President Johnson's Views and Policy on the Negro Suffrage Question.

We have reason to believe that President Johnson accepts with great satis-faction the result of the late Connecticut election on negro suffrage as a popu-lar endorsement, by a New England State, of his Southern policy of recon-struction. And why not? The issue was fairly joined between his policy and that of the abolition radicals, and they have been emphically rebuked by the people. The President, then, may rest satisfied that upon this question of negro suffrage the public sentiment of The President, then, may the North as well as that of the Southern States is with him, and that thus sustained he has nothing to fear. He has declined to enforce the condition precedent upon the submitting rebel States of negrosuffrage. He holds that this is a matter with which he has nothing to do, as it properly belongs to the several States, each for itself, to set-tle it. Nay, more, as we understand his position, he holds that the elective fran-bies is not the right of sources white chise is not the right of any man, white or black: but that it is a privilege conferred, often in an arbitrary manner, and always with numerous exceptions and restrictions, in view of the general interests of the community. In this broad and comprehensive view of the subject he may safely contend that no wrong is done to the Southern blacks at this time in withholding from them the right of suffrage; that they are subject to the same arbitrary rules of expedien-cy under which white males below the ge of twenty one and females of all ages are excluded from the ballot-box. Not only, therefore, because the ques-tion of suffrage belongs to the States, but because he believes the concession of the result of the Guession of the privilege to the Southern blacks, at this juncture, would be productive of no good, but of much mischief, does President Johnson hold to his doctrine of negro exclusion. The political institutions, ideas, castes and classes of a hundred years of cultivation in the South have been suddenly overthrown, with the institution of Afri can slavery upon which they were founded. The people of the rebellious States are now, in one sense, all on pretty much the same level, whites and blacks—they are all free and all impov-erished. But the impressions, the con-victions, distinctions of color and prejudices of a hundred years are not so easily removed. The Southern blacks just re-leased from the darkness of slavery are not in a condition to take a hand in political affairs, and the Southern whites just relieved from the absolute control of masters are shocked at the bare mention of negro political equality or negro suffrage. If President Johnson were to suffrage. attempt the condition precedent of negro suffrage in reorganizing the South-ern States there would be no reorgani-zation. The whites would stand aloof, and the blacks, in attempting to assume the management of political affairs, would bring on a conflict of races, which would end, most probably, only with the extermination of the blacks. Is this the entertainment to which our abolition fanatics would invite us? It is certainly the rock which President Johnson is laboring to avoid.

Taking things as he finds them, and adapting his policy to the circumstances which he cannot control, he is making rapid progress in his great task of South-ern reorganization. He fully under-stands the difficulty of negro suffrage, and leaves it to the influences of time deliberation and discussion. He fully comprehends the great necessity bringing the Southern States to law and order, and the development of their vast resources, as soon as possible, to aid us of the North in bearing and lessening the burthen of our national debt. He thinks it is not so important to grant universal suffrage as to do all we can first to avoid universal bankruptcy and national disgrace and ruin. In any event he holds that this is not the time, and that neither the Southern whites nor Southern blacks, nor the people of the North, are prepared now for this pro-posed sweeping concession of Southern Attempted Escape of Dr. Mudd.

We have obtained from an officer of the steamer Thomas A. Scott, the full particulars of Dr. Mudd's attempted escape, differing in many accounts from the particulars hitherto published. The prisoners at the Tortugas are allowed the liberty of the island except on the day of a vessel's departure. At night they are expected to sleep within the fort. The night previous to the return of the T. A. Scott, Dr. Mudd slept outside the fort, in a shed, and the next morning he quietly walked on board the steamer, disappeared into the lowest deck and sent a fireman for Quarter-master Kelly. This was the last that was seen of him. Soon after he was missed at the fort, and an officer and squad sent down to search the vessel. On the very bottom of the vessel lay a platform resting on two cross beams; the officer thrust his sword under one side, and the colored terrible things against him, even to the extremity of impeachment; but since the Connecticut election they have be-come more rational. They are welcome to such consolation as they can draw from the State elections of yesterday-for the game is in the hands of Andy Johnson. Entirely satisfied that we have rightly defined his position, we are as well convinced that he intends to 'fight it out on this line," and that, with the masses of the people of all parties to sustain him, he will be more than a match for the radicals in Congress, and will organize the winning party in 1868 on the platform of his administration. -N. What Was It For ?

