THE DYING WIFE.

- Lay the gem upon my bosom.

 Let me teel her sweet, warm breath,
 For a strange chill o'er me passes,
 And I know that it is death.
 I would gaze upon the treasure—
 Scarcely given ere I go,
 Feel her rosy, dimpled fingers
 Wander o'er my cheek of snow.
- I am passing through the waters,
 But a blessed shore appears,
 Kneel beside me, husband, dearest!
 Let me kiss away thy tears;
 Wrestle with thy grief, my husband,
 Strive from midnight intil day,
 It may have an angel's blessing,
 When it vanishes away.
- Lay the gem upon my bosom,
 "Tis not long she can be there; See! how to my heart she nestles,
 'Tis the pear! I love to wear.
 If, in after years, beside thee
 Sits another in my chair, Though her voice be sweeter music, And her face tha mine more fair-
- If a cherub calls thee "father," Far more beautiful than this, Love thy first born; O. my husband Turn not from the motherless Tell her sometimes of her mother You will call her by my name? Shield her from the winds of sorrow
- If she err, oh ! gently blame Lead her sometimes where I'm sleeping I will unswer if she call: And my breath will stir her ringlets
 When my voice in blessing falls,
 And her soft black eyes will brighten
 With wonder whence it came;
 In my heart, when years pass o'er her,
 She will find her mother's name.
- It is said that every mortal
 Walks between two angels here;
 One records the ill, but blots it,
 If before the midnight drear
 Man repenteth; if uncancelled,
 Then he seals it for the skies,
 And the right hand angel weepeth,
 Bending low with veiled eyes.
- I will be her right hand angel,
 Sealing up the good for Heaven,
 Striving that the midnight watches
 Find no misdeeds unforgiven.
 You will not forget me, husband,
 When I'm sleeping 'neath the sod'!
 Oh, love the jewel given us,
 As I love thee—next to God!

THE OLD CARTMAN.

BY BLUNDERBUSS.

I have a mind to tell a little story .-That it is brief, may be seen at a glance that it is true, I most emphatically avow If the reader despise it because of the first or the editors of the Era reject it for the reason of the last, then will I eschew truth in the future, and devote myself to the elaboration of lies into chapters, and the purest fictions into volumes of seventeen hundred pages each.

once to remark, that five years ago, or thereabouts, John Ainsley-or 'Pap Ainsley,' as he was familiarly called-was the owner of a handcart, and earned a living by conveying miscellaneous parcels from one section of the city to another, and receiving therefor the reasonable remuneration of fifty cents per load. To designate approached. the occupation in the prosiest language possible, he was a hand-cartman, and when not employed, could always be found during working hours at the corner of Montgomery and California streets. His hair and long beard were quite gray and his limbs feeble; and if he could not shove as heavy a load through the deep sand or up the steep grade above him as the stalwart Teuton on the opposite corner, thereby losing many a job and many a dollar, all the light loads in the neighborhood fell to his lot, and kind-hearted men not un-Ainsley,

Four years ago last September, (I recollect the month, for I had a note of four thousand dollars to pay, and was compelled to do some pretty sharp financiering to meet it,) having two or three dozen volumes of books to transfer to my lodging, I once attempted to take her life, and gave 'Pap Ainsley' the task of transpor- perhaps left her husband a cripple,' he tation. Arriving at my room just as he groaned, as he hurried towards the door. had denosited the last armful on the table. and observing that the old man looked considerably fatigued after climbing three flights of stairs five or six times, I invited him to take a glass of brandy—a bottle of hall. which I usually kept in my room, for medicinal and soporific purposes. Although grateful for the invitation, he politely declined. I urged, but he was inflexible. I was astonished. 'Do you never drink ?' 'Very seldom,' he replied, dropping into a chair, at my request, and wiping the perspiration from his forehead. 'Well, if you drink at all,' I insisted, 'you will not find in the next twelve month as fair an excuse for indulging, for you appear fatigued and scarcely able to stand.' To be frank,' said the old man, 'I do not drink now. I have not tasted intoxicating liquor for fifteen years—since—-Since when?' I inquired, thoughtlessly, observing his hesitation.

