NO 38.

I dreamed of home, my childhood's home, And joyous was the scene. That came to me at midnight hour, Decked out in beauty's sheen : I thought I sat beside the door, Beneath the creeping vine, While thro' the oak trees' waving boughs I gazed on Brandywine.

My mother's form I thought was near, With love-light in her eye, And soft and sweet the words she spoke As zephyrs floating by. My sisters, too, were by my side, With voices rich with glee;

Again, in gay and happy mood, We sported o'er the lea. Once more the laugh rang high and clear, And old friends joined the play; We sang and danced in Downing's grove,

Till evening closed the day. Thus, one by one, in pleasant dream The scenes of youth passed by : And as they vanished from my sight, They e'er would cause a sigh ;-

A sigh for joys that ne'er will come. To cheer with pleasure's rays; A sigh, that naught but dream can bring Back childhood's happy days. Each spot where oft' in youth I've roamed Each wood-land height and dell ; Each streamlet there the sun rays kiss, Can all my past joys tell.

When sorrow comes with gloom and fear, And dims life's joyous rays, The heart grows gay when dream brings near, The "light of other days." Though brighter lands may meet the eye.

Thro' gayer scenes we roam, There's none so dear, there's none so fair. As childhood's happy home. HATVILLE, Lan co., Pa. Sept. 11 she test that she could have best forward to plack the gemilke thing from the bosom of the leaf in which it seemed to grow, and which irradiated with its bright, white gleam; but over, as she stretched forth her hand, and bent forward, she heard a rush of wings and a shrill scream from the tree above her—such a scream as the mocking bird makes, when angrify it raises its dusky ohest and flaps its wings furiously against its slender sides. Such a scream seemed like a warning, and though yet unawakened to a full consciousness, it startled and forbade her effort.

"More than once in her survey of this strange object had she heard that shrill note of warning, and to her mind the same vague consciousness of an evil presence. But the star-like eye was still upon her own—a small, bright eye, quick like that of a bird, now steady in its place, an observant seemingly of hers; now darting forward with all the clustering leaves about it, and shooting up toward her, as if woolng her to seize. At another moment riveted to the vine which lay around it, it would whirl round and round, dazzling bright and beautiful, even as a torch, waving hurriedly by night in the hands of some playful boy; but in all this time the glance was never taken from her own—there it grow, fixed—a very principle of light—and such a bright, a subtle, burning, pieroing, fascinating gleam, such as gathers in vapors above the old graves and binds us as we look—shooting, darting directly into her eye, dazzling her gaze, defeating its sonse of perception. She felt dizzy; for as she looked, a cloud of colors, bright, gay, various colors, floated and hung like so much drapery around the single object that had so secured her attention, and spell-bound her feet. Her limbs felt momently more and more insecure; her blood grew cold, and she seemed to feel the gradual freeze of voin by voin, throughest her around the first knock at the door, when it he middle of the night to rock the eradle, or asswer taken from her order to the first hand in the first knock at th con, out only to wind almself up again into his muscular rings, his great flat head rising in the midst, and slowly nodding as it were, towards her, the eye still peering into her own, the rattle slightly ringing at intervals, and giving forth that parolyzing sound which, once heard, is remembered forever. The reptile all this while being conscious if, and to sport with, while seeking to excite her terrors. Now with its flat head, distended mouth, and curving neck, would it dart forth its long form to warn herist fatal teeth, unfolding on either side of its upper jaws, seeming to threaten her with instantaneous death, while its powerful eye shot forth glances of that fatal fassination, malignantly bright, which, by paralyzing with a moved form of terror and of beauty, may readily account for the spell which it possesses of binding the feet of the timid, and denying even to fear the privilege of flight. Could she have fled? She felt the necessity, but the power of her limbs was gone; and there it still lay, coiling and uncoiling, its arched neck glittering like a ring of bronzed copper, bright and lurid, and the dreadful beauty of its eyes still fastened, eagerly contemplating the victim, while the pendulous rattle still rung the death note, as if to prepare the conscious mind for the fate which is momentarily approaching the blow. Meanwhile, the stillness became deathlike, with all surrounding objects. The bird had gone with its scream and rush. The brease was silent.—The vines ceased to wave. The leaves faintly quivered on their stoms. The serpent once more lay still, but the eye was never turned from its victim. Its corded muscles are all in a coil. They have but to nuclasp suddenly, and the dreadful folis will be upon her in full length, and the fatal teeth will strike, and the deadly venom which they secrete will mingle with the life blood in her veins.

"The terrified damsel, her full consciousness restored, but not her strenth, feels all her danger.—She sees that the sport of the terrible reptile is at

America:

Mr. George gives a thrilling account of the scenes after the steamer had gone down. The waves, as they rose and fell, revealed a crowd of human heads. Those unfortunates who had lost their life-preservers or planks while under water, owing to the force of the whirlpool, were frantically snatching at the broken pieces of the wreck, which, breaking from the ship as she continued to descend, leapt above the surface and fell with a heavy splash. The cries that arose, mingled into one inarticulate wail, and then the lustier and less terrified shouted for assistance to the bark Marine which was far beyond hailing distance. The waves dushed them one against another at first, but speedily they began to separate, and the last farewells were taken. One man called to another in our informant's hearing, "If you are saved, Frank, send my love to my dear wife," but the friend appealed to answered only with a gurgle in the throat. send my love to my dear wife," but the friend appealed to answered only with a gurgle in the throat. He was washed off his plank and perished as his companious spoke. Many were desirous of separating themselves as far as possible from the rest, being fearful lest some desperate struggle might seize hold of them and draw them under. Others, afraid of their loneliness, called to their neighbors to keep to gether. Generally, they strove to cheer each other as long as they remained within hearing, and when the roar of the waves drowned all but the loudest shouting, the call of friendship or the cry of despair was heard in the distance, and infused confidence or increased dismay in many a failing bosom.

