Miscellaneous.

The Haunted Belfry. Ghost stories and old wives tales were never looked upon by me with any other feelings that of contempt and utter incredulity. My nature is unideal to the last degree; it is hard and practical as my father's was before me. When I was a mere boy L made no more scruple of wandering among the tombstones of Schnaupflyn church vard at dead of night than I would of going to the well for a pail of water in broad day. I used to think I should like very much to have a ghost, ten yards high, all in white, come and sit down by me upon old Herr Schnauf's tomb some cheerful evening in November, and hold a comfortable chat with me on the subject of demonology; but I had no hope that it ever would do so, because I utterly disbelieved in the existence of any thing of the sort.

The haunted belfry stood upon the roof of a stone building in my native Schnaupflyn, known as the Gross Haus, which, on its part, stood at the head of the broad street in our village known as Makeben avenue-after old Makeben Schnaupf, from Todstadt, am Rhein, who came to America many, many years ago, and settling here, gave name to the village also. He made cigars for a living in the old country, and having got together a fortune of some five hundred dollars in that fragrant business by the time he was forty years old, Herr Schnaupf married him a wife, came to this country, bought him some wild land in the woods, built him alog cabin. and established the basis of an aristocthe shape of the Schnaupfs of Schnaupflyn aforesaid. These descendants, however, owing to that disagreeable legend of the haunted belfry, (or to some other behalf of my story, and may therefore be passed by as a profound mystery,) had not for a great number of years chosen to occupy the old stone building. although Herr Makeben had erected it for a family mansion, and had occupied t as such for a number of years. Nor had these descendants even taken pains to keep the Gross Haus in repair. At the earliest time of which I have any recollection of it (which was when I was a very small boy) its windows were all blown out, its chimneys clogged with rubbish, its winding staircases and the boards of its floors half rotted away, the the dark and mouldy basement.

Rebecca used to tell it me in those nights by the kitchen fire. Herr Schnaupf had a daughter, Margherita, who lived in the old Haus with him. He had also, in very truth, a half-score or so of other children, either at that time or later, but the legend does not say any thing at all about them. When Margherita was a blooming lass of sixteen she had the misfortune to fall, as blooming lasses of sixteen will, in love with a thriftless young scapegrace named Darius Debtin, son of a shoemaker in the village. After having treated his daughter to severe parental admonition on the subject, without the desired effect. old Schnaupf one day, in a high rage, locked Margherita up in the belfry and gave her a loaf of his ancestral black bread for company. Young Debtin, wandering disconsolate in the woods back of the Haus, on the following Sunday, was amazed at seeing a chunk of bread fall at his feet, in which was stuck a note from Margherita in the belfry, praying him to rescue her at any hazard. Young Debtin tore his hair out in handfuls, and stamped the ground in a rage, then went down to the village tayern and got drunk out of hand. Thus fortified, he proceeded to the Haus, boldly door with a ponderous stick with which he had provided himself, and demanded to see Herr Schnaupf. He was shown into the old gentleman's office, and that was the last that was ever heard of him. That night the bell up in the belfry began to toll dismally, and Herr Schnaupf went up in a terrible passion to trounce Margherita for disturbing his slumbers. There he found the poor girl dead, with the loaf of Schwartzbrod untouched by her side-save where she had broken off the piece which she had thrown down to Darius her lover. She had starved to death. After that, on each Sunday night the old bell set up its solemn tolling, much to Herr Schnaupf's distress; and at last unable to endure it longer, he strode up to the belfry, and assisted by one of his men, took the bell down and threw it to the ground, where it lay half buried but unbroken, and where I often saw it when I was a boy. You may ask why Herr Schnaupf put a belfry on the build ing he used as a residence; I answer that I do not know why he did it, but that he did do it is very certain, for there it stands to this day, as you may see whenever you come to Schnaupflyn. As for the legend itself, of course I never believed a word of it. Still less did I believe the nonsensical stories about the ghosts of the lovers wandering over the old Haus at night, or waving their arms from the empty belfry.

