Beautiful Women and Fast Horses-

THE LADIES RETURNED TO THE PARK. Newport is deserted; we all drink Congress water in bed instead of at the pring; the rose of Sharon has been icked, and there is frost on the sides of the Catskills. The country has its own native dreariness again, and the and Eighteenth street, with peacocks in the front yard. Mrs. John Morris-sey is out also, in a coupe, taking an airing, alone; though the stalwart pri-vate banker himself comes here often in a drag with a four-in-hand. Miss Helen Russell appears directly with a pair of creams, almost as much a sensa-tion as the swatered at Newport last city has recovered its treasury of beau-tiful women. A month ago the Central Park had almost forgotten the visitation of wheels; it is now vocal with the intelligible crack of whips, and the beautiful jockey-hats, birds, feathers, and all, go nodding up the saddle-path. Let'us stand aside on this empty bench and some them. and count them :

and count them: Along sweeps Mrs. Benjamin Wollis-ter, holding in superb subjection her pair of royal blacks, and sitting beneath a hundred dollar Affghan in a Clarence which because it is the statement of the statement o a hundred donar Anghan in a Chalence which passes in magnificence all that we see careering. Of the other sex, but gaining credit for speed as much as Mrs. Wollister for style, dashes Hiram Crans-ton, of the New York Hotel, with a pair in hand-two perfect bays and a gray and sorrel, each of which can make his mile inside of three minutes-at-tached to an eighteen hundred dollar drag. Mrs. John Jacob Astor succeeds, quietly attired and in demeanor graceful and quiet, sitting in a handsome Landau, drawn by thorough-bred bays, pre-ceding the noble team of Heavy Clews, who was in a four-in-hand drag, with a rumble behind. The Astors are all careful to the privacy of life, and their selection of equipages is of a solid rather than of asplendid character; this remark apies also the family of Mr. Wm. B. Astor which takes its course in the park daily, and now advances undemonstratively. The fine black mare of Frederick Kirt-land followed by the stylish double stud of Harry Greene (of Taylor, Richards & Co.,) introduces the quiet coupe of A. T. Stewart; he drives from his residence in it every morning, by eight b'clock, to his store at Broadway and Chambers street, and enters among the first of his clerks. He has a Kentucky blooded dark bay pair at occasional times, but having no daughters we miss in his coupe the bit of bright costume that makes the panorams of the park so beautiful. Here are the coquettish and beautiful Beale girls, in excellent style, their luxuriant hair flowing outside their hats, nodded to by every young gentleman on whose heart a pair of eyes make impression; one of them holds her whip like a fairy on a chariot from Brooklyn, always splendidly out-fitted, and in a quiet trotting wagon comes Sir Percy Wyndham, brave and and the caleche is light and rich like a boudoir on wheels, in its polished fenders reflecting the rich dreses, ribbons, and superb hats within. More pleas-anly does the blonde and honest face of the daughter of Gen. Fremont make excellent the next willow phaton; the whip in her little kid seeme only to have a large knob there. Mrs. James N. Plumb, the best of the matrimonial con-tributions Connecticut has sent us, fol-lows in ponderous state with a Victoria, lowing only a trifle changed from the looking only a trifle changed from the fresh Waterbury lass who preferred the Park to the mill stream and dwells among us to make the afternoon hand-somer. Then the Woovers ring along by the staid gray policeman; their har-

by the statu gity pontential, and make it them-ness is exquisite, for they make it them-selves; though on Mr. Jerome's steeds, attached to the great drag, which that banker and landowner habitually ap-pears in, there is harnes even more sol-ally and uniquely mounted. ly and uniquely mounted. THE TURN OUT OF JEROME.

