A Romantic Story. century a young man made his appearance in Stretterd and seed of A N D R E W J. S T E I N M A N ance in Stratford, and spenta few weeks at the tavern, which then existed to afford shelter to stage coach travellers. Whence he came, and what his business, none could guess. Directly opposite the tavern stood the small cottage and the forge of a blacksmith named H. B. SWARR Folsom. He had a daughter who was the beauty of the village, and it washer fortune to captivate the heart of the young stranger. He told his love, said he was from Scotland, that he was traveling incog., but in confidence gave her his real name, claiming that he was heir to a large fortune. She returned his love, and they were married. A few weeks thereafter the stranger told his wife that he must visit New Orleans; he did so, and the gossips of the town made the young wife unhappy by their disagreeable hints and jeers. · In a few months the husband returned, but before a week had elapsed, he received a large budget of letters, and told his wife that he must at once return to England, and must go alone. He took his departure, and the gossips had another glorious opportunity to make a confiding woman wretched. To all but herself it was a clear case of desertion: the wife became a mother, and for two years lived on in silence and in hope. At the end of that time a letter was received by the Stratford beauty from her husband, directing her to go at once to New York with her child, taking nothing with her but the clothes she wore, and embark in a ship for her home in England. On herarrival in New York she found a ship splendidly furnished with every convenience and luxury for her comfort, and two servants ready to obey every wish that she might express. The ship duly arrived in England, and the Stratford girl became the mistress of a superb mansion, and, as the wife of a baronet, was saluted by the aristocracy as Lady Samuel Sterling. On the death of her husband many years ago, the Stratford boy succeeded to the title and wealth of his father, and in the last edition of the "Peerage and Baronetage" he is spoken of as the issue of "Miss Folsom of Stratford, North America." When the late Professor Silliman visited England some years since, he had the pleasure of meeting Lady Sterling at a dinner party, and was delighted to answer her many questions about her birthplace in Connecticut.

How Different Nations Est. The Maldavian Islanders eat alone They retire into the most hinder parts of their houses, and then draw down the cloths that serve as blinds to their windows, that they may eat unobserved On the contrary, the islanders of the Philippines are remarkably sociable. Whenever one of them finds himself without a companion to partake of his meal, he runs till he meets with one, and however keen his appetite may be, he ventures not to satisfy it without a guest. The tables of the rich Chinese shine with a beautiful varnish, and are covered with silk carpets very elegantly worked. They do not make use of plates, knives and forks; every guest has two little ivory or ebony sticks, which he handles very adroitly.
