RELIGIOUS.—The Opening Service in honor of the Blessed Virgin, for the month of May, which is observed throughout the Catholic World as a special service, took place at St. Mary's Church, Vine street, last evening, in the presence of a crowded congregation. The church was appropriately lecorated. At the west side of the altar was a rich canopy of embroidered satin, beautifully gilted; on either side of this were sused curtains of rich lace. In the centre of the canopy was a finely executed statue of the Blessed Virgin. Surmounting the the head was a gas jet in the shape of a semi-circle, and on each side were nintapers, all giving forth a brilliant light and adding much to the beauty of the scene Scattered among the tapers were several bouquets of choice flowers. The service was opened by a very appropriate and elo quent discourse by Rt. Rev. Michael Domence, Bishop of the Diocese of Pittsburg. His text was taken from the 46th and 47th verses of the 1st chapter of St. Luke: "My soul doth magnify the Lord, and my spiri hath rejoiced in God, my Saviour." The drift of the sermon, which was very at-tentively listened to throughout, was that it was reasonable to serve and honor the Mother of God. Immediately after the sermon a hynm was sung, and the new statue of the Blessed Virgin blessed by the Bishop. The services were concluded by nediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

MISHLER'S HERB BITTERS.—The fame nd the rapid sale of Mishler's Herb Bitters s not confined to Lancaster city or county, where they have been so long used and so avorably known. Their reputation is rapdly becoming as wide as the Union itself. Since the end of the rebellion they have been making their way, by virtue of their intrinsic merits, to all parts of the South.-Everywhere, where humanity suffers from lisease, they will yet extend their healing influence, bringing health and happiness to those who suffer under the many ills to which flesh is heir. The greatly increasing demand for his Bitters Dr. Mishler is able to meet fully. He has enlarged his manufactory to treble its former capacity. Some questions admit of debate, others are setled beyond all controversy. Such is the case with Mishler's celebrated Herb Bitters They are universally admitted to be superior to any preparation of the kind ever offered to the public.

THE LATEST STYLE OF HEAD DRESS. The female head, writes a Paris correspondent, has become a sort of museum for gold bands, butterflies and pendulous wreaths which hang under the chin, for which we may thank the French Empress and her train of court imitators. On the forehead of the fair one may be seen a number of small curls with a comic twist, while the back of the head displays an enormous lump of hair, which instead of being kept together by the cabbage net of three or four nonths ago, is now allowed to assume a more wild and picturesque aspect. The Dearing Murder.

The Trial of Antoine Probst. From Thursday's Age.

The trial of Antoine Probst for murder, commenced yesterday in the Court of Oyer and Terminer, before Judges Allison and Pierce. The fact of the trial was widely known, and by eight o'clock yesterday morning an anxious crowd was gathered in the neighborhood of the Court-room, for the neighborhood of the Court-room, for the purpose of affecting an entrance, it pos-sible, or at least securing a glance at the prisoner as he was taken from the van to the dock. The experience of the previous Wednesday when, without any previous announcement, the Court-room was crowdannouncement, the Court-room was crowded, induced the authorities to guard against a repetition of the scene. The gates and entrances leading to Independence Square were in charge of policemen, who excluded all but those haying business in the Court. While the crowd was thus prevented from getting inside, the more daring of the throng perched themselves upon trees and awning posts. The windows of the houses in the vicinity had their complement of the curious. A few minutes before 10 o'clock Probst was brought into Independence Square, by the Walnut street gate, and from thence escorted to the Court-room. He was calm, and in nowise affected by the demonstrations of the crowd. Inside the Court-room, while some difficulty was experienced in providing accommodations for the memore of the lower was weetened. n providing accommodations for the mem sers of the bar, there was considerable less of a crowd than during the trial of ordinar cases. The arrangements of the police had effectually excluded the habitual lounger of the Court

John P. O'Neil and J. A. Wolbert, the counsel appointed by the Court, were in at-tendance for the prisoner. After the usual formalities of opening the Court and calling

Mr. Mann said: May it please the Court
On the 18th day of this month, the Grand Inquest, inquiring for the city and county of Philadelphia, brought into this Court eight bills of indictment. In each bill Antoine Probst, the prisoner at the bar, is charged with murder. On the same day he charged with murder. On the same day he was arraigned upon all these bills of indictionent, and he declined to plead upon such arraignment. He asked time in order to consider his plea. The Court then, upon the motion of his counsel, fixed this day, allowing him until to-day in order to prepare his plea, and I now call upon him to say whether he is ready to plead.

