NOT ON THE BATTLE FIELD. BY JOHN PIERPONT.

"To fall on the battle field, fighting for my dear that would not be hard."—THE NEIGHBORS country, that would not be hard. country, that would not be hard."—THE NEIGHB

O; no, no—let me lie

Not on a field of battle when I die!

Let not the iron tread

Of the mad war horse crush my helmed head;

Nor let the reeking knife,

That I have drawn against a brother's life,

Bo in my hand when death

Thunders along, and tramples me beneath

His heavy squadron's heels,

Or gory felloes of his cannon's wheels.

From such a dying bed,
Though o'er it float the stripes of white and ad
And the bald eagle brings
The clustered stars upon his wide spread wings,
To sparkle in my sight,
O, never let my spirit take her flight!

I know that beauty's eye I know that beauty's eye
Is all the brighter where the gay pennants fly,
And brazen helmets dance.
And sunshine flashes on the lifted lance:
I know that bards have sung,
And people shouted till the welkin rung
In honor of the brave
Who on the battle field have found a grave:

. I know that o'er their bones

• I know that o'er their bones
Have grateful hands piled monumental stones.
Some of these piles I've seen:
The one at Lexington upon the green
Where the first blood was shed,
And to my country's judependence led;
And others, on dur shore,
The "Battle Monument" at Baltimore,
And that on Bunker's Hill

The "Battle Monument" at Baltimore,
And that on Bunker's Hill.
Ay, and abroad, a few more famous still;
Thy "tomb," Themistocles,
That looks out upon the Grecian seas,
And which the waters kiss,
That issue from the Gulf of Salamis,
And thine, too, have I seen,
Thou mound of earth, Patrocius, robed in green,
That, like a natural knoll,
Sheep climb and nibble over as they stroll,
Watched by some turbaned boy Watched by some turbaned boy Upon the margin of the plain of Troy Such honors grace the bed,

And hears, as life ebbs out The conquered dying and the conqueror's shout But as his eye grows dim, What is a column or a mound to him! What to the parting soul.

The mellow note of bugles? What the roll
Of drums? No, let me die Where the blue heaven bends o'er me lovingly,

Where the blue heaven bonds o'er me lovingly.

And the soft summer air.

As it goes by me, stirs my thin. white hair,

And from my forchead dries

The death damp as it gathers, and the skies

Seem waiting to receive

My soul to their clear depths! Or let me leave

The world, when round my bed

Wife, children, weeping friends are gathered,

And the calm voice of prayer

And holy hymning shall my soul prepare,

To go and be at rest

With kindred spirits—spirits who have blessed

The human brotherhood

By labors, cares, and counsels for their good.

In my dying hour.

In my dying hour.
When riches, fame and honor have no power
To bear the spirit up,
Or from my lips to turn aside the cup That all must drink at last O, let me draw refreshment from the past! Then let my soul run back Then let my sour run back,
With peace and joy, along my earthly track.
And see that all the seeds

That I have scattered there, in virtuous deeds

And though no grassy mound
Or granite pile says 'tis heroic ground
Where my remains repose,
Still will I hope—vain hope, perhaps—that those Whom I have striven to bless,
The wanderer reclaimed, the fatherless,
May stand around my grave,
With the poor prisoner, and the poorest slave,
And breathe an humble prayer,
That they may die like him whose bones are mould—

DEMOCRATIC STATE COMMITTEE. Fellow-Citizens of Pennsylvania:-We now proceed to present to you, as briefly as circumstances will permit, the views entertained, as the State Committee believe, by the Democracy of the State and of the Nation, respecting the rights of our of natural justice and freedom which we are prepared to maintain in our intercourse has been at all times an interesting one to of the world. The influence of tion, and the several acts of Congress passindicate this fact. On the other hand, with a larger comprehension of civilization and liberty, we regard the act of naturalization as placing the naturalized citizen in all respects, excepting in the one Constitutional reservation of ineligibility to the Presidency or Vice Presidency, on the same footing, and in the same degree of rights and honor, as that occupied by the native-born citizen—as in point of fact inducting a man, hitherto for the period of probation required by the law, an inhabiperfect citizenship under a Government which proclaims expatriation to be a nat-

And is it not apparent that if the Black Republican party of Massachusetts has altered the fundamental law of the State, by the introduction of a clause restraining naturalized citizens from voting for two years after naturalization, that they may hereafter, on the same principle, extend the period of restriction to five, ten, fifteen or twenty years? It does not admit of doubt that many worthy men among the adopted citizens been s duced from the protecting ranks of the Democratic party by some of the shallow humanitarian theories broached by the Black Republican wing of the Opposition. They should now be satisfied that all this rigmarole and rant concerning freedom and human rights,' and the irrepressible conflict between the slaveholding and non-slaveholding States of the Union, until all shall become free or all shall become slave,' means the political inferiority to white native-born men and to negroes, of other white men who are citizens by choice and law in this country.

