THE DYING CHILD.

BY R. D. PITCHER. Smooth down the pillow gently, dearest wife, And look your last upon his changing brow; The grasp of Death is on his little life; Our boy is ours but for a moment now. So young, so fair, 'tis hard that he must go Down to the silent tomb and be alone,

And we who watched his budding beauty grow, Must mourn for all his infant graces gone. 'Tis past, the seal is set no time can break : The eyelids close-now cross his little hands, The farewell kiss imprint upon his cheek : Our child has gone to join the angel bands.

As beautiful as brief his sojourn here, Like some fruil flower, blooming but to fade : Oh.! may it blossom in a brighter sphere, And angels guide him in bright robes arrayed. Where blessed spirits are in peace conveyed

To that pure clime where sorrow is unknown-There may we meet with his departed shade, When our short pilgrimage on earth is done, And all the broken ties be mingled into one.

TAKING HIM AT HIS WORD.

A LESSON FOR LOVERS.

We heard a rich story, a day or two since, (says the Detroit Advertiser,) told by the victim himself, which we think too good to keep, and we therefore take the liberty of laying it before our readers .-We give it as near as may be, in our friend's words:

" Speaking of this breach of promise said Smith, after some conversation had been carried on by the company, in regard to the Carne affairs - " speaking of this breach of promise case, reminds me that I have a little experience in that matter. myself. - I don't mean to say that I was ever situated as this fellow is, but I have felt about as I think he would, and if you would like to hear it, I will tell you

All having signified a wish to hear, he proceeded:

"Well. as near as I can remember, it was fifteen years ago this winter, that I attended a dancing school in Detroit, with a young lady then residing in the city. I had made up my mind some years before, that I never would get married; but it was such pleasant business I couldn't find it in my heart to let the girls alone altogether, so I paid her tuition fee and attended the class in her company every night .--About the middle of the term, several of the young people, ourselves included, were talking in the ball-room on the subject of matrimony, and I, of course, became interested, as well as the others. On going home that evening I told my companion that I had determined to get a arried in the spring and asked her advice in regard to making a selection for a wife. She made no reply for a moment, and I told her if she didn't know any body better fitted for me, I would like to have her think the matter over, and tell me by the last school, what she thought of marrying me herself. I was joking all this time you must understand, and had no more thought of marrying her than I had of marrying Queen She promised to think of it, however, and I returned to my boarding-house, and gave the subject no farther thought, until some weeks later-and as luck would have it, on the last evening of school, the subject was again brought up in conversation, just as we were preparing to return to our homes for the night. After leaving the hall, we talked and chatted of different matters and on different subjects, till we reached her residence. It was late, and I did not enter the house, though she strongly urged me to do so. I had bid her good night, and was turning away, when I recollected the promise she had made me, and I sąid:

"Helen, you promised to let me know. to-night, whether you would marry me this spring. Have you made up your

"Yes," said she, "I have been thinking about it, but I guess I am too young. If it wasn't for that I would have no objection."

"Well, good night, then," said I. "I didn't expect you would do it-but I am bound to marry some one, and this spring

Before leaving her I engaged to call again the following evening. That night I slept soundly, and the next morning had forgotten all about the night's adventures. During the day I received an invitation to attend a ball to be held that evening, a few miles out of the city, and I made my arrangements accordingly. Towards dusk I remembered my agreement to see Helen, and I thought I would run over for a moment, and afterwards have time to attend

Arrived at the house, I met the lady in the doorway, and I thought for an instant that she was "rigged up" in an extra style, which I was at a loss to account for, though I believe I concluded she had company; I was therefore in hopes that I should not be detained long. Helen welcomed me into the parlor with a sweet smile, and took her place beside me on the sofa. I was expecting every moment to see some stranger enter the room, and I had not yet made up my mind that we were alone when she said-"Henry I have made up my mind to have you!"

Had a thunder-clap struck me I could not have been more surprised, and after an instant of hesitation stammered out-

"What did you say ?" "I have concluded to marry you." "O-oh, you have! Well, I suppose it is all right—when shall the event take

"I thought, if it would suit you, that you might drive round next Sunday, and we will go to mother's, at Dearboard, and be married there." "Well," said I, "I'll see if I can," and as soon as possible I took my leave. "I did'nt go to the ball that night; I forgot about it, and sat over the stove till fingers over the keys; then, seized by morning, thinking of what a scrape I got sudden inspiration, he improvised one of myself into. I even forgot to keep the fire going, and almost froze in my seat. When himself. daylight began to peep in at the windows, other way but to submit to my fate.