Mr. O'Neill—May it please the Court.—My colleague and myself have conferred with the prisoner upon these sight sengrate. My colleague and myself have conferred with the prisoner upon these eight separate charges contained in the bills of indictment, and we are now prepared to say that he is ready to plend to each of the bills.

District Attorney Mann—I will therefore ask you to direct the clerk to read to him again the bill No. 380, in which Antoine Probst is charged with the murder of Christopher Dearing, and ask him to make his plea.

The bill was read, and Probst pleaded

The bill was read, and Probst pleaded not guilty, and gave, in accordance with the instructions of his counsel, the usual answer, that he would be tried by "God and my country,"

And now, April 25, 1866, the prisoner at the bar having pleaded "Not Guilty," and for trial having put himself on the country, the District Attorney, for the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, replies that he is guilty, and for the trial of said issue doth the like. Mr. O'Neill—I ask that the prisoner's

He has considered to charge, and now asks that before going o trial on this bill he be allowed to plend that out this bill he be allowed to plend ) the other bills. Mr. Mann—I ask the Court to decide the notion I have made, That has precedence, The Court will bear in mind that on the 18th The Court will bear in mind that on the 18th of April the prisoner was arraigned upon the bill to which he has now entered his plea of not guilty. He then declined to plead to it. He was then arraigned upon another bill and he declined to plead, and so on until all the bills were gone through with. Had I obtained a plea on the 18th of April upon this bill of Indictment, upon which he was first arraigned, I might or might not have asked for his arraignment on the other bills. I would have secured an issue which I was desirous of obtaining at an early day in order to try speedily.

an issue which I was desirous of obtaining at an early day in order to try speedily. That issue is now made—an issue between the Commonwealth and the prisoner, and I apprehend that is the first thing to be dis-posed of, Judge Allison—We think the proper course is to dispose of this bill, before the defendant is called upon to plead to another bill.

The prisoner was now informed that the urors were to be called.

Mr. O'Neill interrupted this, and said—I

He is willing to enter a pleu of guilty of murder upon the bill charging him with the murder of Cornelius Curvy. He is not dispessed der of Cornelius Carey. He is not disposed to meet this other issue—or rather he is dis-posed to prevent it. He would wish that his plea be taken and the Judgment of the his plea be taken and the Judgment of the Court be pronounced upon it. That being done, the end and aim of this proceeding is fulfilled, and justice will be met in the course which he has instructed us to take. We leave it to your Honors to say what shall be done.

Judge Allison said he could not control the District Attorney in the exercise of his discretion as to which bill he will call for triat.

He seemed, however, to watch the proceedings with some interest. At all times he bere the gazo of the spectators unflinchingly, and did not munifest any concern about it. After the additional jurors are selected this morning, which it is presumed will occupy but a few minutes, the case will be opened by Chas, N. Mann, who will detail the character of the proof which the Commonwealth is prepared to offer connecting the prisoner with the murder of Christopher Dearing. It will be shown that Probst had been at work on the farm, and was missing the prisoner with the murder of Christopher Dearing. It will be shown that Probst had been at work on the farm, and was missing when the body of Mr. Dearing and the other victims were found; and that when arrested he was in the possession of Mr. Dearing's clothes. Besides that, it will be prowed that he sold other property of the murdered man which was carried off after the murder. Some of this, the Commonwealth will show was seen with Probst on the evening of the day the murders were committed. The counsel for the people will argue from the proof touching the articles referred to that Probst had not any accomplice but that the murderer of the whole eight persons was the work of one man.

