The court-room was more crowded to-day than ever before, and numerous per-sons who had passes were unable to secure admission. Women are in the majority among the spectators, and their conduct is not always either dignified or ladylike. The bearing of the prisoners was much as usual, except that Spangler betrayed in-tense interest. Mrs. Surratt kept her cus-tomary position in the corner, but was very watchful of the proceedings of the court. The counsel of Abzerott having yesterday set up the plea of constitutional cowardice, te-day added thereto that of partial insanity, and intimated that several witnesses would be called on that point. OLD the state box was prepared by the treasurer of the theater, and that the chair in which the President is belonged to a set of furniture in the box, and was used that evening be-cause it was the handsomest chair they had. The story that all the other private boxes had been engaged by the conspirators was effectually exploded by the statement of the treasurer that they were not engaged to any one, and there was no application that day for them. The very important fact, how-ever, was brought out, that Booth had en-gaged a private box half a dozen or more times during the season, and that he always took that half of the state-box nearest the dress-circle. The witness could not recall that he had ever seen Booth occupy the box, however. It needs only to be said that, having control of the box, if the other adjoining box was unoc-cupied, he also had control of the passage in which the bar and mortice were used.— The prisoner Payne to-day for the first time almost, appeared to belong to our common humanity. His bearing has been through-out most remarkable He nearly always sits boil upright, entirely unmoved either by anything said or done in the room, and never speaking to the counsel; not bold and detiant, but composed, indif-ferent, and self-possessed. Who is this man? Has he any friends? Where did he come from? What is his real name? These questions have been asked a thousand times, without avail. To-day SELDEN & CO., MEN'S WEAR.
