erroneous ideas in regard to the value of fruits for table use.

Any soil that will yield a crop of corn, Any soil that will yield a crop of corn, potatoes, or garden vegetables, will produce atrawberries, and even good crops have been raised on soil that was considered too poor to produce almost anything else. They, however, require different treatment upon different soils, and some varieties also require different treatment from others. The first step is the preparation of the soil, which needs not necessarily be highly enriched, but thoroughly pulverized so as to be in fine, friable condition for planting, for which spring is the most favorable season. Planting may also be successful in September, and even in August, if there be sufficient moisture in the soil, and the same not too hot while the plants cessili in Septement, if there be sufficient moisture in the soil, and the same not too hot while the plants are being established. If good, strong plants are put in at the latter season, they will generally produce a moderate crop the following year; whereas spring plantings should, under no circumstances, be suffer-at the expense of the plant, as well as of the following year's crop.

There are three general systems practised in treating strawberry beds and plantations, from which none other can vary much. They are the stool, the row and the running or bed. The distance of planting is generally with a view to the after treatment. Plantings vary but little from the following distance upon the row: One to two feet, and rows from two to five feet apart. The running or bed system has proven most successful upon comparatively poor soils and with special varieties, such as Hovey's Seedling, Large Early Scarlet, Scotch Runner, &c. To be grown on the latter system, they are generally planted at the greatest distances above mentioned, and are permitted to run or spread untit the ground is nearly, or in some cases, entirely covered. at the expense of the plant, as well as o

For the stool system, the plants are set from twelve to fifteen inches on the row, and the rows from two to three feet apart, according to quality of soil and vigor of variety.
The after-treatment is altogether reversed The after-treatment is altogether reversed from the foregoing. The runners are kept off from the main plants altogether, and clean culture applied, which results in their stooling and covering the ground on the row, leaving simply a path for picking and working conveniently. For the latter system, Wilson's Albany, Degand, and similar strong varieties, are best adapted.

iem, Wilson's Albany, Degand, and similar strong varieties, are best adapted. The row system is a middle course between those just described. In this case the plants should be set from one to two feet on the row, and the rows about four feet apart. The earliest and strongest runners are so layered that they do not stand in closer proximity to each other than eight or nine inches, and until the bed is from two and a half to three feet wide, all runners appearing thereafter are kept off.

It is our opinion that if the latter method be adopted and properly pursued it will give more general satisfaction thay any other. The most simple way locarry it out is to plant about one foot apart on the row, then selecting two of the best runners from each plant, layer them in the opposite each plant, layor then in the opposite directions, taking all others from the main plant. As the young plants continue to grow larger, another from each of the latter in the same direction from the main one, keep all runners off thereafter for the season. Should any of the young plants at any time. Should any of the young plants at any time, indicate more vigor than the main or original ones, they should at once be detached. By this method the beds can easily be dressed from either side with a marrow hoe, drossartron einer sue with a merow nog if necessary, on account of weeds; neither will they be too wide for picking the fruit from either side. This plan, we have no doubt, would give more general satisfaction upon all soils and with a greater number of varieties them any other apon all soils and with a greater number of varieties than any other.

Mulching is an important part of strawberry culture, both for winter protection and keeping the fruit clean. In a winter with continuous snow upon the ground (such as the one yet searcely past) mulching would be unnecessary for protection; but experience has taught us that the chances are too few to depend upon nature chances are too few to depend upon nature to do everything when we can so easily make success doubly sure.

Everything considered, the strawberry can be grown with more-certainty than any other fruit crop with which we are acquainted, and in such quantities as should induce every person who has a rod of ground, to plant at least a portion of it with this desirable and delicious fruit. In order to make this matter more impressive it may not be amiss to call your attention to the following: Several years ago, a gentleman of responsibility, made a challenge (not yet accepted) in offering to stake one hundred dollars that be could grow more bushels of strawberries per acce than another can of dollars that he could grow more bushels of strawberries per acre than another can of potatoes; the soil being equal.

As there are so many valuable varieties at present, we deem it superfluous to recommend any one, two, or more that are in every respect superior to all others, especially as different varieties succeed best on different soils and in different sections of country. The Wilson's Albany, however, appears to have at present a more extensive reputation for hardiness and productiveness than any other. At the same time there are a number of varieties that are quite productive and far superior to it in quality. It is therefore to be hoped that a variety will be forthcoming having more desirable qualities than any that are now desirable qualities than any that are now before the public.

Judging by an approximation to the correctness of the foregoing, the following questions will naturally arise with many. If strawherries can be grown, in such quantities and with such case, what will become of the crop when everybody gets to growing them? How and where could sugar and cream enough be produced to use them all? Would it not cause much sickness, especially among children? and would not cholera be the consequence among adults? As though they could not be enten simple and alone, like other truits—as if the Creator and alone, like other truits—as if the Creator had erred in not adapting it to the human and arred in not adapting it to the human system without some artificial preparation. We will admit, that not only Strawberries, but other fruits—in themselves good and wholesome lood whom ripe and eaten in proper quantities and at proper times—if mixed up with foreign ingredients to tickle a perverted appetite, and eaten in improper quantities and at improper times, would be sufficient cause for cholera and many other ailments besides; but as we live in arrage of progress it is to be hoped that we may also improve in our distetic habits and customs—that we may yet learn that fruits are food, and so intended by the Creator; that they will, if properly used, make healthy blood, build up healthy tissue, bone and nussele, produce clearer brain, purer, more noble and exalted intellect, than a great many of the abnominable articles consumed at present as good and drink.

many of the abominable articles consumed at present as food and drink. Therefore, as soon as a sufficient quantity of fruits are produced, and at such prices as will induce a preponderance thereof into our daily food, we may safely hope for a great reduction of intemperance, a better state of morals (and let me be suffered to add) a higher standard of intellect.

