John Morgani.

How He Escaped from the Ohio Peni-tentiary. From the advance sheets of the forthoming life of John Morgan, the rebel "raider," written, we believe, by Basil Duke, we extract the following account of the escape of Morgan and his confederates from the Ohio Penitentiary. They had succeeded in breaking through the stone floor a hole large enough to admit the body of a man, and had reached the air chamber. The narrative pro

The method adopted, then, was for two or three to descend and go to work, while the others kept watch. In an hour or two a fresh relief would be put on, and the work would be kept up in this way throughout the day, until time of locking up arrived, except at dinner time, when every man who was away from the table had to give a reason for his absence. The work, conducted un-derground, was tedious and difficult, but all labored with a will. The candl which had been purchased and hoarded away, now did good service. Without them it would have been almost imposthem it would have been almost impossible to finish the task. A code of signals was invented to meet every contingency. By pounding a bar of wood upon the stone floor, those above communicated to those underneath information of every danger which threatened, and called on them to come forth, if necessary. The walls of the sir chamber were two or three feet thick, and built of huge stones. Two or three of built of huge stones. Two or three of these stones were removed, and a tunnel was run straight to the outer wall of the hall. Fortune favored the work at this juncture, and threw in their way an adequate tool with which to accomolish this part of their work. Some one had discovered lying in the yard through which we passed on our way to breakfast, an old rusty spade with a broken handle. It was at once determined that the said spade must be semineu that the said spade must be secured. Accordingly men were detailed and instructed in their respective parts, and at the first opportunity the spade was transferred to the air chamber, and put to work in digning up the transfer put to work in digging up the tunnel. This is the manner in which that valuable, the priceless, old, rusty, broken spade was gotten.

One man was selected to secrete the spade about his person—him I will call No. 1. He wore, for the occasion, a long, loose sack coat. Six or seven other men were his accomplices. It was a usual occurrence for those who were awaiting their turn at the washing troughs to their turn at the washing troughs to romp and ruffle with each other in the yard. The conspirators were, this morning, exceedingly frolicsome. At length No. 1 fell, apparently by an accident upon thespade, his accomplices tumbled in a heap upon him. No. 1 dexterously slipped the spade under his coat, and buttoned it up. He went into breakfast with it, and sat wonderfully straight, and carried it safely into the hall, and down into the air chamber.

down into the air chamber.

When the main wall of the hall was reached, the heavy stones of its foundation were removed in sufficient number to admit of the passage of a man. But it was then discovered that the tunnel led right under an immense coal pile It was necessary that this difficulty should be remedied; but how? With-ut a view of the ground just outside of the wall, no one could calculate how far, or in what direction to run a tunnel. so that when it was conducted to the surface all obstructions might be avoided. In this emergency, General Morgan engaged Scott in conversation about the remarkable escape of some convicts, which had occurred a year or two pre viously, and which Scott was very fond of describing. These convicts had climbed by the balconies, infront of the ranges of cells, to the ceiling, and had passed out through the skylight to the roof of the prison. Scott declared his belief that there were no two other men belief that there were no two other men on the continent who could perform the feat of ascending by the balconies. "Why," says General Morgan, "Cap-tain Sam. Taylor, small as he is, can Thereupon a discussion ensued, ending by Scott's giving Taylor permission to attempt it. Taylor, who, although very small, was as active as a squirrel, immediately commenced the comme sprang from one to the other of the bal-conies, until he reached the top one. He was one of the men who had been selected to escape with General Morgan, and comprehended immediately the latter's object in having him attempt this feat. It would afford him a chance to glance out of the windows at the ground ust beyond the wall. As he lessurely wung himself down, he studied "the position" carefully, and his observa-tions enabled them to direct the tunnel aright. Once during the tunneling, while Captain Hockersmith (another of the projectors of the plan) was at work under ground, Scott called for him, and seemed anxious to find him at once General Morgan's presence of mind prevented a discovery, or, at least, a strong suspicion of the plot from at once re-sulting from Hockersmith's absence. The General said to Scott, "Hockersmith is lying down in my cell; he is sick," and he requested Scott to examine and give his opinion upon a memorial which he proposed forwarding to Wash-ington. It was something regarding our removal to a military prison. Scott removal to a military prison. Scott (highly flattered by this tribute to his judgment) took the memorial, looked at it attentively for some minutes, and returned it, saying, "I think it will do first-rate." It did do. In the meantime, Hockersmith had been signaled, and had "come up," and he made his appearance complaining of a serious interesticies.

