The Candidate of the Democratic Party for the Vice Presidency, the Hon. John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, is eminently worthy of the universal joy which greeted his nomination. Mr. Breckinridge which greeted his nomination. Mr. Brockinridge was thirty-five years of age on the 21st of January last, and is now the Candidate for the second office in the gift of the American people. It would be difficult to find a man in whom public and private usefulness so rarely commingle. Notwithstanding the early age at which he will be called to occupy high position, he possesses, in a singular degree, that firmness of character, that directness and purity of purpose, which, whenever exhibited, are always sure to be honored by the most agacious people in the world. Mr. Breckirvidge has served in the Legislature of his State, and was four years a distinguish-d world. Mr. Breckinriuge has served in the Legislature of his State, and was four years a distinguished and eloquent member of the popular branch of Congress. His speeches in the latter body placed him in the front rank of American Statesmen, and won for him a permanent place in the affections of his political friends. He was selected by President Pierce as the American Minister at the Spanish Court; which high-position he was compelled to decline. Previous to entering upon his Congressional career, he volunteered for the Mexican war, and during a long and trying Campaign, he secured the respect and confidence of his fellow soldiers. He has never sought public favor. The people have always called him forth; and it is because he has withheld himself from exciting contests for popular preferment, that the distinctions he wears so gracefully have been so freety bestowed. In this respect he himself from excuing contests for popular prefer-ment, that the distinctions he wears so gracefully have been so freely bestowed. In this respect he resembles Mr. Buchanan, whose nomination was the result of no efforts of his own, but the offspring of that popular opinion which commanded the respect of the Convention because it was based upon a motive, which antilled it to the highest consideration. The a candidate for the Vice Presidency, his fidelity to the choice of his own State, and his determination to throw no obstacles in the way of that choice, excited in his behalf, a sentiment of admiration which could not be restrained until it found vent in the expresition which made him the Democratic nominee for that distinguished position tion which made him the Democratic nominee for that distinguished position.

It is in vain to describe the spectacle which transpired when Mr. Buchanan's name was finally agreed upon. The rivalry to second, the enthusiasm to support, the eagerness to endorse, the significant unity of sentiment and of action which characterized that interesting period of the Convention, cannot be described. Scaredly had this event been announced to an expectant people, before the discordant branchdescribed. Scatterly had this event been announced to an expectant people, before the discordant branches of the Democracy of New York were brought together and for the first time in many years started forward upon their way once more united as a band of brothers. Itwasamid such auguries and under such circumstances that James Buchanan became the nominee of the Democracy for the Presidency.

Before the struggle for the nominations came on, the platform of principles was adonted. It is conthe platform of principles was adopted. It is con-structed upon an enduring basis; it is founded deep in undying faith and fidelity to the Constitution; it renews, in language of fervent patriotism, our devo-tion to the Union of the States; it re-asserts our gratitude to the sages of the past; it enunciates our duties with respect to coming events and points out the dazzling destiny in reserve for us on the North American Continent. The unanimous assertion of these doctrines, in advance of the nomi nation, was an assurance to the country that with the Democracy principles are always paramount, an expediency and policy entirely secondary and substitute of the control of th

And now, citizens of Pennsylvania, we have placed before you our principles and our candidates. Freely as the Convention has spoken the candidates them selves have responded: fur. Buchanan by the record of his life and the recent declarations of his opinor his life and the recent declarations of his opinions; Mr. Breckinridge by his manly and beautiful address upon the floor of the Convention. Nothing is left to inference. Intolerance is rebuked; proscription proscribed; abolitionism denounced; the rights of the States and as not innerence. Intolerance is rebuiked; pro-scription proscribed; abolitionism denounced; the rights of the States re-affirmed; the principle of the Nebraska bill endorsed. There is a completeness in the dignity and in the emphasis with which all this has been done, which show that it has been the work of men who felt that they were dealing with an in-telligent people, and acting as the truetees of an ex-ant and iselous, but at the same time configure and act and jealous, but at the same time confiding and conscientious Democracy:
The adversaries of the Democratic party have dissolved the American Union in advance, so far as by their own action they can consummate that direful result. They can no longer assemble in Natio

al Convention; they congregate as the representatives of a fragment of one half of our happy country, and they arrogate to themselves the mastery of the other half by attempting to consolidate a ferce and fanat-ical sectional majority in every department of the gov-ernment. They declare that the country is on the eve half by attempting to consolidate a ferce and fanatical sectional majority in every department of the government. They declare that the country is on the eve of unprecedented convulsions, and they proclaim their purpose to arrest these convulsions by ignoring and insulting fifteen sovereign States of the Union. They talk of peace, and in their Conventions proclaim a policy which must end in civil war. They appeal th Heaven to sanctify a movement, which, if successful, would destroy the fairest fabric of freedom on the globe. They invite our countrymen to support their cause in the midst of the most irreverent blasphemies of the Constitution. They prate of exclusive Americanism, while they accept as leaders, men who profane the sages of the past with inconceivable calumnies. But they deserve credit for their boldness. They do not attempt to conceal the fearful end which, should they succeed, must crown their efforts. Prue to the history of all sectional parties, they would unite men not by a love of country but by a hatred of national principles. Their bond of action is a sympathy of antagonisms, not a harmony of patriotic sentiments; and to consummate their purposes they would zacrifice every great material interest of society. They have already succeeded in dividing the Christian Church, and now they would lay their hands upon the bulwarks of our liberties; they would wrest the Constitution from the glorious purpose to which it was dedicated by its founders; and they would erect at Washington a sectional despotism whose presiding divinities would be hostility to the equality of the States and the equality of the citizghs, and relentless war upon the domestic institutions of the South.