The old man told me. Sixteen years ago he was a well-to-do farmer near Syracuse, New York. He had but one childa daughter. While attending a boarding school in that city, the girl, then but sixteen years of age, formed an attachment for a young physician. Acquainting her father with the circumstance, he flatly refused his consent to her union with a man he had never seen, and removing her from school, dispatched a note to the young gallant with the somewhat pointed information, that his presence in the neighborhood of the Ainsley farm would not meet with favor. The reader of course surmises the result, for such a proceeding could and can have but one result. In less than a month there was an elopement. The father loaded his double-barrelled shot-gun, and swore vengeance, but failing to find the fugitives, he took to the bottle. His good wife implored him not to give way to despair, but he drank the deeper, and accused her of encouraging the elonement. In three months the wife died, and at the expiration of a year, when the young couple returned Syracuse from Connecticut, where they had remained with the parents of the husband, they learned that the old man, after the death of his wife, of which they had of course been apprised, had sold his: farm, squandered the proceeds, and was almost destitute. Learning of their arrival, Ainsley drank himself into a frenzy, and proceeding to the hotel where they were Procrastination is the thief of in a descendant of the Puritans.

attempted the life of his daughter, who, happily, escaped uninjured through the interposition of persons brought to the spot by the report of the pistol. Ainsley was arrested, tried and acquitted on the plea of insanity. The daughter and her husband returned to Connecticut, since which time the father had not heard from them. He was sent to a lunatic asylum, from which he was dismissed after remaining six months. In 1851 he came to California. He had followed mining for two years, but finding his strength unequal to the pursuit, returned to this city, purchased a hand-eart, and _____the rest is known.__ 'Since then,' concluded the old man, bowing his face in his hands in agony, 'I have not tasted liquor, nor have I seen my poor child.' I regretted that I had been so inquisitive, and expressed to the sufferer the sympathy I really felt for him. After that, I seldom passed the corner without looking for 'Pap Ainsley,' and never saw him but to think of the sad story he had told

One chilly, drizzling day in the December following, a gentleman having, pur-chased a small marble-top table at an auction room opposite, proffered to the old man the job of conveying it to his residence on Stockton street. Not wishing to accompany the carrier, he had selected the face, probably, giving the best assurance of the careful delivery of the purchase. Furnished with the number of the house, the old cartman, after a pretty trying struggle with the steep ascent of California street, reached his destination, and deposited the table in the hall. Lingering left him. Their captives were then young a moment, the lady did not seem to surmise the reason, until he politely informed her that her husband (for such he took him to be) had probably by accident neglected to settle for the cartage. his shoulder, and as her hair fell over her 'Very well; I will pay you,' said the lady face, with one hand she brushed it aside, stepping into an adjoining room. She while the tears ran from her distended returned, and stating that she had no small coin in the house, handed the old man a twenty dollar piece. He could not make the change. Never mind-I will 'No, no!' replied the lady, glancing pitylimbs; 'I will not permit you to put yourself to so much trouble;' and she handed the coin to Bridget, with instructions to see if she could get it changed at one of the stores or markets in the neighborhood. Step into the parlor until the girl returns; the air is chilly, and you must be cold, continued the lady, kindly, Come, she added, as he looked at his rough attire and hesitated; there is a good fire in the grate, and no one there

'Come—I love little children,' and the child, who had been watching him with curiosity from behind the large arm-chair, hesitatingly

> What is your name, dear?' inquired the cartman.
> 'Maria,' lisped the little one.

'Maria?' he repeated, while the great tears gathered in his eyes; 'I once had little girl named Maria, and you look verv much as she did.'

'Did you?' inquired the child, with interest; and was her name Maria Eastman, too ?'

'Merciful God!' exclaimed the old man, starting from his chair, and again dropping into it with his head bowed upon frequently traveled a square or two out of his breast. 'This cannot be! and yet, their way to give an easy job to 'Pap why not?' He caught the child in his arms with an eagerness that frightened her, and gazing into her face until he found conviction there, suddenly rose to leave the house. I cannot meet her without betraying myself, and I dare not tell her I am that drunken father who

A father, mother and child start on a journey of a father, mother and child start on a journey of the mother two; but the father has a horse and buggy, and can travel eight miles an hour; and as they desire to make their journey's end in the shortest possible time, the father takes the child and carries it so far, that, going back and taking up the mother, they all make their journey's end together. THE LOST SISTER: OR THE VALLEY OF THE WYOMING.