The defence will not call any witnesses, and all that counsel can do is to argue against the presumption that all the murders were committed by the prisoner, from his arrest down to the time of his arraignment, adhered to the story of an accomplice, admitting that he killing of the others. It was supposed that the popular defence in such cases, that of homicidal insanity, would be made, but we learned from an authentic source yesterday, that it will not, and that the counsel will solely depend upon the assumed want of probability that all the murders were committed by Probst.

The trial will, no doubt, be concluded on

The trial will, no doubt, be concluded or The trial will, no doubt, be concluded on Friday or early on Saturday. The same admirable police arrangements will be continued to-day as were carried out yesterday. Among the witnesses in attendance was Mrs. Dolan, the mother of Mrs. Dolan, Mr. Theodore Mitchell, owner of the farm, several of the owners of the farms adjoining that where the murder was committed, and two or three of the persons to whom Probst sold, or offered to sell, articles that he had carried off. The coroner and physicians were also present.

were also present. From Friday's Ledger.
The trial of Antoine Probst was continued From Friday's Ledger.

The trial of Antoine Probst was continued yesterday. The excitement in and around the Court room was as great as ever. The crowd collected around the Square at least an hour before the opening of the Court, and when the van with Probst appeared at the Walnut street gate, he was greated with groans from the large concourse of people gathered together at that point. A strong body of policemen were on hand, and quickly took charge of the prisoner and escorted him through the Square to the Court room. The police arrangements had excluded the people from the Square, so that there was no difficulty in getting Probst through after once within the gate.

There was no apparent change in the prisoner's looks. The shorttime he has been confined has not been sufficient to give him the "prison pallor," so noticeable in those who have been excluded from the sunlight. There is a bloom on the checks of the prisoner, and at no time has his color been heightened or lessened, although he has frequently been placed in positions where he has both seen and heard the people when excited at his appearance. During the trial, he remains almost motionless in the dock, his hands resting easily upon his knees, and his head creet. His eyes wander around the room, but the only peculiarity about the man is that his head does not follow the direction of his glance.

Early yesterday morning, and before the court was formally oponed, little Willio Dearing, the sole survivor of the family came in with his grandfather, and in going across the Court room he was obliged to pass immedirtely in front of the prisoner. Probst looked at him, and his eyes followed the lad until he reached his seat, but there was no perceptible change in his counte nance. Willie gave one quick glance at Probst as he passed, and then went on. At the recess Probst refused to eat any of the dinner provided, except a piece of pie.

At 10 o'clock in the morning the special venire for forty jurors was returned, and of those summoned thirty-seven answered.— In a short time the two additional jurors were obtained. The following were the gentlemen selected:—Michael Bright, merchant, $29 North Seventh street; James Bates, gentleman, 525 South Eleventh street.

Mr. Charles N. Mann opened the case for the Commonwealth, describing the murder, and stating the testimony to be offered.

As a guide to the jury in understanding the evidence, General Collis, at the request of the District Attorney, constructed a model of the farm, on a scale of a quarter of an inch to the toot. The relative positions of the different buildings are thus given, while a second model of the barn alone, is upon a larger scale, and made so that the roof can be raised, to show how the bodies were placed. bodies were placed.

The Commonwealth then began the examination of witnesses. We have notroom to give the testimony. It was simply a restatement by the witnesses of the horrible details which have already been laid before our renders.

From Saturday's Ledger.
Yesterday, the third day of the trial of Antoine Probst for the murder of Christopher Dearing, was attended with the same excitement that has marked the progress of the case throughout. As usual, a large crowd collected at an early hour in the neighborhood of the Square, on Sixth St. and on Walnut St. The probability that the van would be driven to the entrance on Walnut St., drew the greater part of he concourse to that point, and when the prisoner arrived, at half-past nine o'clock, the street was completely blocked up with people, and as Probst left the van he was greeted with grouns as decided as on former occasion. He was excerted through the Square, and before being taken into the Court room, he was passed to the west door, so that the crowd on Sixth street could see him. From Saturday's Ledger.

