The abolitionists of the North are the means of compelling the people of the South to protect their property by stringent laws. Some years ago a very stringent law was passed by the Legislature of Louisiana, in regard to the visitations of free negroes to that State at all. It was done as a matter of self-protection. How far it succeeded, is not essary now to know; it is presumed that it was una valling, as, at the last session of the Louisiana Legislature, a new law was enacted. As it concerns more than the free negroes—the masters and owners of steamboats—it is highly important that all should know it. Arkansas has Arkansas has passed a law which drives all the free negroes out of that State; they are making arrangements to go to Kanes. This law will put a top to the employment of free negroes on beats in communication with New Orleans. What will become of them? They will, of courts, or to Pennsylvania and other Free States, and there take the place of the white laboring men. Black Republicanus will soon all your State up with the worthless free negroes now long; ing about the southern States, and which the stringent laws are fact driving to the North.
