LANCASTER CITY, PA., TUE>DAY MORNING, JUNE 17, 1856.

VOL. LVII.

THE LAST FAREWELL.

BY DE. THOMAS WILKINSON. The last farewell ! must it be spoken-Shall we on earth ne'er meet again ? Link after link so soon be broken. In cherish'd friendship's golden chain ? The social hours we've spent together, Shall they not be to mem'ry dear ? Like smiling suns in darkest weather. The drooping heart with hope to cheer ? With hope still on some coming morrow, To meet on fairer, sunnier shore, Where not a pang of parting sorrow Shall heave the breast forever more. There, 'neath fragrant bowers, at leisure, On seats in fadeless bloom array'd, May endless hours of social pleasure Their sweetest off'rings round us shed.

WHY I DIDN'T MARRY HER.

I was sitting last summer smoking a a cigar with my friend Tom Fairbanks. It old age, and it shows a radical defect somewas at Rockaway, and we were laughing where. in our own room, with our feet elevated on and that, my dear fellow, is why I did not the window bench. Best way in the world marry Flora Goodman. of sitting, that. Wonder if ladies never try it when no one is near. Guess they do. and then began to dress for the evening's We had smoked two cigars, and commenc- farce. ed on the third. There's something very strange in a cigar-it makes one cool in warm weather, and warm in cold weather. And there's a great deal in enjoying it with a crony ! Tom was a fast friend of mine, and a fine fellow-yes, a real fine fellow; there was something in him. He was fond of society, and a great favorite among the ladies, and now as I looked over the dancing waves and mused--cigars promote reflection, they're a real moral institution, and that's why the clergy patronize them, I suppose. As I smoked and mused, I wondered why he had never been caught in any of the nets spread for him. There was a tall dark-eyed beauty who had made a great impression on his heart. He had danced and flirted through a whole New York season with her, and from the way in which they had both denied it, I had really believed them engaged. But Tom had suddenly drawn of, and left the lady to point her toes and curl her ringlets for some one else. I had never known the reason of this, and with my mind full of these thoughts, I suddenly turned on Tom, and asked him how it was he didn't marry Flora Goodman ?

Tom took the cigar from his mouth, looked at me, arched his eyebrows, and then commenced puffing again. 'No, but tell me; you were very much taken in that quarter once.' Tom made no reply but to throw open his collar a little more. Tom and I had mounted Byron collars since we came to Rockaway. There seemed no getting any thing out of him. 'Did the lady cut you, Tom ?'

I thought this would rouse him. 'No,' was the emphatic response. He then knocked off the ashes of the cigar, saying, 'and so you want to know why I didn't marry Miss Goodman ?

ples. But she seemed uneasy. She did not attend to what he was saying. He was no dandified youth who might ask her to ride, or take her to Maillard's, or send her boquets; and so he was not worth wasting her time on. Suddenly she interrupted him in the middle of a sentence with "I beg your par-don, sir," and turning her back upon him, show his diamond rings. As she took his arm to promenade she caught the old gen-tleman's look, surprised, hurt and ag-tleman's look, surprised, hurt and aggrieved. But no expressiou of regret came over her countenance. Her head was carried as easily as before, and her glance as bright. It was enough for me. I never forgot Flora Goodman's rudeness to that old man. To say the least, there's is nothing more ungraceful in a young lady than any lack of respect or attention to

The jig was up for that night; We smoked another cigar, Tom and I,

THE YOUNG MAN'S LEISURE.

Young Man ! after the duties of the day are over, how do you spend your evenings? When business is dull, and leaves at your disposal many unoccupied hours, what disposition do you make of them ? I have known and now know, many young men, who, if they were devoted to any scientific, or literary, or professional pursuits, the time they spend in games of chance, and lounging in bed, might rise to any eminence .----You have all read of the sexton's son, who became a flue astronomer by spending a short time every evening in gazing at the stars after ringing the bell for nine o'clock. Sir William Philips, who at the age of forty-five had attained theorderof knighthood, and the office of High Sheriff of New England, and Governor of Massachusetts, learned to read and write after his eightteenth year of a ship carpenter in Boston. William Gifford, the great editor of the Quarterly, was an apprentice to a shoemaker, and spent his leisure hours in study. And because he had neither pen nor paper, slate nor pencil, he wrought out his problems on smooth leather with a blunt awl. David Rittenhouse, the American astronomer, when a plow-boy, was ob-served to have covered his plow and fences with figures and calculations .--James Ferguson, the great Scotch astronomer, learned to read by himself, and mastered the elements of astronomy while a shepherd's boy in the fields by night. And perhaps, it is not too much to say, that if the hours wasted in idle company, in vain conversation at the tavern, were only spent in the pursuit of useful knowledge, the dullest apprentice in any of our shops might become an intelligent member of society, and a fit person for most of civil

Self-dependent, minutes about the "getting up" of my he paid tuition and other college expenses at minutes about the "getting up" of my linen. I had got my moustache trimmed, and got a new pair of patent leathers. I really looked well that night. Though I entered early upon a good practice in his pro-believe there is no connection save the al- fession. Besides, he is a man of fine personal teration between sensibility and scrubbing appearance, winning manners, a clear ringing brushes, even the house maid gazed at me with a sort of pathetic admiration, as I came down stairs. I never saw Flora more enchanting, and I glanced round Mr. Radical Abolitionists of the State of New York, Goodman's richly furnished drawing rooms, thinking it would be quite comfortable to walk in and hang up my hat there. 1 handed Miss Flora into the carriage as in style that night. Flora's smile and bend were faultless, and I can make a pretty good bow. The evening passed-Flora's behavior to myself and others, hit the lady like thing to a nicety. Her courtesies were shown so gracefully and so generally as to exhibit no marked preference, and yet there was an air, a slight manner, visible only to myself, in the extreme. Supper came. Terrapins and champagne make one feel very complacent ; but I was not quite so much exalted as not to notice everything Flora did. She was standing near an old gentleman, over seventy, I should think, with a kind, benevolent face. He seemed attracted by her beauty, and was talking to her with a pleased expression of interest, that made one love as well as reverence the silver hairs upon his temoffices. By such a course the rough covering of many a youth is laid aside; and their ideas, instead of being confined to local subjects and technicalities, might range the wild fields of creation; and other stars from among the young men of this city might be added to the list of worthies that are guilding our country with bright
