St. Louis, Dec. 1, 1856.
The week has been wet and cold, and considerable wind prevalled. The rivers have risen a trifle, and receipts produce have been large, particularly in the article of heat. The market generally is dull, and business shows strong symptoms of a speedy winding up for the season.— Winter preparations are being made, and every department of trade presents a gloomy and dull aspect. Reports from the upper country state that ice has made its appearance in such abundance that navigation has been interrupted, and in a few weeks trade and travel by water will be cut off between this point and Minnesota and thereabouts.

The health of our city continues good, and less complaint of sickness is experienced on every hand. Locally, nothing of interest has transpired. The remains of the young man who was buried under the walls at the fire of the "City Buildings," has not yet been found. Those merchants who were "burnt out" have nearly all found temporary who were "burnt out" have nearly all found temporary this city, to Lizzie A. Moss, of Buffalo, New York.