While the work wasgoing on, General Morgan and those who were to escape with him habitually slept with their faces covered and their hands concealed. This was done to accustom the night guard to take their presence in the cells for granted, by the appearance of the bulk upon the bed, without actually seeing them. This guard went the rounds at the expiration of every two hours during the night, and he would place his lantern close to each cell door, in order that the light should fill the cell and show the occupant. General Morgan used to say that a peculiar shud-dering and creeping of the flesh would assail him whenever this man approach. ed. He would frequently creep about with list slippers on his feet, and he moved then without the slightest noise He used to remind me of a sly, cruel, bloated, suspicious, night-prowling spider.

When the tunneling approached its completion, all the other necessary pre-parations were made. The prison-yard into which they would emerge from the tunnel, was surrounded by a wall twen-ty-five feet high, and means for scaling that had to be provided. There was ty-nve feet nigh, and means for scanng that had to be provided. There was an inner wall running from the corner of the "East Hall" to a smaller building, in which some of the female convicts were imprisoned, but it was comparatively low, and they anticipated little difficulty in getting over it. The coverlids of several beds were torn into strips, and the strips were plaited int. a strong rope nearly thirty feet in length.

A strong iron rod, used for stirring the fires in the stoves, was converted into a hook, and the rope was attached to it. Rope and hook were taken down into the air-chamber, where all the "valuables" were stored.

General Morgan had managed to get a suit of citizen's clothing, and the six men who were going to escape with him were similarly provided. The Warden had prohibited the introduction into the prison of uniform clothing, but occasionally allowed plain suits to be re ceived. The General had also gotten a card of the schedule time on the Little Miami Railroad, and knew when the train left Columbus, and when it arrived at Cincinnati—for this he paid fifteen dollars, all the money used in effecting his escape.

Despite the strict search instituted when we first entered the Penitentiary when we list entered the Pententiary, several of the party had managed to secrete money so that it was not found. This was now divided among the seven who were to escape. These were, besides Morgan, Captaiu Thomas H. Hines, Ralph Sheldon, Sam. Taylor, Lane, Panet Honger Holdon, and the control of the cont Jacob Bennett, James Hockersmith and Jacob Bennett, James Hockersmith and Gustavus McGee. It is plain that, as each man was locked in a separate cell, and could not get out of it by the door, without an interview with the night guard, it was necessary to cut on opening into the air-chamber, through the ing into the air-chamber, through the floor of each cell, from which each one of the seven would escape. If these apertures were cut from the top of the floors of the cells, the risk of detection would be proportionately increased; so an accurate measurement of the distance between the cells was taken, and with Hine's cell as a point of departure, it was easy to calculate where to commence cutting from underneath, in order that the floors of all these perticular cells should be perforated. A thin crust, only of the cement was left, but to all outward appearance the floor was as sound as ever.

By means of an arrangement which had been perfected for obtaining all absolutely necessary articles, each one of the party about to escape had procured a stout, sharp knife—very effective weapons in case of surprise and an attempt to stop their escape. When everything was ready, they waited several nights for rain—trusting to elude the vigilance of the guards more elude the vigilance of the guards more easily in the obscurity of such a night—and taking the chance, also, that the dogs which were turned loose every night in the yard, would be driven by the rain into their kennels, which were situated on the other side of the yard for the yard that the part that where they would one or the side. from that where they would emerge. Two or three days before the effort was made, General Morgan received a letter from an Irishwoman in Kentucky warning him not to attempt to make warning him not to attempt to make his escape, from which, she predicted, great evils to him would result. She alluded to his kindness to the poor in Lexington, and claimed that she was informed of the future in some supernatural manner.
On the 26th of November, General

Morgan learned that there had been a change of military commands at Colum-bus. Well knowing that this would be followed by an inspection of the prison and a discovery of the plot, he deter-mined that the effort should be made that very night. His own cell was in the second range, from which it was impossible to reach the air-chamber and tunnel, but the cell of his brother, Col. tunnel, but the cell of his brother, Col.
Richard Morgan, had been prepared for him, and when Scott tapped, as usual, on the stoye, as a signal for each man to retire to his cell, the exchange was effected. There was a sufficient resemblance between them to deceive a man who would not look closely, especially when they were seated with their faces turned away from the door.