few stragglers returned from the wilderness, and in the course of three or four months, other cabins were going up over the ashes of their former houses, and quite a little neighborhood was collected. But the Indians kept prowling around the mountains, now descending here and now there, killing this family, scalping that, or making it captive. At a little distance from the present Court House of Wilkesbarre, lived a family of the name of Slocum, upon whom the visitations of the Indians' cruelty were awfully severe. The men were one day away in the fields, and in an instant the house was surrounded by Indians. There were in it the mother, a daughter about nine years of age, a son aged thirteen, another five, and a little boy aged two and a half. A young man and a boy by the name of Kingsley, were present grinding a knife. The first thing the Indians did was to shoot down the young man, and to scalp him with the knife which he had in his hand. The nine yearold sister took the boy aged two and a half years and ran out of the door to get back to the fort. The Indians chased her just enough to see her fright, and to have a hearty laugh as she ran and clung to and lifted her chubby little brother. They then took the young Kingsley boy and young Slocum, aged thirteen, and little Frances, aged five, and prepared to depart. But finding young Slocum lame, at the entreaties of the mother they sat him down and Kingsley and the little girl. The mother's heart swelled unutterably, and for years could not describe the scene without tears. She saw an Indian throw her child over eyes, and stretching out her other hand toward her mother, she called for aid. The Indians turned into the bushes, and this was the last seen of little Frances. call to-morrow,' said he turning to go. This image was probably carried by the mother to the grave. About a month after ingly at his white locks and trembling this they came again, and with the most awful oruelties murdered the aged grandfather, and shot a ball into the leg of the lame boy. This was carried with him in his leg nearly sixty years, to the grave. The last child was born a few months after these tragedies. What were the conversations, what were the hopes concerning the fate of little Frances, I shall not attempt to describe. Probably the children saw that in all after life, the heart of the stricken mother was yearning for the little > one whose fate was uncertain, and whose face she could never see. As the boys grew up and became men, they were anxious to know the fate of their little fair-haired sister. They wrote letters, they sent inquiries, they made journeys through all the West and into the Canadas, if peradventure they might learn anything respecting her fate. Four long journeys had been made in vain. A silence deep as the deepest forest through which they had wandered hung over her fate, and that for sixty years.

My reader will now pass over fifty-eight vears from the time of this captivity, and suppose himself far in the wilderness, in the farthest part of the unsettled Indiana. A very respectable agent of the United States is travelling there, and weary and belated, with a tired horse, he stopped at an Indian wigwam for the night. He can speak the Indian language. The family are rich, for Indians have horses and skins in abundance. In the course of the evening he notices that the hair of the woman is light, and the skin under her dress is also white. She told him she was a white child, but had been carried away when a very small girl. She could only remember her name was Slocum, and that she lived in a little house on the bank of the Susquehanna, and how many there were in her father's family, and the order of their ages. But the name of the town she could not remember. On reaching his home the agent mentioned this story to his mother; she urged him to write and print the account. Accordingly he wrote and sent it to Lancaster, in this State, requesting that it might be published. By some, to me unaccountable, blunder, it lay in the office for two years before it was published. In a few days it fell into the hands of Mr. Slocum of Wilkesbarre, who was the little two and a half year old boy when Frances was taken. In a few days he was off to see his sister, taking with him his oldest sister,—the one who aided him to escape writing to a brother who now lives in Ohio and who, I believe, was born after the captivity, to meet him and go with him. The two brothers and sister are now on their way to see little Frances, just sixty years after her captivity. After traveling more than three hundred miles through an unbroken wilderness, they reach the Indian country; the home of the Miami Indian. Nine miles from the nearest white habitation, they find the little wigwam. 'I shall know my sister,' said the civilized sister, because she lost the nail of her first finger. You, brother, hammered it off in the blacksmith shop, when she was four years' old.'

They go into the cabin and find an Indian woman having the appearance of seventyfive. She is painted and jeweled off, and dressed like the Indians in all repects. Nothing but her hair and covered skin would indicate her origin. They get an interpreter and begin to converse. She tells them where she was born, her name, &c., with the order of her father's family ' How came your nail gone?' said the oldest sister. 'My older brother pounded it off when I was a child, in the shop!' In a word, they were satisfied that this was Frances, their long lost sister. They asked her what her Christian name was. She could not remember. Was it Frances? She smiled and said 'Yes.' It was the first time she had heard it pronounced for sixty years! Here then, they were mettwo brothers and two sisters. But what a contrast! The brothers were walking the cabin unable to speak; the oldest sister was weeping, but the poor Indian sat motionless and passionless as a spectator; there is no fine chords in her bosom to be touched. When Mr. Slocum was giving me this history, I said to him, 'but could she not speak?' 'Not a word!' 'Did she know her age ?' 'No-had no idea of it.' 'But her age?' 'No—had no idea of it. Dut was she entirely ignorant?' 'Sir, she didn't know when Sunday comes!' This was, indeed, a consummation of ignorance in a descendant of the Puritans.

