Thus, while every one of his guests surrenner knile and pixol into ins keeping until the end of the spree. Thus, while every public meeting at Wilder pro-duced its fistcuffing, shooting and stabing, there never wise a difficulty of the sort at Damon's, thus corroborating Milton's Devils with the devils damned hold concord; men only disagree!' I question whether Milton was ever more aptly quoted in his life.

In the town of Wilder, traded the substantial firm of Fahuestock, Beverly & Co., produce and commission merchants. I say the substantial firm; as well as by various circumstantial evidences, and for while all other houses smashed without, assets put under the heaviest bail bonds to appear before of any sort, this establishment paid fitteen cents on the dollar; and so remarkable was this event conidered at the time, that it was proposed in New York to present them with a service of plate .-The house had just received a remittance of funds on account of some shipments of cotton, to the very handsome amount of four thousand dollars. It was duly locked up in the iron sate in the counting room, and the partners retired to ,their homes. confident in its security as they were in their own But when the store was unlocked pext morning, the sale, sad misnomer, was found to be wrenched open, the money drawer empty, and the valuable packet abstracted.

Vain would be any attempt to describe the scene Fabriestock collared Beverly and demanded the money. Beverly chased the Co. into the storet, the Co. screaming fire, murder and thieves, all in a breath, to know who left the store last. People or under interpret the store last. People crowded in from all parts, to find F. grasping in his chair, B. cutting up the most extravagant pan-tomimes, and the Co. dissolved in uncontrolable anguish. It was a pititul sight, that affair was .-The danger of a man's falling from grace never excited half so much distress in the hearts of the

Amongst the loss of that money. Amongst the losers on, and by far the least concerned of any, appeared Eugene Damon, who examined the pick-lock with a sbrewd smile, and youchesded it with his opinion 'That it was a pick vouchsafed it with hie opinion 'That it was a juicy thing!' language that certainly meant something, although none of the bystanders understood what! Great rewards were for bwith offered to induce the thieve to be honest. The temptations held ou even went so far as to propose to give five hundred dollars, gnd no questions asked, if the money were etwened. But as this involved the clear loss of three thousand five hundred cash already in hand, honesty remained at a discount, and the purloiners generously permitted the sufferers to ask as many questions as they pleased. Falmestock, Beverly & Co., never heard of their money afterwards! The ambiguous language used by D by Damor had excited various suspicions which his tree man-ner of living, and the flushness of his money mar-ket shortly afterwards added considerable weight. So shrewd an individual could not but see, in the sideway glance and muttered remarks elicited by is passing down the street, each day, that something was brewing; but like a man who has smelt rattlesnakes before he only held his head the higher and walked by. His wife, to whoma he imparted these suspicions, counseled him to prepare his weadaily walks, with no other defence than the usual tools of a gambler, viz., a bowie and two brace of double barrel.

He had speedy cause to regret his carelessness however, for while drinking at the Coffee House, one evening about dusk he was suddenly seized from behind, blindfolded, gogged and conveyed to a skiff in the river, in which he was hurriedly rowed across to the opposite side before he could form the shadow of an idea what fate was contemplated tor him.

Carrying him up the bank, his captors, four in all, led him half a mile back througn the den, tied him to a holly tree, and opened the object of their Nothing perhaps tend, more surely to promote the science of Agriculture than such exhibitions. One of them, easily recognized by his voice to