At any rate, Scottand the nightguard were both deceived, and efforts were made by the occupants of the cells near to both of those, where close inspection would have been dangerous, to attract to themselves the attention of the guard when he went the rounds. As it was sespecially necessary, on this occasion, to know certainly when the night guard approached, small bits of coal had been sprinkled, just before the hour for locking up, on the floor of the first range, so that (tread as lightly as he would) the slinking cur could not help making a loud noise.

It had been arranged that, just after the twelve o'clock visit from the guard, Captain Taylor should descend into the air-chamber and give the signal under-neath the floor of each cell. Fortunate v, the only man who was vile enough iy, the only man who was viie enough to have betrayed the plan, was absent in the hospital. Six hours elapsed after the locking-in; regularly the night guard during that time went his rounds, aking an awful crackling as he pass along the lower range. Sixty-odd men lay awake, silent and excited—with hearts beating louder and blood rushing faster through their veins than the apreach of battle had ever occasioned erhaps the coolest of all that number were the seven who were about to incur the risk. Twelve o'clock struck, and the clang Twelve o'clock struck, and the clang of the bell seemed to be in the hall itself—the guard passed with his lantern—a few minutes elapsed (while the adventurers lay still lest he should slip back, and then at the signal they sprang from their beds; hastily stuffed flannel white. shirts with material prepared before-hand, and made up bundles to lie in their beds and represent them. Then their beds and represent them. stamping upon the floor above the ex-cavations, the thin crust of each gave way and they descended into the air chamber. They descended that the an elamber. They passed one by one along the tunnel, antil the foremost man reached the terminus, and with his knife cut away the sod, which had of course been left untouched. Then they emerged into the open air.

Voices --- What They Indicate.

There are light, quick, surface voices that involuntarily seem to utter the "It won't do to tie to." slang, "It won't do to the to." Phe man's voice may assure you of his strength of purpose and reliability, yet the tone contradicts his speech.

Then there are low, deep, strong siege where the words seem ground out, as if the man owed humanity a grudge, and meant to pay it some day The man's opponents may well tremble and his friends may trust his strength of purpose and ability to act.

There is the coarse, bolsterous, dictatorial tone, invariably adopted by vulgar persons, who have not sufficient cultivation to understand their own in-ignificance. There is the incredulous tone, that is full of a covert sneer, or a secret "You can't dupe me" intonation. can't dupe me" intonation.

There is the whining, beseeching voice, that says "sycophant" as plainly as if it uttered the word. It cajoles and flatters you—its words, "I love you; I admire you; you are everything you should be."

Then there is the tender, musical, ompassionate voice, that sometime ones with sharp features, but always with a genuine benevolence.

If you are full of affectation and preense, your voice proclaims it.

If you are full of honesty and strength of purpose, your voice proclaims it.

If you are cold, and calm, and firm,
and consistent, or fickle, and foolish, and deceptive, your voice will be equal-y truth telling. You cannot wear a mask without its being known that you are wearing one.

You cannot change your voice from a natural tone without its being known hat you are doing so.

A CCOMPLISHED AT LAST!

A REAL SAFETY BRIDLE!!
Can be used on Single or Double Harness, or a single line; is durable, there being no gum to break in cold weather; is simple, it not requiring a Saddler to apply it; can be arranged in five minutes by any person; cannot get out of order; costs no more than an ordinary bridle, and, to sum up is the most effectual Safety Strap and Spring in use, it being impossible for a horse, when driven with it, to either kick, shy or run off, the Springs being impossible for a horse, when driven with it, to either kick, shy or run off, the Springs being impossible for a horse, when driven with it, to either kick, shy or run off, the Springs being impossible for a horse, when driven with it is always to be relied upon; does not chooke a horse when applied as some others do, but from the fact that simply drawing hard upon the reins applies the leverage from the top of the horse's mouth, it thus places the most victous kicker under the complete control of the driver. This most complete "Safety Bridle" was patented November 27th, 1806.
