

APPEALS AT THE SOUTHERN CONFEDERATE

The Capital of the Southern Confederacy seems to be as popular with office seekers as Washington. There were 104 arrivals per day at the Exchange Hotel from the 11th to the 22d ult. The papers announce that the residence of Col. Ed. Harrison has been procured for the use of President Davis. One day last week a wag advertised for 20 applicants, the applicants to apply at the "Government Building." The consequence was a terrific row, and equally terrific disappointment. The Columbia (Ga.) Times publishes a series of interesting letters, giving a view of affairs at Montgomery. From one dated the 27th ult. we take the following:

The President has his quarters at the Exchange Hotel, where he transacts the public business. A house has been rented for him for the period of one year at the sum of $5,000 in a convenient part of the city. The Vice President, and the Secretary of the Confederate States, have rooms together in a small, pretty house, a few blocks from the Exchange. They are the great men, to whose advice and counsel much weight is attached in the present crisis.

The government is moving along slowly and is gaining strength day by day. There is harmony and good feeling in Congress, and the secret sessions facilitate the business. There is a talk of reconstruction, nor will the idea be entertained so long as the all-absorbing theme is, how to build up the new government so as to combine strength and durability. A conflict of arms being anticipated, the government is made to preserve order, relying on the patriotism of the people to bear temporary inconveniences and submit to sacrifices.

The policy of Congress is that of peace and compromise, and is not to be abandoned on any opinion, to wit: that a portion will be attempted, and the present difficulties will be settled by the arbitrament of the sword. Hence, his earnest desire is to be on the side of peace, and to see the war terminated with all Christendom, and will command more sympathy from the border States than an aggressive war.

The Commissioners have left for Washington. Rather, Mr. Crawford has gone, and will await the arrival of Messrs. Forsyth and Roman. The prevailing opinion here is, that South Carolina is rather impatient. While the spirit of the people is high, and the boys who are anxious to attack Sumter, their feet are wadded with their own zeal, but they are not in a hurry to put fifty thousand men in progress to prosecute the war with vigor.

Mr. Yancy has not left yet for Europe. He is said to have been ordered to go, but he is not yet ready to go. He is said to have been ordered to go, but he is not yet ready to go. He is said to have been ordered to go, but he is not yet ready to go.

THE RUSH FOR OFFICE.
The number of applicants for office under the new Administration is past all calculation. We find in the Journal of Commerce the following statement of the rush for office in New York:

The rush for the snug Federal berth in this city is perfectly terrific. Some papers are publishing what purports to be lists of candidates for all the principal offices, but, as compared to the vast traffic here, they are as a conchman's oil cloth and carrying a smoky lamp through the streets—all these are not only willing but anxious to shoulder the burdens of Federal office. They are so earnest, they begin by asking for a first class place, leaving plenty of room to 'fall' in the extent of their demands. There are probably not less than one hundred strong applicants for every important Federal office in this city—and behind them come a countless swarm of candidates for the petty places. In fact, the whole Republican party in New York is a candidate for—the bet it can get.

COMMISSIONER OF A MURDERER

On Monday night of last week, a negro named George Orem, died at his home in Baltimore. Previous to his death he made a confession acknowledging that he was a murderer, and stated that an innocent man suffered death by the crime. He confessed that he murdered the negro King, and that the negro Cyphus, who was hung as the guilty party, was entirely innocent of the crime. Orem was attacked with sickness some four days after he was committed to the workhouse, and died on Monday night. It became evident that he must die.

During his illness he appeared much disturbed in mind, and when he found that he could not die, he called some friends near him, and made his confession. At the time the murder took place Orem was engaged in selling oysters through the city, and King was in his employ. The day previous, Orem had sold some oysters to King, and the former then determined to take the latter's life. Orem was also engaged in butchering, and was in the habit of carrying his butcher knife in a pocket on the back part of his pants. On the night of the murder he placed his knife in this pocket and started for the house in Wagon alley, where the tragedy was enacted.

The difficulty commenced, Orem seized the first opportunity to plunge the butcher knife into the back of King, and he instantly fell. He then made his escape. The negro Cyphus was arrested on the charge of committing the murder. From the moment of his arrest to the minute previous to his trial he denied his guilt, and his defence on the trial was that of a negro only. One of the witnesses, known as "Topsy," who saw the murder committed, stated that Cyphus was not the man who did the deed. The statement which he gave before the jury, was made on the night of the murder to several persons who conversed with him. She described the murderer as a black man, heavily built.

The other testimony, however, pointed to Cyphus as the perpetrator of the crime. The girl Topsy was weak minded and by some considered insane. Her recollection of events proved bad, and the only thing she could remember and state with distinctness, was the fact of standing by the murderer as he cut aside as unworthy of belief. She was a prostitute, and was in company with a negro on her way to King's house. The negro was standing in the vicinity of the murder at the time it was committed, and a few minutes before he ascended the scaffold, remarked to the writer of this article that he was innocent of the charge, and a few years ago he had been in prison. His statement has proved to be true, and there is now no doubt that he suffered death for a crime which he never committed.

Orem, the murderer, died on Monday night, and was buried in the city. His death has caused some discussion, as he had been harassed since he committed the deed. He was unable to sleep, and it was only when he was wearing out with toil, and in some instances, he was unable to rest. He was a victim followed him wherever he went, day and night, and no doubt to a considerable degree hastened his death.
