THE OLD FAMILY CRADLE.

Laid in the garret, where darkness and dust 'Are the sole wardens of many a trust, Bilently standing amid its compeers, Motley mementoes of many score years, Shapeless and homely, a cust aside Thus the old family cradle I sing.

Once with vermilion its coating was gay,
Now all its brightness is faded away;
Worn is the paint from the sides and the head,
There no soft coverlid longer is spread,
And the stiff rookers creek over the floor
Like a rheumatic, limb-weary and sore,
Yet there are thoughts full of goodness and grace
Brightening with beauty the homeliest face;
Speak to us now of the years that are fled,
Ohanged are the living and peaceful the dead;
What are thy memories mournful and glad,
Family histories, mirthful or sad? Once a young mother bent over thy side, Fair as a maiden, and blest as a bride

Fair as a maiden, and blest as a bride,
There were warm kisses and tears of delight,
And the kind angels booked pleased at the sight;
While the old cradle rocked gently away
Seeming in musical murmurs to say,
"To and fro, to and fro, title one, sleep,
Angels their watch o'er thy cradle shall keep;
To and fro, to and fro, thus as we rock,
Softly and solemnly ticketh the clock,
And the swift moments, while hurrying by,
Lullaby, lullaby, sing as they fly." But the light moments bear years on their wing, Summer and autumn and winter and spring

Quickly succeeding, pass quickly away, And the young parents are care worn and gray, Children are gathered by table and fire, Blessing and honor to mother and sire. Still the old cradle rocks steadily there, Still there are treasures to trust to its care, He who its pillow in infancy prest, Soothed by the song of a mother to rest, Now in his manhood stands proud at its side Watching the sleeper with fatherly pride, And the old cradle as lovingly still Guards like a casket its jewel from ill.

Gone are the aged ones now to repose, Sleep which nor dreaming nor weariness knows, Gone are the children who grew by their side Far from the home of their childhood and wide, And the all worlds formers and the side of the And the old cracio, locality is borne. he old cradle, forsaken, forlorn, Yet not forever its usefulness o'er. In age it is summoned to service once more;
Another new-comer, bewildered, astray,
Would sleep in thy bosom its troubles away.
But alas for the love that its sorrows would share,
Alas! for the ceaseless and weariless care,
A guardian sterner is sought in thy room,
And the sleep of the cradle exchanged for the tomb.
Rest, then, old friend, in a quiet profound,
Stirred not or startled by movement or sound,
Or, if the wind, with its deep, mournful sigh,
Bring to the memories long since gone by,
Softly as one who may murmur in sleep,
Rock in thy dreams, and thy solitude keep.

A Chapter on Corns. Hear how the inimitable Jones, of the Harrisburg Patriot, pathetically discourseth on corns. He has had the affliction himself, and therefore 'speaks by the bleth in his gait like a spavined army horse? He that hath corns on the approach of a storm!

Was there ever anything more annoying than a corn, not a spiritual corn; but one of those pestiferous fellows about the size of a dime on a toe-joint? If corns had been included in the ills sent upon the children of Israel, our opinion is, that their sufferings would have been intolerable. Corns are a modern institution. Of course they date back farther than our memory runs, but we do not read of Moses or David or any of the patriarchs walking as if they were tramping on eggs to avoid the full pressure of leather on a gay old corn the size of a hickory nut; still we remember the time well when corns were not as plenty as they are now-when they were ascribed to tight boots, and were deemed a fitting punishment to pride by the straight-laced. But all these old theories are exploded. since it is found that whether men wear loose or tight boots, it is all the same, and corns are frightfully on the increase.

A night or two ago we stood upon the pavement listening to an itinerant vendor of corn salve. An old chap on the left foot, that we pared down little less than a hundred times, felt as if a hot darning needle was run into him. The vendor was lungs he spoke of the virtue of his medicine in eradicating corns in such a manner that thrice we throttled a stray quarter in us how often we had our eye shut up by corn doctors and vendors of corn salve. We have tried all the known, and some of corn. We have read 'Durlocher on Corns, and derived no other knowledge from it than the fact that the eminent writer himself must in his time have had corns, so accurately does he describe the active pains of 'hard corns,' 'soft corns' and bunions,' Temporary relief may be had by some remedies, the most popular of which is frequently bathing the foot and paring the thick cuticle until the little black spot appears where the seat of pain evidently lies, but as for curing them-talk to us of bailing the Mississippi with a gourd, or bringing down elephants with pop-guns !-- but oh ! talk to us no more of a cure for corns !- it is not in the books -and the discoverer thereof has not yet made his debut upon this mundane sphere.

A THOUGHTFUL WIFE .- A friend says he has a dear, loving little wife, and an excellent housekeeper. On her birthday she moved her low rocking chair close to his side. He was reading. She placed her dear little hand lovingly on his arm, and moved it along softly towards his coat collar. He felt nice all over .- He certainly expected a kiss. Dear, sweet, loving creature !- angel ! She moved her hand up and down the coat sleeve.

'Husband,' said she. What, my dear ?

'I was just thinking-

Was vou, my love? 'I was just thinking how nicely this suit of clothes you have on would work into a rag carpet.' He says he felt cross all day, the disapointment was so great.

