Miscellaneous.

A Greenhorn on a Bailroad. "When we got to the depot, I went around to get a look at the iron hoss .-Thunderation! it warn't no more like a hoss than a meetin-house. If I was goin' to describe the animule, I'd say it looked like-well, it looked like-darned if I know what it looked like, unless it was a regular he devil, snortin' smoke all round and pantin', and heavin', and swellin', and chawin' up red hot coals like they was good. A feller stood in a house-like, feedin' him all the time; the but more he got the more he wanted and the more he snorted. After a spell the feller catched him by the tail, and great Jericho! he set up a yell that split the ground for mor'n a mil and a half, and the next minit I felt my legs a waggin', and found myself at t'other end of the string o' vehick les; I wasn't skeered but I had three chills and a stroke of palsy in less than five minits, and my face had a curious brownish-yellow-green-bluish color in it, which was perfectly unaccountable 'Well', says I, commentis super fluous', and I took a seat in the nearest wagin, or car, as they call it-a consarned long, steamboat lookin' thing, with a string of pews down each side big enough to hold about a man and a half. Just as I sat down, the hoss hollored twice, and started offlike astreak, pitchin' me head first at the stomach of a big Irish wo man, and she gave a tremendous grunt, and then catched me by the head, and crammed me under the seat; the cars was a jumpin' and tearin' along at unto forty thousand miles an hour, and everybody was bobbin' up and down like a mill saw, and every wretch o'm had his mouth wide open and looked like they was laffin', but couldn't hear nothin', the cars kept such a racket. Bimeby they stopped al. at once; and then such another laff busted out o'them passengers as I never hern before. Laffin' at me, too, that's what made me mad, and I was mad as thunder, too. I ris up, and shakin' my fist at 'em, says I, "Ladies and gentle men, look ahere! I'm a peaceable stranger-" and away the darn train went like small-pox was in town, jerking me down in the seat with a whack like I'd been thrown from the moon, and their cussed mouths flopped open, and the fellers went to bobbin' up and down again. I put on an air of magnanimous contempt like, and took no more notice of 'em, and very naturally went to bob bin' up and down myself."

The Force of Imagination.

Many years ago a celebrated continental physician, author of a celebrated work on the force of imagination, being desirous-to add experimental to his theoretical knowledge, made application to the minister of justice to be allowed an opportunity of proving what he asserted, by an experiment on a criminal condemned to death. The minister complied with his request, and delivered over to him an assassin, a man who had been born of distinguished parents. The physician told him that several persons who had taken an interest in the family, had obtained leave of the minister that he should suffer death in some other way than on the scaffold, or to avoid the disgrace of a public execution, and that the easiest death he could die would be by blood-letting. The criminal agreed to the proposal, and counted himself happy in being freed from the painful exposure to which .he would otherwise have been subjected, and rejoiced at being able to save save the feelings of his friends and family. At the time appointed the ysician repaired to the prison, and the patient having been extended on a table, his eyes bound, and everything being ready, he was slightly pricked, near the principal veins of the legs and arms with the point of a pin. At the four corners of the table were two little fountains filled with water, from which issued small streams, falling into basins placed there to receive them. The patient, thinging that it was his blood that trickled into the basins, became weaker and weaker by degrees: the remarks of the medical men in attendance in reference to the quality and appearance of the blood (made with that intention) strengthened the delusion, and he spoke more and more faintly, until, at length, his voice was scarcely audible. The profound silence which reigned in the apartment, and the constant dropping of the fountain had so extraordinary an effect on the brain of the poor patient. that all vital energy was soon gone, and although a very strong man, he died without having lost a single drop of blood. Imagination has always been sutphin found a powerful agent in the production or aggravation of disease. Indeed, the fact has passed into a proverb. Res Of all kinds of flirts—the romantic, who looks into your eyes and asks if you do not like Tennyson's poetry, and if the moonlight is not very beautiful; the manly, who rides to cover, and talks about horses and dogs, who knows when the St. Ledger is run, and admires the stately woods and pretty race-course of Goodwood; the scientific, who begs you to class a fly, or to pronounce upon a fossil; the sentimental, who believes that happiness does not exist in this life and who, while asserting that there is "no such thing as true love," tries to make you a specimen of the true lover ; the "gushing," who talks nonsense purposely, and says, "Well, there, now, 'tis my way, you know; I am such a giddy thing !" of all these, together with the boating flirt, the dancing and the musical flirt, who somehow makes love to you in the pauses of the song; of all kinds of flirts, we reassert, the married fiirt is the worst of all. There are many married flirts; they are indeed said to be on the increase; and the ingenious way in which they attract young fellows, and insinuate that they are "blighted beings," or have made a "mistake in marriage," is equally curious and reprehensible? It was in something of this way that Cleopatra en tangled Antony, and Lady Hamilton Lord Nelson. It was with fine scorn that the former, placing all her selfish love in the foreground, in the midst of her passion and wondrous power, stooped to ask Antony after his wife-"How is the married woman?" So, also, Lavy Hamilton taught Nelson first to pity, and then almost to despise, the good wife whom he had wronged. tor The flashes of lightning often observed on a summer evening, unaccompanied by thunder, and popularly known as "heat lightning " are merely the light from discharges of electricity from an ordinary thunder-cloud, be neath the horizon of the observer, reflected from clouds, or perhaps from the air itself, as in the case of twilight Mr Brooks, one of the directors of the telegraph line between Pittsburg and Philadelphia, states that, on one occasion, to satisfy himself on this point, he asked for information from a distant operator during the appearance of flashes of this kind in the distant horizon, and learned that they -proceeded from a thunderstorm then raging fifty miles eastward of his place of observation. - How holy is the joy and the pain of pure unspotted music. Its jubilee and its sounds of woe are not for any one circumstance in life, but for life, for existence itself; and nothing is worthy of its tears but eternity.

It is well known to the medical profession that IRON is the vital Principle or Life Ele-ment of the blood. This is derived chiefly from the food we eat; but if the food is not properly digested, or if, from any cause whatev r, the necessary quantity of iron is not taken into the circulation, or becomes reduced, the whole sys-tem suffers. The bad blood will irritate the heart, will clog up the lungs, will stupefy the brain, will obstruct the iiver, and will send its disease producing elements to all parts of the system, and every one will suffer in whatever organ may be predisposed to disease.