What a nicture-for a painter would the inside of that cabin have afforded? Here were the children of civilization, respectable, temperate, intelligent and wealthy, able to overcome mountains to recover their sister. There was the child of the forest not able to tell the day of the week, whose views and feelings were all confined to her cabin. Her whole history might be told in a word. She lived with the Dela-After the battle and massacre, most of the settlers fled. But here and there a ware who carried her off, till grown up, and then married a Delaware. He either died or ran away; she then married a Miami Indian, a chief I believe. The brothers and sister tried to persuade their lost sister to return with them, and if she desired it, bring her children. They would transplant her again on the banks of the Susquehanna, and their wealth make her home happy. But no. They had always been kind to her, and she had promised her late husband on his death-bed that she never would leave the Indians. -And there they had left her and hers, wild and darkened heathens, though sprung from a pious race. You can hardly imagine how much this brother is interested for her. He says he intends this Autumn to go again that long journey to see his tawny sister-to carry her some presents. and perhaps petition Congress that if ever these Miamis are driven off, there may be a tract of land reserved for his sister and her descendants. His heart yearns with an indescribable tenderness for the helpless one, who, sixty-one years ago, was torn from the arms of the mother. Mysterious providence! How wonderful the tie which can thus bind a family together with a chain so strong that nothing can break its links! I will only add that nothing has ever been heard of the boy Kingsley. The probability is that he is not living. This account, hastily and imperfectly given, I had from the lips of Mr. Slocum, the brother, and the same who was two and a half years old when little Frances was carried away. I believe I have altered nothing, though I have omitted enough to make the good part of an interesting volume.

She had two daughters both of whom are married, and live in the glory of an Indian cabin, skin clothes, and cow-skin head dresses. None of the people can speak a word of English. They have horses in abundance, and when the Indian sister wants to accompany her new relatives, she whipped out her horse, bridled it, and then, a la Turk, mounted astride and was off. At night she could throw a blanket around her, lie down upon the floor, and at once be asleep.

A Benevolent Institution established by special Endowment, for the relief of the Sick and Distressed, afflicted with Firnlent and Epidemic Discauses.

THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful detection of homes in the state of the sample of the sampl THE HOWARD ASSOCIATION, in view of the awful destruction of human life caused by Saxual diseases, and the deseptions practiced upon the unfortunate victims of such diseases by Quacks, several years ago directed their Consulting Surgeon, as a CHARITABLE ACT worthy of their names, to open a Dispensary for the treatment of this class of diseases, in all their forms, and to give MEDIOAL ADVICE GRATIS to all who apply by letter, with a description of their condition, (age, occupation, habits of life, &c.) and in case of extreme poverty, to FURNISH MEDICINES FREE OF CHARGE. It is needless to add that the Association commands the highest Medical skill of the age, and will furnish the most approved modern treatment. The Directors of the Association, in their Annual Report upon the treatment of Sexual Diseases, express the highest satisfaction with the suncess which has attended the labors of their Surgeons in the cure of Spermaternbez, Seminal Weakness, Gonorrhox, Gleek, Sphills, the vice of Ooanism or Self'Abuse, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, &c., and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

and order a continuance of the same plan for the ensuing year.

The Directors, on a review of the past, feel assured that that labors in this sphere of benevloent efforts have been of great benefit to the afflicted, especially to the young, and they have 'resolved' to devole themselves, with renewed zeal, to this very important and much despised cause. An admirable Report on Spermatornhoa, or Seminal Weakness, the vice of Onanism, Masturbation, or Self-Abuse, and other diseases of the Sexual organs, by the Consulting Surgeon, will be sent by mail (in a sealed envelope) FREE OF CHARGE, on receipt of TWO STAMPS for postage. Other Reports and Tracts on the nature and treatment of Sexual diseases, diet, &c., are constantly being published for gratuitous distribution, and will be sent to the afflicted. Some of the new remedies and methods of treatment discovered during the last year, are of great value.