The Democratic party, on the other hand, represents our whole country. Standing upon the firm foundations of the Constitution, its doctrines are the same on the shores of the Pacific and the banks of the States and the equality of the citizghs, and relentless war upon the domestic institute for of the government of the constitut

Hark! do you hear that horrid oath! It comes from the mouth of that little boy in the street. He began by saying by-words, but he has got a going and can't stop. Fifty young men were some years ago in the habit of meeting together in a room at a public house to enjoy themselves in social hilarity, where the wine cup passed freely around. One of them, as he was going there one evening, began to think there might be danger in the way. He stopped and considered a moment, and then said to himself, "Right about face!" He turned on his heel, went back to his room, and was never seen at the public house again. He has become rich, and the first block of buildings which he erected was built directly in front of the place where he stood when he made that exclamation. Six of the young men followed his example. The remaining forty-three got a going and couldn't stop till they landed in the ditch, and most of them in a drunkard's grave.

Beware, then, boys, how you get a go-Be sure before you start that you are in the right way, for when you are sliding down hill it is hard to stop.

GENERAL JACKSON.

The Western Christian Advocate records the following interesting anecdote of Jackson. The scene of it was in the Tennesse Annual Conference held at Nashville, and to which he had been invited by the brethren, that they might have the pleasure of introducing him: "The committee was appointed, and the General fixed the time for nine o'clock on Monday morning. The Conference room being to small to accommodate the hundreds who wished to witness the introduction, one of the churches was substituted, and an hour before time filled to overflowing. Front seats were reserved for members of the Conference, which was called to order by the Bishop, seated in a large chair in the front of the altar, just before ord the pulpit. After prayer, the committee entered conducting the man whom all delight to honor. They led him to the bishop's chair, which was made vacant for him the Bishop meanwhile occupied another place within the altar. The Secretary was directed to call the names of the members of the Conference, which he did in alphabetical order, each coming forward and betical order, each coming forward and betical order, each coming forward and seeds of the best of the best of the set for the conference, which he did in alphabetical order, each coming forward and betical order, each coming forward and betical order, each coming forward and betical order. merations.

ADDRESS OF THE DEMOCRATIO STATE CENTRAL COMMITTEE.

The Democratic State Central Committee of Penn. sylvania performs a pleasing duty in directing the attention of the people to the nominations made by the National Convention, on the 6th of June, 1856. The incidents which preceded, accompanied and followed that decision of the representatives of the National Democracy, have inspired the felicitations of particular in the profice of the people, faithfully represented at Cincinnati, gratefully responds to the action of the Convention. The result had scarcely been announced before it was welcomed in every State of the confederacy, and the rejoicings of the people confirmed the earnest, all pervading and deop seated sentiment in favor of our distinguished statezman. Since the earnest, all pervading and deop seated sentiment in favor of our distinguished statezman. Since the eight and the rejoicings of the people confirmed the earnest, all pervading and deop seated sentiment in favor of our distinguished statezman. Since the experiment of the Control of t embarrassed, said, "I was with you through the Creek Campaign-one of your body guard at the battle of Horse Shoe-and fought under your command at New Orleans." The General arose slowly from his seat, and throwing his long, withered, bony arm around the preacher's neck, exclaimed, "We'll soon meet where there is no war—where the smoke of the battle never rolls up its sulphurous incense."

Never before nor since, have I seen so many tears shed as then flowed forth from that vast assemblage. Every eye was moist with weeping. Eleven years have passed away since that day. The old hero has been more than ten in his silent, narrow home. The voice that cheered the drooping fight, and thundered in the rear of routed armies is silent forever. The old preacher, too, has fought his last battle, laid his armor by, and gone home to the late of the l no war-where the smoke of the battle

BY MRS. MARY A. DENNISON. We never yet saw a genuinely bashful man who was not the soul of honor. Though such may blush and stammer, and shrug their shoulders awkwardly, unable to throw forth with ease the thoughts that they would express, yet commend them to us for friends.

There are fine touches in their characters that time will mellow and bring out; perceptions as delicate as the faintest tint is to the unfolded rose; and their thoughts are none the less refined and beautiful that the do not flow with the impetuosity of the shallow streamlet.

We are astonished that such men are not appreciated; that ladies with really good hearts and cultivated intellects, will reward the gallant Sir Mustachio Brainless with smiles and attention, because he can fold a shawl gracefully, and bandy compliments with parisian clegance, while they will not condescend to look upon the worthier man who feels for them a reverence so great that his every mute glance is wor-

The man who is bashful in the presence of ladies, is their defender when the loose tongue of the slanderer would defame them; it is not he who boasts of conquests, or dares to talk glibly of failings that exist

he is in raptures; for a word he would professedly lay down his life. Yet it is he who fills our vile city dens with wrecks of holy name of mother, desolates the shrine where domestic handiness is through ruins where domestic handiness is through ruins where domestic happiness is throned, ruins the heart that trusts in him, pollutes the very air he breathes, and all under the mask of a polished gentleman.

Ladies, a word in your ear : have you lovers, and would you possess a worthy. husband? Choose him whose delicacy of deportment, whose sense of your worth leads him to stand aloof, while others crowd around vou. If he blushes, stammers even at your approach, consider them as so many signs of his exalted opinion of your sex. If he is retiring and modest, let not a thousand fortunes weigh him down in the balance, for depend upon it, with him your life will be happier with poverty, than with many another surrounded by the splendor of palaces.

the 8th. Continued fighting, and the excitement increasing. About forty men had been killed. Col. Sumner, with six companies of Inited States soldiers, was out trying to disperse and disarm both parties. An unsuccessful attempt had been made to rescue Robinson.
