The Prodigal Son. BY GEORGE W. M'ELROY.

Give me my portion; father!— I am weary of the cold and dull Monotony of home;
The rippling of the brook that sparkles
In the meadow, and singing of the birds
That nestle in the branches, bring no more
That music to my ear in which my Childhood sported.

The quiet shades, through which the moon's Pale beams cast their long streams of silver Light, where we were wontto sit and watch The stars that lit the dome above; And wonder, and adore the hand that Placed them there, rest like a shadow On my soul, and I would fain away— Ambition prompts me, and the love of Fame and worldly pleasure, swells in Restrain me not, but give me of thy Thy substance, and I go.

Years had rolled round;—far in a distant land The Prodigal had ta'en his place; Not in the ranks of honor and of fame;— Not in the ranks of nonor and of lame;—
For he had wasted all his portion.
And lean and hungry famine sat upon his check
And languished in his eys;—
But as a feeder of the swinish herd,
To which he carried husks, and fain Himself had fed upon them :-And no man gave to him."
The peaceful quiet of his father's house,
The rippling of the brook and singing of the birds, and the calm shades where Evening's twilight found him watching The stars that spaikled in the vault of heaven , All came back and touched his soul With tender memories of the past.
Why did he languish there, to perish
Without food, while in his father's house,
The hired servants held their daily banquet? Alas! the blight of years was on him, And his wasted form seemed but the shadow Of his former self; and burning shame Glowed on his cheek. His long familiarity With guilt had seared his nobler feelings, And he could not go to him who ever

But now he was resolved :—
But now he was resolved :—
High hills and mountains intervened
Between the wanderer and his home; His pathway lay through deserts wild, And gloomy forests, and o'er streams Whose stormy waves, lashed the frail barque. That trembled with its burden. That trembled with its burden.
At every footstep thorns sprung up,
And juffed rocks and frowning peaks,
Flung their dark shadows o'er his dreary way.
The serpent fled from his approach,
Or pausing, hissed defiance from its slimy den;
And the dread howl of savage beasts,
That use the night's dark shadows for their
Covert, filled his soul with terror;
While ever and anon, across his path,
The storm cloud lingered, and the lightning
Flashed and thunder rolled, their fearful
Evidence of God's displeasure. Evidence of God's displeasure.

High on a lofty eminence, that everlooked or many a weary day and s Night had marked his painful journey; Night had marked his paintil journey; Yet his father's house still lingered in the Distance; but his carnest eye had caught The sunlight of its lony dome; And hope almost departed, rose once more Within his bosom and he slept.

His strength had failed him, and his weary Limbs sunk 'neath' the toils of travel; Perhaps some shepherd from his father's fold, Might pass that way, and like the good Samaritan, bind up his wounds and se:

Him on his journey. It not, to die there were a bliss to him, For balmy winds now fanned his fevered cheek. ntle music tuned each passing breeze. tant murmurs of the rippling brook, ane distant murmurs of the rippling and the sweet singing of the birds; In which his soul, in boyhood's guileless' Hours delighted, came back to him in Dreams, and the pale wanderer lived once More, the sunny days of childhood and of home. His father knew the place of his repose, And ministering angels came, and strewed

The Prodigal awoke, and the thick mist That had obscured his vision, passed away; And the hold outlines of his father's mansion Burst upon him and he wept.

Yet his were not the tears of sorrow now, But tears of joy, such as are shed By him who long has wandered from the fold By him who long has wandered from the lold Of God, tasting the transient pleasures of the worl Feeding upon the lean and starving condiments Of sin, and who in bitter agony of spirit, Turns once again his footsteps Zion-ward; And as the clouds of darkness roll away, Before the dawn of mercy's visitation; Feels the clear sunlight of forgiveness in the soul, His father saw him in the distance, and he

WEY DO TEETH DECAY .- All the theories that this enquiry, have long since vanished before the true doctrine of the action of external corrosive agents. The great and all-powerful destroyer o the human teeth is acid, vegetable or mineral the mouth by the decomposition of particles of food left between and around the teeth, or whether it is applied directly to the organs themselves: tho is the same, the enamel is dissolved, corroded, and the tooth destroyed. Much, very much of the decay in teeth may be attributed to the corrosive effects of acetic acid, which is not vinegar, but is generated by the decay and decomvinegar, out is generated by the decay and decomposition of any and every variety of vegetable matter. When we consider how very lewpersons, comparatively, take especial pains to remove every particle of food from between and around their teeth sinn shined, because the butter wouldn't come, because the butter wouldn't come and because the butter wouldn't come immediately after eating, can we wonder that dis eased teeth are so common, and that their early

BISHOP SOULE .-- A writer in the Southern Christian Advocate, tells the following amusing story of the good Bishop:

We felt deeply interested a few months ago, in a stage coach conversation with Bishop Soule, in rather hear the clatter of stones and hammers which that venerable and veteran leader gave us I twenty tin pans and nine brass kettles, than the the story of his saddle horse 'Hero.' Whether Her will ever get into print hereafter, we cannot tell -He is worthy of a place in the picture which pos -the picture of a life of adventure, toil, and sell sacrifice gone through by the second race of American Bishops. On this horse, Bishop Soule made five tours of the continent, traveling in the saddle Among the many incidents and accidents by flood and field" to which Hero was party, one occurred bred, and trained in Virginia for the turt. Bisho Soule was on his way to Augusta, Georgia, to attend the session of the South Carolina Conference.
He reached the suburbs of the city at a time when races were in full blast. Passing the course just as the excitement of the race was at its height, Hero, forgetful that he carried a grave and rever-end bishop, 'Casarem et Casaris fortunas,' suddenly sprang across the ditch and was in the act of leaping the sence, and taking part in the ignoble strike of the turf, when his master, by the most strenuous exercise of the powers of hand and voice, succeeded in preventing him. If a Methodist Bishop, no lines volens, had ridden a race that day, and won the