I determined to erect a chapel and gather a flock around me. While looking about for a site, I came upon the old Gross Haus-still unoccupid and in a wretched condition. I resolved to buy it and convert it to my uses, and did. I doubted if there were a dozen people in Schnaupflyn then who would recall the old bugaboo story that Rebecca told me by the kitchen fire except to laugh at it. For several weeks thereafter carpenters, masons, and painters were at work on the old Haus; partitions were taken down, floors were relaid, the walls were replastered, inside and outside nicely painted, and a lightning-rod put up, whose fork pointed heavenward from the peak of the old belfry. The bell was unearthed and hung in its old place, high up in the belfry—so high that it could not be reached without the aid of a ladder.

I had a full house at the opening of my chapel, and the people looked about the spacious lecture-room with great curiosity and interest. In the evening the congregation was still larger. The spiritualist fever had at this time begun to spread, and in Schnaupflyn it was at its height. I observed large numbers of the spiritualists in my audience; I have always noticed that these people are very ready to hear the views of their opponents, without being in the least affected by them. On this occasion I attacked their ideas sharply. It is not necessary to give any outline of my argument, for this sketch is not written to make proselytes to a faith which I and he retired in good order. Then I have since in great part rejected. I instanced, near the close of my sermon, the kinship these modern spiritualist notions bore to the old ghost-stories that frightened out grandmothers, and by way of illustration rehearsed the legend of the haunted belfrey. I had barely concluded it when boom! boom! boom! the old bell overhead began to Great consternation ensued among broad grin.

my hearers: There was a general rush for the door, amidst which one or two women fainted, and a great many of them shricked with affright. I closed the Bible before me and proceeded up the side stairway to the little gallery, where the bell-rope hung. A dozen men followed me. The rope dropped motionless, and still the bell tolled steadily and solemnly. Taking a lamp from its bracket I led the way to the belfry. The bell hung undisturbed, high up in the gloom overhead. It

My companions at that descended the stairway in a body, some with scattering haste, and others with what dignity they could conveniently bring to bear grinned Jo. on the effort. I returned to the belfry. and found that my presence was again the signal for a suspension of operations. A gust of wind extinguished the lamp. and then the bell began to toll again with redoubled energy. Shall I confess that for once my nerves were a little shaken? I do confess. I also descended the stairway.

"I wonder if he will dare to preach in the place again," I heard one say, as I passed by on my homeward way, after having instructed Thomas to nut out the lights and lock the chapel door. Next day, provided with a light ladder, I entered the belfry to institute a careful examination for the cause or causes which could have produce the HOW& WHERE TO GET A CHEAP FARM. phenomenon of the previous night. Then I locked the attic door and put the matter. I have nailed down the scuttle. Hold your tongue about it that's all. "Yes, sir," said Tom, with such an expression of utter bewilderment in his countenance that I was bewildered myself. It was clear enough that he knew nothing at all about the business.

I caused a notice to be inserted in the great wooden steps that once led up to Schnaupflyn Advocate, which appeared the lofty front door also decayed and on Wednesday, to the effect that the quite gone; but its sturdy stone walls Rev. the so-called spiritualists concerning said disturbance.

You should have seen the crowd that thronged my little chapel when Sunday evening came. The aisles were literally large and the solution of the solu The legend ran in this wise, as our evening came. The aisles were literally packed with persons standing, and even the steps leading to the low platform that served me as a pulpit were occupied as seats. The very chair behind me I permitted to be taken by a feeble looking widow woman of the name of Snuffle, who had known me when I was a boy, and who had lately become a trance-medium, as I had been informed, who removed the chair to a point as remote from where I stood as she could possibly get it—which was not off the platform, however.

"For all the manifestations of the sosimple explanation. I may not know in every instance precisely what that explanation is, but I know that it exists, and that it is in no way within the realm of the supernatural. In every case these phenomena are either produced by certain forces of nature with which we are not yet sufficiently familiarized, but which the onward march of intellectual discovery will ultimately unfold to us, as it has unfolded the mysteries which now serve us through the telegraph and the steam-engine; or mounted the tall steps, rapped at the they are nothing more than a trick; conceived of roguery, for purposes of gain or amusement. The mysterious ringing of the bell over this chapel on last Sunday night has been seized upon with peculiar avidity by these spiritualists, and a hob-goblin legend of the early settlement days of this county has been revived to give color to these whimsical and preposterous imaginings of a diseased fancy. But I have examined into the causes of the interruption of last Sunday evening, and have taken measures which will prevent a repetition of the occurrence. I have laid the ghost-I have exorcised the spirit-and I have done it with such simple means as a hammer and nails. If these sounds again disturb you I give my spiritualist friends permission to build up their beliefs to the highest alitude. But in the meantime --'