Prince of the Blood in an equine way, as he was autocrat long in Wall street, Mr. Jerome maintains the cleverest stable in the city; it is built beneath his private theater on Madison avenue, and in its aisles of walnut stalls there are horses the price of each of which might build a ship. Above all the rest of our horse gentlemen, Mr. Jerome has taken rank; his drag cost two thousand dol-lars, his harness fifteen hundred dollars, whole affair has a mercurial brightness lars, his harness fifteen hundred dollars, and the total cost of the team and four and glitter. he turns out is not less than thirty thousand dollars. This it is to ride in triumph in the American Babylon. Mr Jerôme's favorite team on these aftervaluable and regal. The coupe of Mr. John C. Browne is adjudged very youthful looking, but his father found him too prodigal for the rest of the fam-ily to do anything but disown him; so he rides with better but not more gro-Wiss Frank McArthur drives four in hand frequently, and lately essayed to manage a tandem of three. Miss Helen Draper, it is alleged, never entered the park in anybody's company; she loves tesque humanity in the Park, very richly dressed, but with a wicked twinkle in his eve. Peter and Robert Geolet, with Mrs. Gerry and her daughter, drive out in a staunch yeoman-like ve-hicle; it is the family house of the Geo-lets, that large residence at Broadway and Fichtearth atract with percent her pony's company too well to divide it with another. During the summer, New York horsewomen have carried off the honors at every place of pleasure in the North.— World. and Eighteenth street, with peacocks metrical and shrewd by connossieurs hough C. W. Curant, the railway con tractor, excels it in his stately Landau. Behind these at a rack rattles the wagon of John Beal, the celebrated coach-man, taking his wife and children aboard for an airing. John Beal lives in Williamsburg; he takes as good care of his family as a poor man can of a hady richly reared. He has passed out of notice of late, though his ambitious love was at one time the sympathy and wonder of all the firesides in the country. In course of time we remark Mr. Saltus, of Brooklyn, with his family, though his wife, the most admired lady in the City of Churches, prefers to take the wind on horseback; her exquisite command of the situation is equally praised with her animation and her graces, and the ribbons flaunt widely as she disappears among the trees. Mrs. Ganston's Victoria is nicely harnessed and occupied, and Mrs. Mickle's coupe is one of the best evidences of American skill at carriage building. Mrs. Hoey, ex-comedienne has a dog-cart of cosy construction, and the gem of our stock-actresses is not less attentive to her toilet here, than less attentive to her toilet here, than when she charmed the interior world at the footlights; she drives cleverly, though General De Peyster, bouncing along behind, with his fleet and power-ful sorrel and black pair, to a staunch grasshopper "Jaquar," threatens to swamp anybody who does not note that his dexterity is equal to his dash. Mrs. George Colburn drives a gray and bay to a dark phaeton, while Mrs. John Wood, queen of burlesque everywhere, reclines in the cushions of her Landan archly, and looks witchery over the top archly, and looks witchery over the top of her jeweled fan. Fortunately we see in a row the renowned Artemus Ward, closeted in one of Descombe's cabriolets, cutting reserve into half with his keen nostril; Mrs. William Wheatley, the former Philadelphia belle, in a brougham; and Mr. Robert Heller, looking little like diablery, with his diamond pin shooting a clear aisle before him by its very lustre. Mr. Gar-rard and lady, popular with a military people, trot along bravely after awhile, and there comes again one of those hills in the travel, remarkable of every highway in life. EDITORIAL WHIPS.

Whom have we here, dark, dashing, not all passe, but so disguised in the multiplicity of hen wagons that we are not assured it is she, but Mrs. James Gordon Bennett; she drives everything conceivable, and drives them all to the top of their speed -Landau, drag, ca-leche, phaeton, Victoria, jaunting car, dog car, willow, top buggy, sulky, et omnum. Of all the Park frequenters this is the most devoted. Since Madame Restell has moved into the avenue, her cosches almost right the magnificance her palace in brown stone, they were imported, and they are certainly rich and elegant beyond any window furni-ture in New York; their borders are tick like a nucleon bound and borders are rich like so much pure gold sprinkled upon ivory. Her team is a span, bay

