the United States.

I am aware that there will be some incredulity I am aware that there will be some incredulity

I am aware that there will be some incredulity still on this subject, particularly in the Eastern States. Perhapa this may be partly removed by the following fact: our Church in the West and South is very far richer in proportion than in the East.—Our people were in the West from the beginning, and grow up with the country, and increased in wealth with the wealth of the country. The greatest part of the wealth of the Methodist Church is in the West and South. She will shortly come to understand this matter, and act accordingly. understand this matter, and act accordingly.

The conclusion of the whole matter is this: the water on both sides, so that the getting from one place to another, is at all points difficult, and at some impossible.

The well being of the Church, the better and more steady support of her ministry, and of all her great enterprizes, call upon her pastors and leading members to use their best and persevering endeavors to train our people to a regular and systematic support of all our Church enterprizes, aciding to the ability of each one. This is the secret of the great success of our Wesleyan brethren in England in their financial affairs; and will explain how the Roman Catholic Church in this country creates such splendid church edifices, schools, and colleges. Every man, woman, and child contributes systematically, according to the ability of each. They do not receive the specific of the country creates such splendid church edifices, schools, and colleges. Every man, woman, and child contributes systematically, according to the ability of each. They do not receive the specific of the country creates such splendid church edifices, schools, and colleges. Now the great mass of our people soundly creates such splendid church edinces, the schools, and colleges. Every man, woman, and child contributes systematically, according to the ability of each. They do not receive large sums of money from Europe, as is supposed by many; the money is contributed by themselves here in our midst. Let the Methodists take note and learn.—

J. P. DURBIN.

SMITH O'BRIEN.-A letter from this illustrion exile, to the Dublin Nation, calls to mind his sad and unmerited fate. He speaks like a man; his sentiments are still noble, patriotic, sublime. The vile treatment of his unworthy toe has not in the least tainted his noble mind. Alluding to the remark of Lord Eglinton, that "none of the persons in whose behalf my interference is solicited, have expressed contrition for their crimes, or manifested any sense of gratitude or loyalty to the graciou Sovereign whom they have so grievously offended and to whose clemency some of them are indebted for their lives," he says:

"If it be a crime to have loved the land of my fathers with a fanatic affection, then I am a criminat. If it be a crime to have devoted to the welfare of that land a life of unremitting toil, then I am a criminal. If it be a crime to have foregone for a criminal. It it be a crime to have foregone for its sake every object of personal ambition, and; what I prize still more, the endearments of domestic associations in the happiest of homes, then I am a criminal. If it be a crime to have encountered for its sake every sort of obloquy and danger, then I am a criminal. If it be a crime to have stooped for its sake to solicitations from the British Parliament galling alike to personal and national Parliament galling alike to personal and national pride, then I am a criminal. If it be a crime, when pride, then I am a criminal. If it be a crime, when I found peaceful remonstrance unavailing, to have incited my countrymen to appeal to that final arbitrament which even England can honor in Hungarian failure and in American success, then I am a criminal. If it be a crime to have desired to win the freedom and independence of my country with the least possible amount of bloodshed, and with the least possible amount of bloodshed blo total abstinence from revolutionary excesses, then I am a criminal. Were I in the presence of my criminal. Were I in the presence of my I could not acknowledge as a crime this de-Maker, I could not acknowledge as a crime this de-ortion to Ireland. The Great Railroad Accident:

NEWSPAPER ACCOUNTS OF THE CALAMITY

We copy from the Chicago Tribune of the 26th inst., the following details of the recent heart-rending calamity, heretofore announced by telegraph:

Tussday Morbing, 2 o'clock, A. M.

The express train which left this city at nine o'clock last night, on the Southern Michigan Road. came in collision at the crossing, about eight miles out, with an emigrant and freight train coming into Chicago on the Michigan Central Railroad.

The locomotive of the express train struck the sixth car, filled with passengers, and in a moment the locomotive tender, baggage car and one second class car of the express train, together with three emigrant cars of the Michigan Central train, were a heap of ruins.

heap of ruins. the northerly side of the Central track on On the northerly all the control upon its side, and groans and cries assailed the ears of those who hastened from the rest of the first class cars which retained their position. Those in the car were aided to escape the confusion, and from the danger of sufon, and it was found that none were danger location, and was considered the control of the con and time will not efface the memory of that terri-ble and heart-rending spectacle from the mind of the unwilling beholder.

We saw a heap of ruins, from beneath which shrieked out upon the midnight air, cries for help mingled in strange discord with the deeper toned groans of the dying. One by one those who were able, crawled out from the rubbish, while the unin-jured were fully employed in rendering assistance to those unable to extricate themselves.

Each moment the scence became, if possible Each moment the scence became, if possible, more heart-rending. Here sat a poor woman with a broken limb, and her little daughter stood by her side, weeping for assistance. There lay a young German, dead, his sister by his side, wringing her band, and crying "mein bruder, mein bruder!"—Here a child crying "0, my father;" there a woman wailing for the loss of her infant. A woman dead, her mangled features but partially conce_led a cloak and at her side only a taithful dog.

