In Just and equal, knowing that ye also have a Master in Heaven." And we would recommend to servants freedom as preferable to servitude, if they are bettered by it, and do not become worse slaves and more degraded, like our Northern negrees in general. And it would be more just and righteous if we in the North would educate, and christianize, and employ, and thus elevate our negrees, before we undertake to take care of those millions in the South. It is fearful to think, that if extermination of the whites in the South, and the liberation of the blacks from their servitude, are to be the principles of the conduct of this war, then we will have a de-p-pulated South, and four millions of negrees running at large. The picture is too dreadful to contempiate. By all means let us say, "return to your allegiance, and every right you have as states, as communities, as individuals, shall be preserved to you saored and inviolate."

nyiolate." Men of the North ! Sustain not a policy that says Men of the North ! Sustain not a polloy that says no conditation but extermination, or you may ex-pect war for years. If the people of the South are told that they will be robbed of every right, must submit to every oivil indignity, be reduced to con-quered provinces, be denied all constitutional rights and guarantees, lose their slaves, and not have their status in the old Union, what can we expect but they will fight as long as they can muster a man ? And then we will be so reduced as to become an easy prey for foreign powers. Let the Administra-tion and party in power be magnanimous, and say to the people of the South, whilst we demand the heads of your leaders, we open our arms to you as the compassionate father did to his prodigal son, on condition that you lay down your arms, confeas your sins and pledge yourselves to the Constitution. UNION.

Gen. Butler, in a speech at Harrisburg,

Pa., recently; declared : " I for one do not want this Union reconstructed on the old basis." One reason he gave (a false one, as every intelligent man can see,) was that Jeff. Davis would then have to be put back into the Senate. This is too puerile and contemptible to be called argument; too senseless to deceive even the ignorant and unsophisticated for whom it was designed. A restoration of the Union would no more necessarily put Jeff. Davie back into the Senate than it would bring to life all the men who have been killed in this war for the benefit of negroes and plunderers. But why should Butler ject to the return of Davis to the Senate? If Butler's efforts and wishes had prevailed Davis would have been President of the United States at this moment instead of Lincoln ! Butler voted for him over fifty times in the Charleston Convention, and because he could not procure his nomination he aided in breaking up the Convention, dividing the Demo-oratic party and electing Lincoln. He thus aided in bringing on the war. Gen. Butler did more towards plunging the country into this horrible war than Jeff. Davis did, and we are not sure that, morally, he is not as much of a traitor. Both are laboring to the same end—the overthrow of the Constitution, the destruction of the Union ; and we see but little if any difference in the moral guilt of two men seeking the same object but by dif-