Though 'its a train of stars."—DRYDEN.

The subscriber has great pleasure in announcing that he has made arrangements to issue on SATURDAY, JAN-UARY I, 1839. the largest, handsomest, and most complete Weekly Newspaper ever published.

It will be a superb Folio Sheet, nouse the quantity of reading matter given by any weekly paper now published—embracing the choicest and fresbest matter, selected and original, furnished from abroad and at home. It will be in all respects A Luvine Journal—containing the productions of the most popular writers in liberal quantity—Romances, Stories, Escars, Poems, Amecdotes, Sactohes, Editorials, Notices of Amusements and the Artz, &c., &c.—In fine, all things which are new, beautiful, interesting, and attractive. Each Number will contain not only a carefully condensed synopsis of the General News during each week, but all the very latest information and Telegraphic Despatches up to the hour of going to press.

"The Constellation" will not be an illustrated Paper—as the picture sheets are—but it will contain beautiful Designs and Engrayinge, when they really illustrate and ornament a subject.

The subscriber has already engaged a Corps of Contribu-and Engravings, when they really Hillstrate and ornaments a bulget.

The subscriber has already engaged a Corps of Contributors, "a Train of Stars," unequalled for genius, brilliancy, and reputation, by those of any other journal now published, no matter what may be its pretensions. It is with no slight gratification that he amounces his success in engaging, after much persuasion, the able and experienced services of a gentleman, so long and so justly eminent, as Mr. Park Brijahrs. Connected for twenty years with the Press of New York City, and always successful in his literary enterprises, whether as Editor, Author, or Public Speaker, the name of Mr. Benjamin is an augury of certain good fortune.

Speaker, the name of Mr. Benjamin is an augury of certain good fortune.

The public may rest assured that no means will be untried by the subscriber to secure a grand and brilliant accomplishment of his effort to establish the largest and best Weekly Paper ever published—since nothing will be left undone that can be done by talents, capital, experience, learning, and a resolute perseverance.

"The Constellation" will mainly recommend itself to a cordial and generous support from the very best people by its observance of good and avoidance of evil. It will be an unobjectionable and perfect Family Newspaper—giving offence to no sect or party—the favorite alike of both sexes, of young and old. The subscriber, having had nearly a quarter of a century's experience in the publication of daily offence to no sector party—the subscriber, having had nearly a quarter of a century's experience in the publication of daily and weekly journals, and having now connected himself with such well known and invaluable Editorial aid as he has herein announced, flatters himself that his new enter-has herein announced, flatters himself that his new enterprises will at once achieve a popular favor and success unparalleled in newspaper enterprises.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

In response to the numerous calls for the IVth Volume of the NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPEDIA, we beg to state that it has been delayed by an accidental loss of an important manuscript in the mails, which had to be replaced,—It is now PRINTED, and will be issued as soon as the edit tion of 10,000 copies required by the present subscription can be bound in the various styles required by the subscribers.

From the Hon. Theophilus Tursons, LL. D., Law Professor in Harvard University.

"Have you room for a word about Ripley and Dana's new Cyclopadia? I have frequent occasion to use one; and I am so delighted with the two volumes we have that I must ask you to allow me the relief of asying very simply, what I find them—that is, the very best Cyclopadia for practical use ever published. I have some knowledge of all in our own language and a few of those of the continent of Europe. The best and largest of these surpass this of Appleton's in the extent to which they carry out special disertations. But this Cyclopadia is full of the best matter. By skillful selection and compression, and sedulous avoidance of mere show and verblage, room is found for an immense amount of the latest information, put for it clearly, carefully and accurately. The book embodies, and adequately represents, the ability and knowledge available at this day for a work of the kind.

"(Its merit and extreme cheapness must place it eventually in svery Library. And if a good word from one who has found out its excellence by making use of it, can hasten or extend its diffusion, my purpose in writing this brief notice will be accompilshed."

THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOP EDIA

Will be completed in 15 volumes of 750 pages each, (SOLD BY SUBSCRIPTION ONLY)

PICE per vol., in cloth, 53; Library style, §3 50; half morocco, $4; half Russis, $4 60; each payable on delivery.