Here again his presence was the signal for another series of grouns. Probst looked at the crowd, and when one of the tipstaves referred to the excitement, Probst replied that he didn't care for the crowd, as he knew they would kill him in about halfa minute. Probst still were an unconcerned appearance, and, at one stage of the trial was ance, and, at one stage of the trial was ready to join in the laugh created by the odd expression of a witness. He sat comready to join in the laugh created by the odd expression of a witness. He sat composedly in the dock, creet and at ease, and during most of the day kept his cyes fixed upon the witness on the stand. In the afternoon, when little Willie was examined the lad was placed on a chair in order to be seen. He was then in plain view of the spectators. The sight of the sole survivor of the Dearing family created a profound sensation, and all eyes were directed to the prisoner, to ascertain the effect produced upon him. No change was perceptible, and during the child's examination he kept his eyes fixed upon him, and his face wore the same listless air that characterized it when less interesting testimony was being heard. Throughout the day the court-room was well filled, and among the spectators were a number of females, who came to gratify their curiosity, and who spectators were a number of females, who came to gratify their curiosity, and who were obliged for the most of the day to stand in the crowd. Outside the court-room the crowd continued throughout the day. This was especially the case on Sixth street, although nothing was to be seen until the Court adjourned.

The Commonwealth concluded its exammation of witnesses early in the afternoon. The defence had no witnesses to call, and offered no rebutting testimony. By agreement, Mr. Dwight summed up on the part of the Commonwealth. At the conclusion of his speech Court adjourned. He closed of his speech Court adjourned. He closed his address at 40 clock. The prisoner was then removed amid great excitement of the people gathered on Sixth sireet.

From Forney's Sunday Press From Forney's Sunday Press.
On Saturday the trial of the nurderer of the Dearing family was concluded,
At twenty minutes past two o'clock the case was given to the Jury, and they retired to deliberate upon their verdict. The Court remained in session, and during the absence of the Jurors, the prisoner was the observed of all the spectators who were anxious to ascertain if he had in the least been affected by the powerful address of the District Atby the powerful address of the District At by the powerful address of the District At-torney. He was calm and unmoved.

At fifteen minutes of three o'clock the jury returned. They had been absent long enough to visit their rooms on Fifth street, but there appeared to have been no delay in reaching a verdict.

Judge Allison said that he hoped every person Dresont would recollect that this way.

Judge Altison said that no noped ever person present would recollect that this wa not a town meeting, and that a court-roon was not the place for the expression of ap proval or censure. Any one discoveres proval or censure. Any one discovered violating the decorum of the court-room would be dealt with severely. After this warning, in the midst of a breathless silence Mr. Moore inquired:

"Gentlemen of the Jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

upon a verdict?"
Foreman of the jury—"We have."
Mr. Moore—"Gentlemen of the jury, stand up. Prisoner, stand up!"
Both obeyed the order.
Mr. Moore—"Jurors, look upon the prisoner. Prisoner, look upon the jurors, dentlemen of the jury, how say you. Do you find Anton Probst, the prisoner at the bar guilty of the felony of nurder whereof he stands indicted, in manner and form as he stands, or not guilty?"
Foreman of the Jury—"Guilty!"
Mr. Moore—"Of what degree?"
Foreman of the Jury—"G murder of the first degree!" ast degree!"
Mr. Wolbert asked to have the Jury polled.

Air. Wolbert asked to have the jury polled. This was done, each juror announcing his verdict in a clear and distinct voice.

After this the verdict was recorded in due form, Probst retaining his composure throughout the proceedings. If The verdict being recorded, Mr. Mann rose and said:

"May it please the Court, I desire now to give notice to the prisoner and his course!

give notice to the prisoner and his counsel that on Tuesday next I will move that the judgment of the Court be entered, and that the sentence which the law affixes to this crime be passed upon the prisoner."

There was no response from the prisoner's counsel. Preparations were at once made for the removal of Probst to the van. The doors of the court room were closed to prevent the egress of those inside, while a strong posse of officers cleared the passage way on Sixth street. Great difficulty was experienced in accomplishing this, and it was not until after a liberal use of the mace that Sixth street was cleared. Probst was then brought out and placed in the van.