Boom! boom! boom! The bell was tolling again. What could this mean! I paused in momentary consternation. Possibly my face

"Glory to God!" cried Mrs. Snuffle the trance-medium, rising and stretch ng her hands over the agitated congregrtion, with her eyes upturned in an ecstasy. "I see, I see! The spirit of a beautiful woman is in the belfry! She floats in the air! Her hand rests on the iron tongue of the old bell, and its reverberations answer her touch Hark! I see another! It is the shadowy from

I heard no more; for slipping out of the church by the private door at the back of the pulpit, I ran to the foot of the old sycamore, and quietly took off my coat and boots. Then I went up into the tree, climbing in silence to ward the swaying top. "Oh! oh! oh!" cried in accents of

said, as I came up to them, for there were three, and they were beginning to crawl out upon the branches, so that I feared they might fall and get hurt: 'nobody shall treat you ill. Come down and do as I bid you, and I will give each of you a silver dollar." When they got to the foot of the tree and found that I wanted them to go in to the chapel with me, they held back. "Afore all them folks!" cried Jo. Snuffle; "jings!" But the money was a tremendous temptation whose force there was no resisting. The trio followed me into the church, where Mrs. Snuffle (the mother of Jo.) had just finished her harangue, and Mr. M'Moll, a prominent spiritualist of the village, was about to follow her in a few remarks.

"The monstrous audacity of the reverend Henry Smith," he commenced, "who growed up in this village as I may say-"

Here I tapped him on the shoulder produce I my boys.

"I make no apology my friends," said I, " for introducing in this manner the boys you see at my side. The degree of importances that has been attached to the performances for which they are responsible, justifies me in producing them. Joseph, you may tell the ladie and gentlemen what made the bell ring."
"Pull'n th' string," said Jo., with a

"Go out said I; "tell us all about it." Mother, she"—said Jo; twisting his cap in his hand, and addressing himself to me in preference to "all them folks" -"mother, she took on so about it when they said you's agoin' to preach yere, an' said how't she b'leved th' spurrits d ring th' ol' bell, me an' them two," pointing with his cap to his juvenile companions, "laid out for some fun. I got inter the belfry an' tied my kitestring onter th' clapper, an' throw'd the ball down t' Ike, an' he went up th' tree struck its last note as the light shone with it an' tied it onter a lim, an' when night come we went up an' pulled itdidn't we, Ikey 2"

> Ikey nodded vehemently. 'How did you get into the belfry, Joseph?" I asked. "Shinned it up th'lightnin' rod,'

Then I permitted the boys to depart the way they came, after receiving their promise to meddle with the bell no more and continued my sermon. Fortified by the case in hand, I proceeded with a line of convincing argument, which, however eloquent, I will refrain from putting into the story. And although it is to be confessed that I did not extinguish and destroy the spiritalists of Schnauflyn, who still flourish as of yore, I did completely and satisfactorily lay the ghost of the haunted belfry.

COOPER'S RED LION HOTEL, WEST KING STREET, CONVIGENIZED MEDICATED INHALATION.

The inhalations are breathed directly into the lungs, and through them carried into the blood, expelling all impurities from the system and healing any and every disease with which it may come in contact. A few inhalations will change the color of the blood from a dark to a bright red. In cases of paralysis the circulation can be restored immediately, in almost every instance. In cases of consumption this method has been attended with the best results; its action upon the lungs being direct and immediate, it gives the patient Just what he wants, viz: oxygen, of which he cannot get enough from the atmosphere, owing to the clogged and congested condition of the lungs. Of course there are cunsed which cannot be cured. Yet there are hundreds that have been given up as incurable, who have only to breathe oxygen to have new life through into them. This is a compound medicated inhalation. It is perfectly harmless, having been administered to thousands of patients with the happiest results. The e inhalations are unlike any other ever given for remedial purposes, and can be obtained only at the offices which we have established in various parts of the country. An office will be established in every city in the State. OXYGENIZED MEDICATED INHALA-TION.