A Thrilling Story. Mrs. Wilson, who was recently recovered from

About a year ago she was married to a young farmer in Texas, and in April they joined a party of fifty-two emigrants bound for California. They were attacked by Indians, and the party was com-pelled to return to Texas; but Mr. and Mrs. Wilon remained at El Paso, where their horses being stolen, they were compelled also to give up the plan of going to California, and set out on their re-turn to Texas in July. In August, Mr. Wilson and his father fell into the hands of Indians and were murdered. Mrs. W. returned to El Paso, and again in September started for Texas, with her three brothers in law and a small party. When within three days' journey of Phantom Hill, an American military post, they were attacked by Camanches, while some of their men were off in pursuit of some of their horses that had been stolen. A Mexican erty of the party.

The Indians, with their captives proceeded in a North-west direction, each being appropriated as the property of one or other of the chiefs. They were stripped of nearly all their clothing, and otherwise brutally treated. Mrs. Wilson, although soon expecting to become a mother, was subjected to every conceivable cruelty and indignity, beaten for eight days, to escape. At the expiration of this time, she was rescued by the traders, furnished with a horse, and brought to the town of Pecos, New Mexico, where Major Carleton and others, of the army, took care of her and enabled her to proceed to Santa Fe. Her two young brothers remain captives.

Trading in Ladies.

Many rich Turkish ladies carry on a trade, for which we have no name. They keep what may be called Nurseries of Wives and Mothers; and find both pleasure and profit in training their young proteges to the duties of married life. Their agents go about collecting the raw material of their manulacture, picking up orphans, foundlings, or the children of poor parents; for, in the East, there is no prejudice of birth, and the lady is distinguished from the servant only by education or wealth. The task is by no means difficult. Not much knowl-edge is expected from an Oriental matron; and in this case at least neither the idea of virtue or sentiment is inculcated. We have alredy hinted in what way the flock of young maidens is made to contribute to the development of the young mas-ters of the house. They are early ready to be sold

Beautiful girls are often bought by these professional trainers in high life, for eight or ten pounds, and afterwards sold for four or five hundred. The the trade, to which not the slighest idea of shame is attached. They discuss the price of their meris attached. They discuss the price of their mer chandize, and as openly as if they were selling a pair of slippers or a parcel of pertume. Sometimes they act as agents for some old gentlemen, who finds his house lonely and his purse sufficiently ful nnos nis nouse to nery and mis purse sometenty that to enable him to indulge in the luxury of a companion; and sometimes they undertake the still more equivocal task of going about warming the imaginations of bachelors and other by the luxurious descriptions of the caged beauties. They generally take money on either hand, and it must be admitted that many good matches are struck by

of a minister or other great functionary. The wife of Reschid Pacha, who, by the way, is no polygamist, has generally some forty young creatures to dispose of, and finds no difficulty in getting rid of them. The demand is always could to the supply The demand is always equal to the supply From this class, and from the Georgian slave market, most of the consorts of persons high in rank are taken. Such are the mothers of the Sublime Porte, aye, and all of the Sultan's that have ever reigned on the shores of the Bosphorus, for the Sul-tan doe not, in those simple countries, either beg the hand of the princess he has never seen, or, imitating a common man, choose a wife among the coquettes of a ball-room. The state provides the partner of his couch. At various periods of the year fixed by law, the Council of Ministers and the Tlemas, in conclave assembled, vote, as it were, a subsidy of girls bought at the public markets,or at private sales, and send them with high solemnities into the arms of his Sublime Majesty. On these occasions the Sultan goes in pompous processions to the mosque, and, no doubt, thanks Heaven for the large supply of angels which have come to illuminate his solitary moments.—Life in the East.

bating society, somewhere down in Indiana, the discussion was, 'which is the greatest evil, a scolding wife or a smokey chimney.' After the disputants had concluded the debate, a spectator arose and begged the privilege of making a fer remarks on the occasion.' Permission being granted

'Mr. President, I,ve been almost mad a listening to the debate of these 'ere youngsters. They don,t Wait till they have had one for twenty years, and he be hammered and jammed and slammed, all the while; and wait till they have been scolded because son shined, because the butter wouldn't come, because the old cat had kittens, because they came too soon for dinner, because they were a minute too late, because they tore their trowsers, because they invited women to call again, because they got sick, or because they did anything else, no matter wirether they couldn't help it or not, or because they didn,t do something else, no matter whether they could or not, before they talk about the evils of a scolding wife; why, Mr. President, I'd din, din, of a scolding wife. Yes, sir-ee, I would; to my mind, Mr. President, a smoky chimney is no more to be compared to a scolding wife, than a

At the time, she was sent in advance in the morning as usual, when she determined to attempt an escape, which she succeeded in accomplishing by secreting her-self in some bushes till the Indians had passed. For twelve days she wandered through this Indian country, subsisting upon berries when she for-tunately fell in with some New Mexican traders, who furnished her with some men's clothing and a blanket. In consequence of their meeting with some Camanches, they had to leave her behind, and she narrowly escaped a second capture. The Board would respectfully suggest to the various officers who are authorized by law to grant orders of admission, that a strict examination should be made of the applicant:—lst. As to the District to which he belongs. 2nd. As to the relatives of the applicant, who may be willing, or bound by law to releive him. 3nd. As to his real inability to support himself from physical infirmaty or other causes, which entitle him to the charities of the Institution. The Board being bound to obey legal orders, a little attention to these requisites, would often save much trouble and expense to the county.
