SECT. 17. On the return day of the said writ of scire facias, it shall be the duty of the said court to render judgment against the stockholders named in said writ, for the several amounts for which they are respectively liable, if no sufficient cause shall be shown to the contrary, and to award writs of execution as in other cases.

SECT. 18. If the amount assessed on the shares of any stockholder, under the provisions of the last section, shall not be collected from such stockholder by reason of his insolvency or his absence from this State, the sum remaining due on such assessment shall be recoverable against the person from whom the delinquent stockholder, at any time within one year previous to the assign ment of the said bank, shall have received a transfer of the shares, or any portion of the shares then held by him; and any person party by an alias writ of scire facias, shall be liable in the same manner and for the same proportion that he would have been liable had he continued to hold the shares so transferred: Provided, That any person having made an assignment or transfer of his or her stock in said bank, may discharge himself or herself from liability under the provisions of this section, by showing that the transactions or loans which caused the insolvency of said bank, were made after such assignment or transfer, or such part thereof as he or she may show accrued after such transfer or assignment. Sect. 19. Every individual who owned stock in his own name, or in the name of any other person or persons, at the time of such assignment, shall be deemed liable for his or her proportions, under the provisions of this act; but it shall be lawful for any stockholder of the said bank either before or after process shall have issued, to pay his or her proportionable share of liability to the assignees, and receive a full discharge from them; and the process shall be proceeded in only against the other stockholders that are

----- REVOLUTIONARY MEN AND RE-MINISCENCES.

A correspondent of the Petersburg Express, writing from "near Leetown, Jefferson county, Virginia," sends that paper an interesting letter about Revolutionary men and reminiscences, from which we make the following extract:

In the immediate vicinity of the spot from which I address you these lines, are the dilapidated and antique residences of three distinguished Major Generals of the American Revolution. Within a radius of one mile and a half lived, long and weary years, Chas. Lee, the sinister hero of Monmouth; Horatio Gates, the loser of campaign; and Adam Stephen, the early friend of Washington. In this little vilremainder of their lives in inglorious repose, the swords in moth eaten scabbards no more of them died, and soon even these lingering memorials of them will crumble and

WOMAN AND MARRIAGE.

I have speculated a great deal upon matrimony. I have seen a young and beautiful woman, the pride of gay circles, married, as the world says, well. Some the battle of Camden and the Southern have moved into costly houses, and their friends have all come and looked at their furniture and their splendid arrangements lage—on whose golden forests I am gazing—under the shadows of the great woods and committed them to their sunny hopes here—remote from camps and the flashing | cheerfully and without fear. It is natural world, these three warriors rusted out the to be sanguine for them; as the young are sometimes carried away by similar feelings. I love to get, unobserved, into a corner, to be drawn. Here, if I mistake not, two and watch the bride in her white attire, and with her smiling face and her soft eyes green sod of the church yard. I think how they will sit upon the luxurious sofa as the little assemblage of houses called by his twilight falls, and build gay hopes, and name, and is an oblong building of stone, murmur in low tones the now not forbidden tenderness; and how thrillingly the allowed low, with a rude porch, depending, as it kiss and beautiful endearments of wedded were, above the rough door, and with a life will make even their parting joyous, few out-houses. Gates lived somewhat and how gladly come back from the crowdfurther from the town, in a plain, undecor- ed and the empty mirth of the gay to each ated building; and Stephen occupied a other's quiet company.