"Helen," I commenced, "I"-"Well, what?"

"I-, I-we must be married to-day, or I-I do not think I shall get married at It stuck in my throat as I said it, for I knew I was telling a whapper—but imagine my surprise when she replied:

"Well, just as you please, Henry. You may drive your carriage around about 12 o'clock and I will be ready." I gave up! Precisely at 12 I drew up

The Musician's Marriage. After having passed the summer in visiting the principal towns of Germany, the celebrated pianist, Listz, arrived at Prague n October, 1846. The day after he came, his apartment was entered by a stranger -- an old man, whose appearance indicated misery and The great musician received suffering. him with a cordiality which he would not, perhaps, have shown to a nobleman. Encouraged by his kindness, his visitor said : "I come to you, sir, as a brother. Excuse me if I take this title, notwithstanding the distance that divides us; but formerly I | three million francs ?22 could boast some skill in playing on the piano, and by giving instruction I gained a comfortable livelihood. Now I am old, feeble, burdened with a large family, and destitute of pupils. I live at Nuremburg, but I came to Prague to seek to recover the remnant of a small property which belonged to my ancestors. Although nominally successful, the expense of a long litigation has more than swallowed up the trifling sum I recovered. To-morrow I set of the great and good pianist, Listz. out for home—penniless.

"And you have come to me? You have done well, and I thank you for this proof of your esteem. To assist a brother professor is to me more than a duty-it is a pleasure. 'Artists should have their purse in common; and if fortune neglects some in order to treat others better than they deserve, it only makes it more necessary to preserve the equilibrium by fraternal kindness. That's my system; so don't speak of gratitude, for I feel that I only discharge a debt."

As he uttered these generous words, and started when he saw that his usual lepository for his money contained but three ducats. He summoned his servant.

"Where is the money?" he asked. "There, sir," replied the man, pointing to the open drawer. "There! Why there's scarcely any-member, I told you yesterday that the cash was nearly exhausted." "You see, my dear brother," said Listz. smiling, "that for the moment I am no richer than you; but that does not trouble me; I have credit, and I can make money start from the keys of my piano. However, as you are in haste to leave Prague and return home, you shall not be delayed by my present want of funds." So saying, he opened another drawer, and taking out a splendid medallion, gave it to the old man. "There," said he. "that will do." It was a present made me by the Emperor of Austria-his own portrait set in diamonds. The painting is nothing remarkable, but the stones are fine. Take them and dispose of them, and what ever they bring shall be yours." The old musician tried in vain to decline so rich a gift. Listz would not hear of a refusal, and the poor man at length withdrew, invoking the choicest blessings of Heaven on his generous benefactor. He then repaired to the shop of the principal jeweler in the city, in order to sell the diamonds. Seeing a miserably-dressed man anxious to dispose of magnificent jewels, with whose value he appeared unacquainted, the master of the shop very naturally suspected his honesty; and while appearing to examine the diamonds with close attention, he whispered a few words in the ear of one of his assistants. The latter went out and speedily returned, accompanied by several soldiers of police, who arrested the unhappy artist, in spite of his protestations of innocence.

"You must first come to prison," they said; "afterwards you can give an explanation to the magistrate."

The prisoner wrote a few lines to his benefactor, imploring his assistance. Listz hastened to the jeweler. "Sir," said he, "you have caused the arrest of an innocent man. Come with me immediately, and let us have him released. He is the lawful owner of the jewels in question, for I gave them to

"But, sir," asked the merchant, "who are you?"

"My name is Listz," "I don't know any rich men of that name." "That may be; yet I am tolerably well known." " Are you aware, sir, that these diamonds are worth six thousand florins?"

"My actual fortune consists of three ducats." "Then you are a magician?"

"By no means; and yet, by just moving my fingers, I can obtain as much money as I wish.'

"You must be a magician!" "If you choose, I'll disclose to you the magic I employ." Listz had seen a piano in the parlor behind the shop. He opened it, and ran his

LANCASTER CITY, PA., TUESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 1, 1857.

"Dost thou know him, then, my daughher house, I heard her singing a lively ter?" asked the jeweler. "This is the first I have had the pleasfor deceiving the poor girl as I had; but I ure of seeing or hearing him," replied she, summoned up courage to ring the bell, and "but I know that none living, save Listz;

She soon came to the door, and young person of remarkable beauty, this I was again shown into the parlor, and she admiration could not fail to be more than took her place beside me on the sofa, as flattering to the artist. However, after flattering to the artist. However, after making his best acknowledgements, Listz all kinds of writing, such as preparing Deeds, Mortgages, wills, Stating Accounts, &c., promptly attended to. withdrew, in order to deliver the prisoner, and was accompanied by the jeweler.

