For the Intelligencer. SPRING. BY T. W. MEAGHER, M. D.

Tis gentle twilight, and the balmy breeze That wafts a fragrance from some olive grove Comes softly whispering through the rustling frees And fans the genial flame of ardent love.

Yes, lovely Spring, in garb of gayest green, Returns to cheer with hope's reviving ray, To shed its bright effulgence o'er each scette And hold the spirit 'neath its potent sway.

She brings to mind the dreams of by-gone days, Whose memory cherished still with feelings dear. When youthful love her voice first dared to raise And sought to southe each pang by yows sincer-

To other minds she brings a sadder tone When disappointment's arrow pierced the soul When brightest hopes, and sweetest joys had flown. And 'round the heart the storms of sorrow roll.

To them, no vernal blossom brings relief, The Spring-time of their life has come and passed And dreary Winter reigns fill every grief In Lethe's waters finds repose at last.

And thus the human heart, by Heaven cast On earth to bloom awhile, and die in turn. Must teach this usoful lesson-that the pas If unimproved, can never more return. But oh! may each revolving year still bring Some cheering hopes,-some cherished dream Then will our tuture prove one genial Spring,

One bright, one happy, and one smiling May ALIXANDRIA, Va., April, 1855.

DARLING LOTTIE;

OR, THE PLEILS OF HOUSEKLEPISH.

Miss Charlotte Jones was the daughter of a worthy and enterprising carpenter, who, settling in a thriving village, became in due time a builder, contractor, and a forehanded man. His wife was as industrious as himself, and more ambitious; and among other blessings, they had a fair daughter, Miss Charlotte, who was as pretty, as charming, indeed, as was necessary to make the smartest and cleverest young man in the place fall in love with herwhich he did. Certainly he did. He was a medical student in the doctor's office right opposite. As he sat there studying anatomy or making pills, he could see Miss Charlotte in the parlor or the garden. He could hear her play on the piano-forte, and sing; could see her do all sorts of wonderfu worsted work; and he came to think that parlor one of the most delightful places of the world.

Not much of a dog either. there was dinner to get, and that dinner little dog-a dear little pet dog, such as was to make up for the breakfast. The ittle children love and are made happy doctor liked a nice dish of boiled victuals by loving, for the brute teaches the human -so she made a fire, and peeled the pota-

Nobody-yet nobody said, fresh pork, into the kettle, and set them to "Let him go, I don't care," for every body boiling. There was a rousing fire; the waloved the dog. He was so playful-so ter boiled furiously, and she went up stairs cunning-so intelligent-so affectionateto put a few stitches into her paroquet .-and above all he was not like some of the two legged ones—a dirty dog. Well, early one morning the dog went Pretty soon she became conscious of an unpleasant odor; she snuffed and wondered away-perhaps only to teach his betters and then put in the eye of the paroquet But the unpleasant odor became stronger how much better it would be for them to and at last she thought proper to go in the be like him, early to bed and early to direction it seemed to come from, and that happened to be in the kitchen. The stove rise, and out for a morning walk. And so the dog went away, and no one was red hot, so was the kettle of boiled hought whether he had gone till breakvictuals, and a nice smother was rising fast-time, and then it was discovered that from it. The darling Lottie dashed a diplittle Fidele-they called him Del, for a short name-did not start up and bark per of water into the kettle-bang! and such a cloud of steam! The kettle was and run to the door when the breakfast cracked, but the doctor had just come bell rung, and did not come and sit down home hungry, the table was set, and dinby his mistress' chair looking up for a ner was soon dished. The darling Lottie took her place at the many another rover he had gone away head of the table. She was flushed and nervous, and ready for a fit of hysterics:

but the doctor was so cheerful, and tender that she began to feel quite happy. But the poor dinner. It did not smell exactly right; it seemed to have caught on the bottom of the kettle, the doctor said; then the potatoes were boiled into a pulp, while the beets and turnips were quite hard. The fresh pork rather wanted salting. 'Charles, dear,' said Lottie, very sadly.

Well Lotty, darling, what is it ? 'I'm afraid the dinner is not very nice. 'Well, it's a little scorched, and not ex-we know that he is decidedly badly posted up. From actual observation we know that the amount to come forward and now ready for shipment on the shores of Michigan, is almost 400,000 bushels of wheat, and 100,000 barrels of flour, besides 75,000 barrels at Detruit, 30,000 at Toledo, and about 6,000 barrels at Cleveland. The amount at Sandusky and an additional 50 or 100,000 barrels of flour may be expected from the Lake Michigan ports before harvest, together with 50,000 barrels more from Detroit, and about the same amount from Toledo and Cleveland each. Let us now see how the figures will stand on these data. From Lake Michigan, 650,000 bbls.; "Oh, dear! On the opening of navigation, considerable quantities will be shipped to Lake Superior and the lumber regions, and some to Pitts-burgh, &c.; but it is fair to estimate, at least, a good little girl—she cried bitter tears when Aunt Mary went away with her lit-ports from the West at 800,000 barrels. STARTLING, BUT TRUE WHAT EVERY WOMAN SHOULD KNOW.

How often it happens, that the wife lingers from year to year in that pitiable condition as not even for one day to feel the happy and exhilarating influ-ence invident to the enjoyment of health. THE BLOOMING BRIDE.

