The tol-lowing debate in the British Parliament, gives a view of the present position of affairs, and to which little can be added.

The Russian Ministers have left London and Paris, and instructions have been sent to the French and English Embassadors to withdraw from St. Petersburg. The Czar's last propositis are finally rejected, and negotiations are broken off. Count Orloff's mission has tailed.

GREAT BRITAIN .- DEBATES IN THE HOUSE OF Lonns.—The Russian Minister is understood to have withdrawn from London, and, in the mean-time, will await, at Darmstadt, further orders from grant rescued this child's life by bearing it in his

The Marquis said that when he brought forward his notice of motion he certainly thought from the language field by the members of the Government in that flouse, that the proposal made to the Emperor of Russia had been virtually, it no formally, rejected by him, and that his formal re-fusal to accede would be received immediately. It appeared, however. that no formal relusal had been received, and that the semblance of negotiations were still going on at Vienna. While, therefore, there was even the faintest probability of these negotiations resulting in peace he was unwilling to provoke discussion, and would rest content with intant questions—Has any answer been received om the Emperor of Russia? What is the present state of diplomatic relations with that power? and what instructions, if any, have been sent to the

The Earl of Clarendon replied that Lord Clau ricarde was so far correct in his supposition that a proposal from the Emperor of Russia had been received at Vienna, and was known there on Friday 3d ult., stating the terms on which he would h prepared to negotiate for peace. He (Lord Clarendon) had only that afternoon, the 6th, received official instruction of the lact. It was only on the 2d just, that the Conference was called together and these proposals, or rather this ' counter project' of of Russia was communicated by Count Boul, the Austrian representative, to the rep resentatives of France, England and Prussia. dispatch announcing this fact was not in the hands ot all tue Members of Government, but he (Clauricade could inform the House that the terms of the Emperor's proposal were quite unacceptable. and not of a character to permit their being sent to Constantinople. Upon that point no doubt existed for a moment in the minds of members of the conference. In reply to Lord Clauricarde's sec-ond inquiry, Lord Clarendon replied that on Saturday evening, 6th, Baron Brunow, Russian Minister at London, called at the Foreign Office, and made known that the answers given to the inquiries of his Government did not permit him to continue his official luuctions, and consequently diplomatic re-lations between Russia and Britain are broken off. In the course of the week the papers on which Ba-ron Brunow's withdrawal was founded would be submitted to the House.

The Earl of Ellenborough had been always opiuion that this question with Russia could be solved in no way but by war, and he poped that Ministers would not be deluded by any circumstance into relaxing their preparations for that contingency. He considered that Britain is at the commen t of one of the most formidable wars in which she has ever engaged. He acquitted the country of the guilt of that war, but he could not acqu Ministers it they failed to prepare for a great and arduous struggle. In particular, were they prepa-red to present a fleet of sufficient force in the Baltic immediately on the breaking up of the ice?

The Marquis of Clanricarde agreed with Lord Ellenborough in believing that the war would be a momentuos one, but he could not quite say that ministers were wholly irresponsible for this com-ing war. Although they had acted with ability, he believed that frequently they had not said the right thing at the right time, and as it was evident, both that the discussion of the matter must have a retrospective character, and that the proent position of affairs could not continue long, he would renew his motion that day week.

East Fitzwilliam entirely agreed that the present state of affairs could not continue long. He thought

Lord Beaumont complained that the informa-tion given by Lord Clarendon was meager. He would therefore ask whether instructions have been sent for the withdrawal of the British Embassador from St. Petersburg, and for stopping further negotiations there?

The Earl of Clarendon replied that he was sorry Lord Beaumont thought his information meager, or that he had held out hopes and expectations that tresh negotiations may be entered into, and that peace may be preserved. He (Clarendon) held out no such hopes. He had already said that negotia; tions have been brought to a close at Vienna; that Russia,s new proposal being unacceptable couls not be transmitted to Constantinople-and so there was an end of them; and he had no reason to he-leive that iresh negotiations on the subject would be entered into. He was unable to state why Count Orloff prolonged his stay in Vienna after having executed his mission relating to the trea-ties between Austria and Russia. With respect to the question whether the British Minister is with. drawn from St. Petersburg, he would say that since Baron Brunow's retirement there hadnot beentimeto do more than communicate with the French Govern it, but to morrow, 7th, instructions would be sent by France and England to Gen.