A young fellow of our acquaintance, whoes better half had just presented him with a pair of bouncing twins, attended Rev. Mr. ----'s church on last Sunfriend, said, in a tone of thrilling eloquence: 'Young man, you have an important responsibility thrust upon you. The new-fledged dah-dah, supposing that the preacher alluded to his peculiar home event considerably, without adulation; and is equally remote elegant Miss Mason, daughter of a former president of the Chemical Bank in this city, who had made a splendid fortune as an enterprising draper and tailor, appeared at a magnificent entertainment in royal apparel. With that fastidious exclusiveness for which the latest comers into fashionable circles are the most remarkable, she refused various offers in introduction, as she did not wish to extend the number of her acquamtances her friends were few and very select.'

The beautiful Miss Taylor radiant with good natured smiles, and once well acquainted with Miss Mason when they went to the public school in William street together, noticed the hauteur of her ancient friend, who was determined not to recognize one who would only remind her of her former estate. But Miss Taylor, the rogue, as clever as she was pretty, determined to bring her up with a short turn, and not submit to being snubbed by one whose ancestral associations were no better than her own. Watching her chance when the haughty lady was in the midst of her set, Miss Taylor walked up, and with smiles of winning sweetness, remarked: 'I have been thinking, my dear Miss Mason, that we ought to exchange names.'

'Why, indeed?' 'Because my name is Taylor, and my father was a mason, and your name is Mason, but your father was a tailor.

There was a scene then, but there was no help for it. The little Miss Taylor had the pleasure of saying a very cute thing, which was soon repeated in the ears of a dozen circles, and the wits wished to see her; but the proud Miss Mason bit her lip in silence.—N. Y. World.

THE BEST SEWING MACHINES .- The following from Punch contains an admirable description of an old-fashioned but invaluable sewing machine: The very best sewing machine a man can have, is a wife. It is one that requires but a kind word to set it in motion, rarely gets out of repair, makes but little noise, will go uninterruptedly for hours, without the slightest trimming or the smallest personal supervision being necessary. It will make shirts, darn stockings, sew on buttons, make pocket handkerchiefs, cut out pinafores, and manufacture children's frocks out of any old thing you may give it; and this it will do behind your back just as well as before your face. In fact, you may leave the house for days, and it will go on working just the same .-If it does get out of order a little from being overworked, it mends itself by being left alone for a short time, after which it returns to its sewing with greater vigor than ever. Of course sewing machines vary a great deal. Some are much quicker than others. It depends, in a vast meas-Who hath sorrow !-- who hath woe !-- ure, upon the particular pattern you select. who hath pains without stint ?--who am- If you are fortunate in picking out the choicest pattern of a wife-one, for instance that sings while working, and seems never to be so happy as when her husband's linen is in hand-the sewing machine may be pronounced perfect of its Riall, 6. kind; so much so, that there is no makeshift in the world that can possibly replace it, either for love or money. In short, no gentleman's establishment is complete without one of these sewing machines in the house!

A LAUGHABLE FRENCH MIRACLE.-The well known French missionary, Father Bribain, was always poor, for the simple reason that he gave away everything that he had. One evening he asked for a night's lodging of the curate of the village through which he passed, and the worthy man having only one bed, shared it with him. At daybreak Father Bribain rose according to custom, and went to say his prayers at a neighboring church. Returning from his sacred duty, he met a beggar, who asked alms. 'Alas, my friend, I have nothing' said the good priest, mechanically putting his hand into his breeches pocket, where, to his astonishment, he found something hard wrapped up in paper, which he knew he had not left there. hastily opened the paper, and seeing four eloquent, and with a pair of highly inflated half crowns in it, cried out that it was a miracle. He gave the money to the beggar and hastened to the church to return thanks to God. The curate soon after arour vest pocket to go in, but thrice we let | rived there, and after Bribain related the it drop again, as the thought came upon miracle with the greatest unction, the curate turned pale, put his hand in his pocket, and in an instant perceived that Father Bribain, in getting up in the dark, had the unknown remedies, and up to this time taken the wrong pair of breeches; he had we have found no permanent oure for a performed a miracle with the curate's crowns. THE UMBRELLA.-The umbrella has been used from a very remote antiquity, as it is evident from carvings and representations found among ancient ruins of Persia, Arabia and China. Nevertheless it was not used by men in England until during the last century, and it is said that Jonas Hanway who died in 1786, was the first person who used an umbrella in the streets of London. Even at that late period a man carrying an umbrella was an object of ridicule, and excite the jeers of the people by his 'effeminacy.' Previous to the introduction of umbrellas, the hackney-coach was the shelter of unfortunate pedestrians who happened to be caught in a shower; but it was customary, after their introduction, to keep a single umbrella at each of the coffee-houses, which, in cases of emergency, was lent, together with a boy to carry it.

How to Forgive a Rival-Resolve that you will love and wish well to the man who has failed. Go to him and get acquainted with him; if you and he are both true men you will not find it difficult to like him. It is perhaps asking too much of human nature to ask you to do all this in the case of the man who has carried off the woman you loved; but as regards anything else, do it all. Go to your successful rival, and heartily congratulate him; say frankly you wish it had been you; it will do great good to him and to yourself. Let it not be that envy, that fast growing fiend, shall be suffered in your heart for one minute. -Boyd.