As usual, his appearance was the signal for repeated groms. The van was driven off rapidly, and the crowd slowly dispersed, And so ended one of the most memorable trials in the history of Philadelphia.

Great surprise has been expressed in some he sentence which the law affixes to thi trials in the history of Philadelphia.

Great surprise has been expressed in some quarters that Probst, the murdorer of eight human beings, should sit unmoved while the details of his fearful crime were being given to a jury empanneled led to try him for his life. People profess to be unable to understand how the man can day after day brave the scowling glances of an excited populace and not exhibit the slightest trace of emotion. Hundreds of spectators have been drawn to the court room daily for the purpose of watching the countenance of the of emotion. Hundreds of speciators have been drawn to the court room daily for the purpose of watching the countenance of the prisoner while the trial was progressing, and ail have been disappointed at the stolid indifference with which the man has heard all the testimony and witnessed the various exhibitions of popular feeling. But is it at all surprising?

The fact that Probst could coolly plan and deliberately accomplish the murder of eight persons, is sufficient to account for his indifference during the trial. The man who could be deaf to the plendings of helpless and unoftending infants, was not likely to be affected by the appearance of a crowd, nor by the recital of the details of his fearful work. If he had possessed the ordinary feelings and emotions of humanity, he would not have been suited to the bloody work he set out to accomplish on that fatal Saturday. Those who have the nerve to take human life can experience little difficulty in hiding from the public gaze all traces of emotion. The history of every murder trial, where the crime is associated with the idea of plunder, proves the fact. Berger, Armstrong, and a host of others, have sat calmly in the dock during their trial, and have heard their dooms without evincing any tremor or dismay. The first and only difficult step with these men was the commission of the murder. After that they could present to the public an appearance of calmness and composure.

Dr. Maggiel is the founder of a new Medical System! The quantitarians, whose vast internal doses enfecbio the stomach and paralyze the bowels, must give precedence to the man who restores health and appetite, with from one to two of his extraordinary Pills, and cures the most virulent sores with a box or so of his wonderful and all-healing Salve. These two great specifies of the Doctor are fast superseding all the stereotyped nostrums of the day. Extraordinary cures by Maggiel's Pills and Salve have opened the eyes of the public to the inefficiency of the (so called) remedies of others, and upon which people have so long blindly depended. Maggiel's Pills are not of the class that are swallowed by the dozen, and of which every boxful taken creates an absolute necessity for another. One or two of Maggiel's Pills suffices to place the bowels in perfect order, tone the stomach, create an hypottle, and render the spirits light and boyant

MISHLER'S BITTERS IN PHILADELPHIA The sale of Mishler's Celebrated Herb'Bitters in Philadelphia promises to grow to immense proportions. His agents there are kept busy by the incessant demands of those who are afflicted. There, as elsewhere, their great medical virtues are attesting themselves to the performance of multitudes of the most signal and remarkable cures. Every week Mr. Mish ler hears the report of the good the Bitters are doing from his agents. Some of the curve ef-fected are almost incredible. Numbers of these cases have already been alluded to. Only yesterday one of the Philadelphia agents of Dr Mishier called on him to arrange for receiving a much larger future supply. He reports the most rapid and wide-spread circulation of this extraordinary medicine, and attests to their wonderful curative powers:

REMARKABLE CURE OF CHRONIC RHEU-MATISM, REMARKABLE CURF OF CHRONIC RHEU-MATISM.

PHILLABELPHIA, April 26, 1806.

Not long since a colored man, affilieted, with Chronic Rheumatism in its worst form, having heard that Mishler's Herb Bitters, would cure that discuse, called at our store. He came hobbiding in on a pair of crutches, and was evidently suffering from intense pain at the time. His limbs were almost powerless, and the joints were stiffened and greatly swellen. He stated that he was poor, out of money, and unable to work in his present condition, Taking pity on him we gave him a bottle. In the course of a week he called again, evidently much better. We gave him another bottle. After using some three or four bottles he was able to throw aside his crutches and go to work. He is now a hale, hearty man, able to labor at digging collars, at which occupation he is employed. He has paid us for all the medicine he got, and is the most grateful man able.