Why do all things come by aggregates and leave lonesome spaces behind them? There is nothing diffused; the riches of the world, the brains of manhood, not even the procession of cabriolets in the back plume in her flight, and the folds of her riding dress make tall and stately her even the procession of cabriolets in the Park. The old rattle trap of the butch-er boy will not keep its distance; it jostles the steel springs of the anointed. So, as we sit beneath the growing shade, in one of these pauses in the swift current of travel, we wonder if all these gay caravans are really riding over the but recent waste of mountain and rubbish which the workmen buried in the Central Park, the sweep of barren rock made hideous with excavations, and, under all this symmetry of grass, the carcasses of our household pets-dogs, tabby-aits and billy-goats. Even dogs, tabby-cats and billy-goats. Even so, for we make no mistake in the jog-trot of William Niblo, who rides along trot of William Niblo, who rides along as unconcerned as a farmer coming from market. Mrs. E. S. Higgins is a good "whip," and she is driving tandem to everybody's admiration, just before the bold, black span of Mr. Harper, our ex-mayor. The lady of a gallant soldier, the Countess de Trobriand, wife of Gen-eral de Trobriand and daughter of the ancient citizen. Mr. Jones, of the Jones House prop-erty, takes ourrepublican air fresh from a willow phæton, and we see Mrs. Rob-ert Stuart, in a Clarence, looking con-tented as a bride. A strange personage succeeds--the celebrated "boy." The "boy" is a fancier at almost for the strange personage succeeds--the celebrated "boy." The feet and their clear, long stride, the polish of her healthy skin, and the ex-ceeding wickedness of her half-emotional eye, more will and more power than belongs to the best of beasts around her. This is Flora Temple, by accident in the park, to harness, and her movements park, to harness, and her movements are in no single degree unlike that an-cient suppleness and daring which made her invincible. Strangely enough, the driver behind her is Mr. Frank Ally, the owner of the rising favorite Dexter. No less remarkable is the succeeding exhibition of a span of beautiful little ponies, driven by a child. They are selected from five which she possesses. A VERY LITTLE WHIP. They belong to Miss Agatha Fortu-

nata Yeaton, of Brooklyn, who, though only four years of age, handles the ribbons over a pair of ponies with the skill of an adept. One of the ponies is an Arabian, and can trot a mile in less than four minutes. Three of the others are from Calcutta, and the only ones of the kind in this country, and the other is of a Scotch breed. This last one Miss Yeaton rides as well as drives.

The son of H. B. Claffin, Stewart's business rival, passes by directly; his team is among the best on Brooklyn team is among the best on Brooklyn Heights. When Mrs. August Belmont returns from Europe shortly, the splen-did landau now being built for her will be seen on the park; it will cost twenty-five hundred dollars, and may outrank any of our metropolitan equipages. We see, however, Mrs. Lomaline directly, whose whip is certified on the top of her whose whip is carried on the top of her

So goes the grand caravan upon the grand drive, and so truly do our ladies enter into the sport of holding their nags and comparing their points, that we have lately heard of a new amusement for the sex. LADIES GAMBLING IN HORSES

The passion among our young ladies for the park and a good turnout has made very many of them hazardous in affairs of chance. At the Paterson races, now proceeding, our best circles were represented and in these there were real betting books circulated, the daughters and wives of our first families, in the A leader of the under world, in Mrs.

Irene McCready, of New Hampshire and Fourteenth street, swings in with the grande monde, accompanied by two of her available daughters; Mrs. Mc-Cready is a good judge of a horse, and appears to better advantage by day than the ladies of the monte, whose double roans are still very strong and showy. SOME PICTURES OF THE DRIVE. All that we have described above may be seen every day by those curious to observe the best of our republican equipages and the handsomest, as well this is the most derived into the avenue, her coaches almost rival the magnificence of her parlor curtains. Have those par-lor curtains ever been sufficiently re-marked? Like the entire furniture of her palace in brown stone, they were imported, and they are certainly rich imported. The sufficiently re-ther balace in brown stone, they were imported. The sufficiently re-ther balace in brown stone, they were imported. The sufficient store is such elegance and be seen nowhere in such elegance and the sufficient store in such elegance and the sufficient store the sufficient store the sufficient store s so often as in our Central Park. For a picture of a spirited equestrenne, such as shall make the autumn we are living upon ivory. Her team is a span, bay and white, generally, and she has the circular glasses before her two thousand dollar Clarence drawn back, to show the excellence of all within. A REST IN THE CARAVAN.