But a few years ago in the flush of health and youth, and buoyancy of spirits, rapidly, and apparently in-explicably, becomes a feeble, sickly, sallow, debili-tated wife, with frame emaciated, nerves unstrung, spirits depressed, countenance bearing the impross. of suffering, and an utter physical and mental prostration, arising from ignorance of the simplest and plainest rules of health as connected with the mar-riage state, the violation of which antails disease, suffering and misery, not only to the wife, but often HEREDITARY COMPLAINTS UPON THE CHILDREN " UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION," attesting the high estimation in which it is held as a re-liable popular Medical BOOK FOR EVERY FEMALE the author having devoted his exclasive attention to the treatment of complaints peculiar to females, in respect to which he is yearly consulted by thousands both in person and by letter.

Here every woman can discover, by comparing her own symptoms with those described, the nature, character, causes of, and the proper remedies for, her complaints. The wife about becoming a mother has often need of instruction and advice of the utmost importance to her future health, in respect to which her sensitiveness forbids consulting a medical gentleman, will find such instruction and advice, and also explain many symptoms which otherwise would occasion anxiety or alarm as all the peculiarities incident to her situation are described. How many are suffering from obstructions or irregular ities peculiar to the female system, which undermine the health, the effects of which they are ignorant, and for which their delicacy forbids seeking medical advice. Many suffering from prolapsus uters (falling of the womb), or from fluor albus (weakness, debility, &c.) Many are in constant agony for many months preceding confinement. Many have difficult if not dangerous deliveries, and slow and uncertain recoveries. Some whose lives are hararded during such time, will each find in its pages the neans of prevention, amelioration and relief.

It is of course impracticable to convey fully the various subjects treated of, as they are of a nature strictly in tended for the married or those contemplating marriage. And Dr. Simmons, who had received the honors of a medical college rather young, and who thought it needful to raise all the whiskers he could by industrious shaving, and a course of Maccassars, and to mount a pair of spectacles besides, to make him look old enough, had decided to commence business in a small but growing village, in a neighboring county, where, as it happened Mr. Jones owned a neat cottage. of which. with its acre of garden lot, he made his daughter a marriage present, and there, on the termination of the wedding tour they took up their residence. The good Mrs. Jones had put everything 'to rights.' It was in the most exquisite apple-pie order, and no young couple just beginning house-keeping, was ever any better fixed.

Mrs. Jones, good soul, had always done her own work. Help was a dreadful bother. Charlotte had been carefully educated .-She could do everything-that is, everything that is ever taught to young ladies. She knew all science, and nearly all languages, that is, a little. She could do all kinds of fancy work. Her worsted cats and wax flowers were wonderful; so were her water color drawings, and monochromatic sketches were 'high art.' Every body said so

But somehow, Mrs. Jones, from a habit of doing everything herself, had not given Miss Charlotte a fair chance in kitchen and laundry and in other housekeeping accomplishments, while Charlotte had a vague idea that all those common things were perfectly easy, and as they were not taught have.' at school she thought they came by nature. So she commenced her housekeeping in a dream of blissful anticipations. They took possession of their fine little house one summer's evening. Mrs. Jones saw them all properly fixed, and had gone home. They waked with the early birds. Dr.

Simmons dreamed that somebody was thundering on the door, to knock him up to see a patient. It was his horse pawing to be 'Well, Lotty dear,' said the grave doctor, who was in his twenty-third year, to his wife of eighteen, 'shall we make a beginning now, rise early, and attend to husiness ?

'Oh, by all means. I'll jump up and get breakfast.' 'And I'll feed Pomp and weed the garden.' So the doctor watered and fed his horse, and hoed his potatoes a little, and then took a peep into the neat little kitchen, to see how the 'Darling Lottie' was getting on with breakfast. Her face was red, and her hands very black; her hair was powdered with ashes. It was plain that she had trouble, but she spoke pleasantly for all that when she said:

'Do go away, Charles, that's a dear, till you hear the bell ring. Breakfast will soon be ready.'

Well, he waited. He read, then he whistled, then he fidgeted, then he wound up the clock, then he looked at his new case of instruments, and wondered how soon he would cut off his first leg; then he got very hungry, and at last the bell did ring, and he went to breakfast. The darling Lottie was looking a little better, but still rather anxious. Have you had a hard time, darling?

inquired the doctor cautionsly. Oh, not very. The fire did not kindle well at first, and the stove smoked.'

'Did you open the damper ?' 'Damper ! why no. Has it got a damper?

Well, I'll remember next time. Now have some coffee.'

The doctor took his cup,

Ve'll try the dessert. 4Oh !?

Well, darling, what's the trouble ? Lottle ran into the kitchen, and there was her poor, forgotten plum pudding in the stove oven just burnt to a cinder. -one-two-three-four. One is ahead. Both will lose, as he finished, or rather made his dinner for now three is ahead. Now he is up, and on, some bread and butter.

The darling Lottie mourned over her disasters, but took comfort in the brilliant plumage of her paroquet, which Dr. Simmons could not sufficiently admire. She was also comforted with the thought that the next on its head ! meal was tea, which she felt sure she could accomplish. And when the hour drew nigh she built a fire ; and by this time she had learned how to manage that. Then she dog was lost. took some flour and milk and butter, with some saleratus, to make them light, and mixed up some nice biscuits, and put them into the oven, and then she made the tea and when all was ready, she rang the bel with great emphasis.