Three children, from three to ten years of age, were taken from the water, and placed side by side. At the head of one sat the bereaved father. The one came to claim the other two. An infant was picked out of the ruins unharmed but no mother could be found for it.

Those most dangerously injured were conveyed into the unharmed cars, and rendered as comfortable as possible. With some the struggle between life and death seemed uncertain. In this place was exhibited the kindness of woman's nature, and the sympathy of many a true heart found expression in timely action. It was the general opinion that from 12 to 15 bodies lay beneath the ruins, though it was impossible to ascertain with any accurracy. Four bodies had been taken out. From 50 to 60 were serious ly injured, and some of these cannot recover. The pigrants on the Central road suffered the most.

The cause of this collision, rarely if ever equal-led in its fatal and terrible results, is beyond conecture. The night was bright as nearly a full moor and the clearest atmosphere could make it. The two roads cross each other at nearly right angles and run for a long distance on a straight line. It seems as if it were impossible for both engineers not to have seen each other's trains for the distance of at least half a mile, if not a mile, before reach ing the crossing. But comment as yet on the cause is out of the question. Let an outraged communi-ty, let the survivors of the killed, let the maimed or life, hold all those in any way connected with this who lesale destruction of human life to th

The news of the collision, which occurred about ten o'clock, was brought to the city by the locomotive of the emigrant train. Messengers were dis patched to the city from the depot, and Drs. Palmer and Clark, and one of the editors of the Tribune were soon under way. At the Central Railraod denot a locomotive and passenger car were in waiting r them, and by 12 o'clock they had reached the iatal scene.

The physicians, with admirable self-possession, proceeded immediately to do all in their power for the groaning sufferers. In the course of two hours they had ministered more or less of relief to all.— The American Commissioner was at Macao, and would shortly proceed to Shanghai. Commodore perry was daily expected. The U.S. sloop-of-war wounded and dying who had been crushed in the cars of that road, and yet four hours and a half had elapsed since the collision! and yet these poor creatures, in all the agonies of broken limbs and smashed bodies, could not be conveyed to any house or tures, in all the agonies of broken limbs and smash-ed bodies, could not be conveyed to any house or bed except on that road.

To the east of the ruins burned a bright fire kin dled from the splinters, whose light flickered across the quiet forms of three children, and now brightly upon the passengers who gatchred around it. Another fire was also burning west of the express

No one in the first-class passenger cars was seriously injured. The engineer, fireman, and conductor escaped as usual.

SOMETHING FOR ANTIQUARIANS.—A correspondent at Clearfield, Pa., whose statement is worthy of all credence, says the Germanioum Telegraph gives us the following account of the existence of a singular mound in that county —singular Irom its undoubted antiquity, and of the unknown people by whom it was erected: whom it was erected:

"There is a singular mound existing on the farm of Grier Bell, Eq., in the county of Clearfield, about 14 miles from this town, and near the head waters of little Clearfield creek. The farm is situated on elevated ground, and this mound forms the summit of the highest part of the farm. Standing on the mound the eye takes in at one view the whole sur-rounding country, like looking from a high mountain. This mound is in a square form, and about one acre in extent. Mr. Bell says, that when he first saw it, there was plainly visible two inclined planes or gateways leading to the summit; and although the ground has been cultivated for thirty years, and consequently the plow has leveled the embankment considerably, yet they still can be traced. The soil on the mound is a black, loose Lancaster, Mar. 3 Prospectus of the "Democratic Monthly Review."—The Rights of the States, and the Union of the States. It is the intention of the subscribers to fyublish on the first day, of each month, beginning with the month of May next, simultaneously in the cities of Washington and New York, a periodical, to be entitled the "Democratic Monthly Review." Each number will contain at least 96 pages, and be printed on fine paper in a very superior style. It will also be embellished with a finely engraved portrait of a distinguished living man, embracing statesmen, soldiers, artists, and authors. The political character of this Review will be, as its title indicates, democratic, and one of its main objects to elucidate the true principles of the democratic party. It will examine in a spirit of fairness and candor, all the leading measures of the present administration, and accord to them a cheerful support. Should we, however, unfortunately differ in opinion on any point from the President, we shall not hesitate to express our own sentiments, and the reasons that constrain us to do so—submitting to the democracy of the country the decision between us.

This Review will also aim to furnish the readers Drospectus of the "Democratic cent. It to to the democracy of the contry the decision between us.

This Review will also aim to furnish the readers what a graphic and comprehensive notice of the new works published, which may seem to be entitled to it, and also a record of all scientific discoveries and improvements.

Mr. Dougherty—Dear Sir: Having been afflicted for many years with Consumption, or affection of lungs, and had the advice of six eminent Physicians of this city, who prescribed various remedies which I used with little or no effect, and previously afflicted with splitting corruptions coated with blood, I gave up all hoges afrecovery. At this time my daughter was with a family who was using Dougherty's Black Expectorant with success, who recommended the same to me. I instantly procured 'a bottle, and affer using six bottles, may with safety say, I am completely restored to health. Yours, &c.,

WILLIAM COLLIER.
