Dig a hill of potatoes, leaving the hill open to receive the top weeds; then take the earth from the next hill back to cover the tops and Pennsulvanie weeds thus deposited. In this way you destroy at least one-half of the seeds of weeds before they mature, and are adding to your ground a valuable manuring for the coming season. And when your lot is dug over in this way, it looks clean and farm-like, and you have done as good service to the lot as one good ploughing would be, and better. This mood of harvesting would suggest the earliest practicable planting of the potato, that its harvesting may be made earlier. And the earlier it is harvested, we feel satisfied the better for the health and cleanliness of the soil and the more profit to the farmer. WM. A. RICHARDSON, BRIEF NOTES. The Maine Farmer, after discussing somewhat elaborately the question recently brought prominently forward by agriculturists, to wit: "Shall corn be noed the second time?" arrives at the conclusion that it is best to "hoe as little as will do to keep the weeds down and the soil mellow." The Rural New Yorker, in speaking of the practice of dairymen in some localities of feeding whey to cows, says : We have never had any experience with such feed; but we have made up our mind we should never feed it to cows unmixed with meal or bran, and then only in quantities sufficient to wet the same. We do not believe the immediate gain in the increased quantity of milk compensates for the permanent loss in the condition and usefulness of the cow. We have not yet found a man who did not concede that after feeding whey one season, his best cows were made his poorest the succeeding season." The Massachusetts Ploughman of July 14, in an article upon the value of tur-nips as food for farm stock, remarks: It is too late in the season to sow that excellent and most "cheaply cultivated of all roots, the Swedish turnip, so as to have a heap in the cellar large enough to fill any void in the hay-mow; but it is not too late to put in a sowing of a couple of acres or more of flat turnips. Though less nutritious than the first named, they are equally palatable, and when fed next winter in connection with the poor hay from the swales and meadows, it will be found that eattle will thrive upon such mixture about as well as those which are fed entirely upon the best English hay." Advices from Alexandria state that favorable anticipations are entertained regarding the next Egyptian cotton crop. As large an area had been put in as was planted last season, and more was still in course of planting. The Prairie Farmer says that the 'cattle melon," so much talked of in the English agricultural papers, is nothing more nor less than a Yankee pumpkin. It was introduced from Indiana. A correspondent of the Country Genleman thinks wool is to advance still

THE SUCCESSOR OF GENERAL BISHOP Polk.-The Southern Confederacy confains the following:

POLK.—1 he Softwarne conjectures contains the following: This correspondent of the Register, "Bur-ley," announces Major General A. P. Stew-art's promotion to the vacant licatenant generalship in the Army of Tennessee: Although the appointment of so modest, retiring, and junior an officer to the place of the lamented Polk will take some of our readers by surprise, those of them who are acquainted with the character and cureer of General Stewart—his exalted piety, his thorough education, and his rare courage— will readily admit the fitness and justice of it, and concede to the War Department ex-cellent discrimination in the selection. General Stewart, says the correspondent of the Register, was born in Winchester, Tenn., and is now about 43 years old. At an early age he went to West Point, where he graduated with honor, after which he re-malfied in "the institution two years, 'as professor' of mathematics. He married Miss. Chase, in Albany, N. which place he removed to Lebanon, Tenn, and took the position as professor of mathe-matics, in Cumberland University. He filled, for a number of years, the same chair in the Nashville University, and then re-turned to Lebanon ss president of the Female Academy. At the commencement of the war, he received a commission as major of artillery, and was at columbus, Ky, as chief of that bepartment, under the lamented Polk, to whose late position he has succeeded. Just before the battle of Shiloh he was appointed brigadier general, and commanded a brigade of infancy on on that memorable field with surpassing gallantry, having two horses killed under him. He was at Murfreesboro, just after which he was promoted to major general, and chickamanga, and in this battle, which may now be termed the "engagement of May and June." He is a member of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church and a devout Ohristion. He has great turnness of character, is quiet in demennor, cool in battle, handles his troops with great caution, but has always been up to time. Nobody doubts for a moment that his promotion will redound to the discipline of his corps and the good of the cause. and took the position as professor of mathe matics in Cumberland University, If

"FINING MANURE."

"FINING MANURE." An English gardner lays great stress on what he calls "fining manure." He means breaking up the lumps, tearing in pieces the long, strawy parts, and bringing it into such a fine state that it can be thoroughly mixed with the parti-cles of the soil. Having broken it up he mixes it with ashes, leaves, sawdust, tan bark, and all the refuse of his garden, laying it up in thin layers. When it has become, partly decomposed, he overlaying it up in thin layers. When it has become partly decomposed, he over-hauseit, turning it over with the fork or showel, and making it one homogeneous mass. After the heap has lain a few months, "it is worked, when it is thoroughly "fined," and ready for use anywhere. He is a very successful gardener, and ascribes no small part of his success to this careful preparation of the than use. Termers and others nay take a hint from his example. It is plain that coarse, "lumpy manure cannot plain that coarse, Jumpy minure cannot benefit land as much as that which is broken up and finely diffused through it. broken up and finely diffused through it.