In fearlessly, and so far successfully, supporting the principles of the Constitution, the Democratic party has been and is now the true friend and support of the rights and interests of the naturalized citizens. If they, or any portion of them, no matter what their race or religion, will persist in phrases and empty promises of those who, who will, if trusted, assuredly lead them to destruction, be it so. It may be truthfully asserted that nothing has ever been done in this country more insulting to the citizens, or more dangerous to them, as a precedent, than this malevolent discrimination against them by the restrictive amendment of the Constitution of Massachusetts; and it is strange, with all their abundant professions, that the 'People's Party' of Pennsylvania should have maintained silence at the outrage. In any event, it must be plain that, not to meet such an act sternly and at once, is to invite aggression and contempt.

ROBERT TYLER, Chairman. By Instruction of Committee.

THE MAIDEN WARRIOR.

No struggle in the history of the world has produced nobler instances of heroism than that of our own glorious revolution. The achievements which light up the expanse of that deadly conflict like stars in the firmament, put to shame the melodramatic heroes of Greece; indeed, it is not too much to say, that every mountain pass has been a Thermopylæ, and every battle plain a Marathon.

Occasionally these deeds of war have been lightened by that sweetest of all passions, love; and it is a tale of love and patriotism we have now to tell. Sergeant Jasper belonged to that most famous of all heroic bands, Marion's Brigade, where his valor and talents soon won him distinction. Among other daring deeds, his rescuing our flag at the battle of Fort Moultrie deserves to be mentioned. In the hottest fire of the conflict, the flag of the fort was shot away, and fell without the fort. Leaping over turned amid the cheers of even the British. For this daring deed, Gen. Rutledge presented him with a sword.

Like many other families at that time, his was divided on the great question.-British camp a visit. His brother's position in it enabled him to receive his two friends without any suspicion of their being spies, and they were entertained for two or three days with great hospitality.

While they were thus engaged, a small party of Americans were brought in prisoners, and as they had deserted from the This is not the first occasion upon which | British, and enlisted in the American nation might make for its own particular whose oppressive, tyrannical and bigoted and Vice-Presidency, and that their Con- geant Newton, they bade adieu to Jasper's across the river to the Americans. But the most romantic incident in this brave man's life was his love for Miss Sally St. Clair, or, as she is termed in our annals, the Maiden Warrior. This was a beautiful creole girl, who returned his passion with a purity and intensity seldom known on earth. When he was called upon to join the defenders of his country, her grief was unbounded. Their hour of parting came, and after the tenderest of adieus the gallant soldier sprang upon his horse, and joined his regiment. Scarcely had the sound of his horse's feet died upon the air, than her romantic brain suggested the plan of joining her lover by enlisting in the same brigade. She resolved to put her project in immediate operation.

Securing a suit of male attire about her own size, 'she severed her long and jetty visibles, 2-2-2-3 beautiful to the same brigade. She resolved and from Rents, &c. Her offer was accepted, and a lithe, active stripling was added to the corps to which her lover belonged .-The contrast between the stripling and these men, in their uncouth garbs, their massive faces, embrowned and disfigured by sun and rain, was indeed striking .-But none were so eager for the battle, or It was found that his energy of character, and really him to be a woman. Not even Jasper agreeing in nothing except not to repudiate himself, although she was often by his side, penetrated her disguise. The romance of her situation increased the fervor of her passion. It was her delight to reflect that, unknown to him, she was by his side, watching over him in the hour of danger. She fed her passion by gazing upon him in the hour of slumber, hovering near him when stealing through the swamp and thicket, and being always ready to avert danger from his head.

She fed her passion by gazing upon him in the hour of slumber, ready to avert danger from his head. But gradually there stole a melancholy presentiment over the poor girl's mind .-She had been tortured with hopes deferred: listening favorably to the high-sounding the war was prolonged, and the prospect of being restored to him grew more and as a party, so heartily despise them, and more uncertain. But now she felt that her dream of happiness could never be realized. She became convinced that death was about to snatch her away from his side; but she prayed that she might patriotism and honor of naturalized die, and he never to know what length the violence of her passion had led her. It was the eve before a battle. The camp had sunk into repose. The watchfires were burning low, and only the slow tread of sentinels fell upon the profound silence of the night air, as they moved through the dark shadows of the forest .-Stretched upon the ground, with no other couch than a blanket, reposed the warlike form of Jasper. Climbing vines trailed themselves into a canopy above his head, through which stars shone down softly .through which stars shone down softly.—

The faint flicker from the expiring embers of a fire fell athwart his countenance, and tinged the cheek of one who bent above his couch. It was the smooth faced stripling. She bent low down, as if to stripling. She bent low down, as if to listen to his dream, or to breathe into his; soul pleasant visions of love and happiness. But tears trace themselves down the fair one's cheek, and fall silently but rapidly upon the brow of her lover. A mysterious voice has told her that the parting has come; that to-morrow her destiny is consummated. There is one last, long, lingering look, and then the unhappy maid is seen to tear herself away from the spot, to weep out her sorrows in privacy.

Fierce and terrible is the conflict that the morrow rages on the spot. Foremost in the battle is the intrepid Jasper, and ever by his side fights the stripling war-Often during the heat and the rior. smoke, gleams suddenly upon the eyes of Jasper the melancholy face of the maiden.