A THRILLING SKETCH.

CEARMED BY A RATTLESNAKE.

BY W. GILMORE SIMMS.

A writer in the United States Magazine pronounces the following description of a young girl, charmed by a rattlesnake, one of the most remarkable and beautiful descriptions ever penned:

"Before the maiden rose a little clump of bushes green, with vines trailing over them thickly decked with blue and crimson flowers. Her eye communed young gland, ea subtle ray that shot out from the circle of green leaves, seeming to be their very eye, and sending out a fluid lustre that seemed to stream over the space between and find its way into her own eyes very piercing and beautiful was that subtle brightness of the sweetest, strongest power. And now the leaves quivered and seemed to float away only to return, and the vines waved and swung away in fantatic mazes, unfolding over charming varieties of form and color to her gaze; but the star-like eye was ever steadfast, bright and gorgeous, gleaming in their midst, and still fastened with strange fondness upon her own. How beautiful, with wondrous interesting it it gland and compandidate, and still fastened with strange fondness upon her own. How beautiful, with wondrous interesting it is gland and the research with the proprint of the research with the proprint of the proprint of the research with the proprint of the proprint of the research of the western was not unpleasantly cold, and it was uct until about 1 o'clock on the morning of Sunday, when they had been men't five the research of the man floating in solitude, and still fastened with strange fondness upon her own. Her blood grew cold, and she seemed to feel the gradual freeze of voin by vein, throughout her person. At that moment a rustling was heard in the branches of the tree beside her, and the bird, which had repeatedly uttered a single cry above her, as it were of warning, flow away from his station with a screen more piercing than ever. CAPS AND STRAW HATS.

Our assertment of Caps and Straw Hats is the largest, best and most fashionable in the city.

We are also manufacturing the LATENT FLEXIBLE SILK HAT, which to beauty of finish, cannot be surpassed. The improvement consists of a combination of principle to reader the Silk Hat Band, after a slight wear, as soft and pleasant to the head as a soft Hat. The "Flexible Band" combines the softness of the Filt Hat, with the beauty and dressy appearance of the Silk Hat, and from its yielding nature, readily conforms to the shape of the head, thus avoiding in a very great measure, the trouble and inconvenience of conforming and shaping, as the principle of the conformator is embodied in the improvement.

All Hats sold at this establishment are made under our own supervision, and we warrant them to be what they are sold for. We respectfully invite the public to give us a call, as we keep, the largest and most complete assortment of all articles in our line in the city of Lancaster.

AMBROTYPE, DAGUERREOTYPE, MELAINOTYPE & PHOTOGRAPH

NORTHERN SKY-LIGHT GALLERY,
East King Streat, nearly opposite Lancis Store,
Having a new and commodious Northerh Sky Light creeted for the purpose, possessing strength, brilliancy and softness which makes it unsurpassed by any light in the country. In arranging this gallery, I have paid particular attention in selecting good instruments of approved manufacture, and all the recent improvements pertaining to the Ambrotype and Daguerreotype.

AMBROTYPES.

This beautiful process, which of late has taken such a hold on the picture loving community, is practised in all its varied branches. These pictures are durable, susceptible of beautiful and Hfoelike coloring, can easily be seen in any light and when made by experienced operators, combine many beautiful offects. The Ambrotypes made at this Gallery are characterized by strength, depth of tone, brilliancy, positious artistic, natural coloring and beauty of finish, forming a gent possessing rare merit, and which defies all competition tagqual.

R. W. ADDIS. ATENT AMBROTYPES...-The subacribers having purchased the exclusive right of Lancaster city, are enabled to offer to the public a new style of Pictures, far exceeding, in beauty and durability, any ever hefore made. These pictures are not roversed, as dazuerretypes areand may be seen in anylight. They also possess the rare property of being inferinshable, being hermetically sealed between glass plates, which is secured by Letters Fatent, in the United States, Great Britain and France, and practised in Lancaster city by T. & W. CUMMINOS, only, over Sprecher & Bro.'s New Store, North Queen st., Lancaster.

EXPLANATION.

The term AMBROTYPE, by which these Pictures are designated; is derived from the Greek word Ambroton, signifying indestructibility, permanency, &c. The Picture is taken upon plate giass, to which another plate of corresponding size is secured with an indestructible cement, by by which the picture will retain its original brilliancy for ages; it will not corrode by acids, nor be injured by water or climate. It is bold in its effect, beautiful in tone, surpasses any thing in the gradations of light and shade, and may be seen in any light. The public are cantioned against imitations made on single plates of glazs, with the Slack variab in limediate contact with the Picture.

buch are not permanent, as the variaba must crack and destroy the Picture.