Grieved at his mistake, the worthy merchant sought to repair it by inviting the two musicians to supper. The honors of the table were done by his amiable daughter, who appeared no less touched at the generosity of Listz than astonished at his talent.

That night the musicians of the city serenaded their illastrious brother. The next day the nobles and most distinguished inhabitants of Prague presented themselves at his door. They entreated him to give some concerts, leaving it to himself to fix any sum he pleased as a remuneration. Then the jeweler perceived that talent, even in a pecuniary light, may be more valuable than the most precious diamonds. Listz continued to go to his house, and, to the merchant's great joy, he perceived that his daughter was the cause of these visits. He began to love the company of the musician, and the fair girl, his only child, certainly did not hate it.

One morning the jeweler, coming to the point with German frankness, to said Listz: "How do you like my daughter?"

"She is an angel!" "What do you think of marriage?" "I think so well of it that I have the greatest posible inclination to try it." "What would you say to a fortune of

For the Intelligencer. WOMAN.

BY CHARLES F. EVANS. Woman is like the rose which buds and blooms on the parterre of life. In the cradle, when a sweet bud, the fragrance of affection fills the atmosphere around and about her. When the prattle of infancy is heard from her lips, and her smiles irradiate the eyes of paternal affection, the fragrance increases. As the bud developes its beauties to the eye, and the knit limbs allow her to fly about the domestic circle. Listz opened a drawer in his writing-case, the joy of her parents is ecstatic. Then follows the development of heart-linking nal affection. Mind quickly developes its native energies, and the heavenly spark which animates the mortal frame now adds new charms to the cherished object of affection. The tide of life flows on, and in its spring, new beauties cluster around the loved one, and in a few summers more she is seen at the altar, pledging her affection to one whose manly worth has won her pure and guileless heart. The early hearth is left but not forsaken, for maternal love has matured her affection, not simply for the poor returns which an earthly bower yields for anxious care. Her heart is imbued with nature, which refuses to live without that pure atmosphere which so far has warmed her being, and caused her latent beauties to expand and attract the admiration of the manly youth, who claims her for his bride. Her wealth is a guileless and confiding heart, and the gentle current, along whose unruffled banks she has hitherto culled the sweetest flowers, glides still by her feet without a murmur. Her happiness is complete, for religious faith illumes the present and gilds the future, while memory reviews the past without a pang from duties neglected or affections not acknowledged. Youth and beauty attend her steps-all her days are leasant, while peaceful contentment makes her heart exult, as Hope in the vista beckons her on to joys in scenes vet to be realized. But such happiness, like all things which partake of death, is subject to the stroke of death. The destroyer of man's happiness respects not the young, the beautiful, nor the gifted. Too often in this world they seem, like the flowers of Nature, which delight the eye, to be subject to the scythe of the Destroyer. If the admiring eyes of Nature's sweetest flowers could shield from harm the fullblown rose, its leaves would never wither, its fragrance never die. If friends could detain the blooming matron in a sphere where her virtues bloom but to perish, many would live to have their old age irradiated by the lustre of well-spent years. But death must come. Beauty, it is true, belongs to youth, but not to youth alone. The matron who is the cynosure of the happy circle, the charm which lures to domestic happiness the husband and the father, has beauty too. Her heart is the centre of human affection-her smile the reward of human hope.

HATS, CAPS AND STRAW GOODS.

We are always prepared to supply the public with all the different Styles of Hats. of the best qualities and at such prices as to defy competition.

CAPS AND STRAW HATS.

Our assortment of Caps and Straw Hats is the largest, best and most fashionable in the city.

We are also manufacturing the PATENT FLEXIBLE SILK HAT, which for heauty of finish, cannot be surpassed. The improvement consists of a combination of principle to reader the Silk Hat Band, after a slight wear, as soft and pleasant to the head as a soft Hat. The "Fixible Band" conbines the softness of the Felt Hat, with the beauty and dressy appearance of the Silk Hat and firm its yielding nature, readily conforms to the shape of the head, thus avoiding in a very great measure, the trouble and inconvenience of conforming and shaping, as the principle of the conformator is embodied in the improvement.

All Hats sold at this establishment are made under our own supervision, and we warrant them to be what they are sold for. We respectfully invite the public to gire us a call, as we keep the largest and most complete assortment of all articles in our line in the city of Lancaster.

By Country FUES bought, and the highest cash prices and the conformator for the prices in our line in the city of Lancaster.