The stranger who should now visit

The stranger who should now visit our country and listen to the political discussions of the day, would unques-tionably be puzzled to know what the people of the Great Republic have been for four years fighting about. He might read up all the histories written by all the sides, and be no less bothered when he examined the present condition of the people and the differences which occupy their time. He would be told their time. He would be told that certain rebels desired to destroy the Union, and that the people determined to crush rebellion and preserve the Union and Constitution. But he would knife of the plane is ground into round ask, and justly ask, How does it hap-pen, then, that so many men at the North refuse to have the Union preserved ?-that whereas a little while ago they professed to be fighting to compel the rebels to return to union, they now declare that they shall not be permitted to come back to the Union at all, except on hard terms? It certainly seems to be a remarkable change of position, or else a remarkable inconsistency. The President, a South-ern man, from a State whose inhabitants will that cluss off the mat from one were largely rebellious, is diligently at work seeking to assure the position of that State in the Union. The very men who advocated his election to the position he occupies (for the Vice President is chosen expressly to be President if the occasion calls him) are opposing his wish, and are determined that Tennes-see, his own State, shall not be allowed in the Union at all, however hard she may beg to come in, unless she adopts a social system unknown even in the great Middle States. Did these men ever love the Union? Was there ever any truth in their pro-fessions of devotion to country and Constitution? There is at this moment Constitution? There is at this moment no obstacle to the perfect adjustment of the Union and supremacy of the laws, except the hostility of the Northern disunionists. But the stranger would inquire: "Arethese loyal men who op-pose the President and throw obstacles in the way of Union?" In their own oras they are loyal; but the fact is that pose the President and throw obstacles in the way of Union?" In their own eyes they are loyal; but the fact is that this word loyal has been sadly abused in America. In the mouths of these ane mies of the Union it means to think as they do on political questions. Thus the most loval of them were those who called the Constitution a league with death, and who designated the flag as "Hate's polluted rag." In general, they regard loyalty as measured by one's attachment to the colored race—not by the good which he would do the race, but by the amount of his zeal for the cause or negro and white equality. It is true that the cruel tender mercies of these men have inflicted is true that the crue tender more misery these men have inflicted more misery on the negro race in one year than it had ever suffered before in a century, The stranger therefore must wait awhile before he can understand American politics. If it should turn out that the people and their representatives sustain the wise course of President Johnson, and restore the Union to its ancient peace, he may believe that the war was prosecuted to suppress rebellion and save the beneficent government which our fathers devised and left to us But if the people do not sustain this course, and go wild after negro equality, he will probably come to the conclusion that the American war was a free fight in which every man went for himself and that the revolutionists of the North won the power, and used it, as fanatics always do, for the ruin of good government and the destruction of the entire social fabric .- N. Y. Journal of Com

said "he had more confidence in the Bresident, perhaps, than many others; but he would abandon any man who manifested a willingness to give politi-cal power the hands of the leaders of the rebellion." Banks is determined to be on the popular side in Massachuprisoner. He was immediately brought to the fort and thumb screws applied to him, and under the pressure of pain, he acknowledged that Kelly, with whom he had formed an acquaintance within a few days, had agreed to help him to escape on the promise of receiving Mudd's gold watch. Kelly was there-upon marched to the fort, a drum-head court-martial held, and he sentenced to six years imprisonment and hard labor in Tortugas. The vessel sailed without Mudd or Kelly, and the papers were forwarded to Washington for confirma-tion V, V tribute tion.-N. Y. Tribune.

Match Making.

We find the following account of the manufacture of matches in the local columns of the Pittsburg Post : The "timber" employed in making the matches is good pine, which is brought to the factory in two-inch planks. Over 50,000 feet of these planks are used here during each year. The first step in the process of manufacture is to saw the planks up into blocks, each two inches in length. Two styles of and the square. For making the round ones, the blocks that have been sawn off are held upon a little machine like notches, and the shavings cut off by the knife are the round matches, which drop into a receiver and are ready for sep 27 4tw38 'dipping." For the square matches more complicated processes are neces-sary. The blocks are put through a

"matting" machine which presses the soft ends of the wood into a kind of wooden felt, so that it is almost as difficult to split the block as if there sep 27 6tw*38i knite that clips off the mat from one end. It is then stood on one end and run under a rapidly working vertical knife, by which it is split into thin lay-ers. Then it is turned half round and split in the other direction, the mat at the bottom keeping the layers from splitting entirely off. The block is now not a block but a bunch of square match-es. It is next thrown into a basket es. It is next thrown into a basket where two girls are at work trimming off all rough edges and getting the the matches ready to dip. Here, too.

are manufactured the paper boxes for both the round and the square matches, and also the packing boxes in which To avoid danger of fire the operations of dipping are carried on in a little shop in an alley some little distance from the main building. This season another and more convenient finishing and dip-over a furnace. This seasons the wood and predisposes it to absorb the melted brinstone into which it is dipped. A pan of melted sulphur is bubbling and uming next to the baking matches The round ones are taken by the si handful and the square ones by the block and half an inch or so of the ends dipped into the hot liquid. In another room is a pan of melted "percussion" with which the matches are to becipped. The composition of this mixture is not to be made known to an inquiring public. Before being dipped in here the round or parlor matches are placed in rows, one at a time in a frame, which they core quiring footboad by a in which they are snugly fastened by a but that is not taken into their account at all. The stranger therefore must wait matches. They are nextseparated into bunches of one hundred each. The round ones are put into boxes, each box stamped for the benefit of the Internal revenue, and arranged in packages of half gross. Of the square ones each hundred is wrapped by the nimble fin-gers of a girl in a square piece of paper, and then packed in one-eighth gross parcels, each hundred receiving its stamp. They are then packed for ship each hundred receiving its ping.