In conclusion: An appeal to the ladies of Lancaster county, and to those of the city in particular, may not be out of place. As this society contemplates holding an exhibition of fruits, flowers, and early vegetables at about the height of the strawberry season we appeal to you, to act well your part in the enterprise.

nterprise, nerience has taught us at Marietta Experience has taught us at Marietta (where we have held exhibitions surpassing any ever held at Lancaster) that in order to be successful in such an enterprise, the services of the gentler sex can not be dispensed with, not only in the floral department—as they have also presented some of the finest fruits and vegetables—but in the former do they especially excel. They are greater admirers of flowers than men, and consequently take greater interest in their production and care. In arranging bourquets, who can do it so tastefully as they?

consequently take greater interest in their production and care. In arranging bouduets, who can do it so tastefully as they? How shall the articles be neatly and tidily arranged for exhibition unless they lend a helping hand? In fact, their presence in itself will add greatly in making the exhibition respectable.

The success, prosperity, and future usefulness of this Society, will greatly depend upon its first demonstration of this kind. For the sake of the fruit growing and fruit. consuming interest of this County, let us "leave no stone unturned" that may aid in making it what it ought to be; a Model Society. As it requires time and preparation to be successful in anything we undertake it would be proper to appoint committees of ludies from among the most enterprising of this City and County, and also of gentlemen, at an early day, who will take part and also encourage others to prepare for the occasion, even if it be but a single article. We would, in fact, prefer seeing many interests represented than large quantities by but few exhibitors.

Hoping that these hints will not prove fuile, the matter is respectfully submitted for your consideration.

The Johnstown Disaster.

The Surratt Case. semarkable Speech from But ler-Startling Developments.

On Tuesday there was another most re markable exhibition in Congress: Mr. Butler, of Massachusetts, asked and obtained unanimous consent to make a per-conal explanation. The time being limited sonal explanation. The time being limited to fitteen minutes, he stated that he caused to be placed on the desk of each member a copy of Mr. Bingham's speech the other day, in the personal discussion with himself, showing, in parallel columns, the speech as it appeared in the manuscript of the reporters and the speech as published in the Globe. The speech, as written, contained 589 words, and as printed it contained 1,047 words; and there were in the reporter's manuscript 252 erasures and altained 1,047 words; and there were in the reporter's manuscript 282 erasures and alterations. He had understood the rule to be that, in a personal debate, a member had no right to make any changes unless they were submitted to the member affected by them. That rule had been violated in this case. In the matter thus interpolated was this sentence: "What does the gentleman (meaning Mr. Butler) know of the evidence in the case, and what does he care for the evidence, when he thus assails the official conduct of those who constituted the court?" he court?' He would state the evidence on which he had the other day made the statement that Mrs. Surratt was improperly convicted. He held in his hand the printed report of the trial, and had examined it with great the trial, and had examined it with great care long before, because this was no sporadic thought of his. It was the result of careful and anxious investigation for another and a different purpose, to see who were in the great conspiracy. The gentleman (Mr. Bingham) had said he was the advocate of the United States on that trial. That was a great mistake. He was the special judge advocate, whose duty it was to protect the rights of the prisoner as well as of the United States, and to sum up the evidence and state the law. But there was one piece of evidence within the gentleman's (Mr. Bingham's) knowledge which he had not produced on that most momentous trial. When Booth was captured by Lieuten ant-Colonel Conger there was, said Mr. Butler taken from his pocket a diary like When Booth was captured by Lieuten ant-Colonel Conger there was, said Mr. Butler, taken from his pocket a diary like the one I now hold in my hand (holding up a small morocco covered pocket-diary), in which he set down day by day his plans, his thoughts, his motives and his excuses. That was put into the possession of the government, but it was not laid before the Military Commission, although the gentleman (Mr. Bingham) did lay before the court Booth's tobacco pipe, spur, knife, and other articles found on his person.

The diary was not produced. That diary appears now before our Judiciary Committee, and let me say here that I did not obtain my information from that committee.

appears now before our Judiciary Committee, and let me say here that I did not obtain my information from that committee. With the eighteen pages of entries made prior to the time of Mr. Lincoln's assassination absent. The edges show that these pages were all cut out. What I want to know is—First. Was that diary whole when it came into the hands of the government? Second. Whether it was good Judgment on the part of those who were prosecuting the assassins of Abraham Lincoln to put in a tobacco pipe, found in Booth's pocket, as evidence against the prisoners, while the diary in Booth's own handwriting, detailing all the particulars of his crime, was withheld? I did not charge the able, brave and gallant soldiers who sat on that court with any wrong.

They did not see the diary. They did not know of its existence. If they had they might have given a different account of the matter. Who spollated that book? Who suppressed that evidence? Who caused that innocent woman to be hanged, while he had in his pockets the diary which would have shown at least what was the idea and what were the thoughts of the main conhave shown at least what was the idea at what were the thoughts of the main con-spirator? There is still remaining in that what were the thoughts of the main conspirator? There is still remaining in that dlary a memorable instance, written but a few hours before Booth's death. I quote from memora: "I have endeavored to cross that fotomac five times, and failed; I propose to return to Washington and give myself up, and clear myself from this great crime." How clear himself by giving himself up, and disclosing his accomplies? Who were they? Who spoliated that book after it got into possession of the government, if it was not spoliated before?

Why was not Lieutenant-Colonel Conger allowed to go on and state what had been found on Booth's body? The questions were cerefully put to him, so that he should not be misunderstood, about this book. He identifies the knile, pair of pistols, holster, tobacco pipe, cartridges, a bill of exchange, etc., but he was nowhere asked, "Wore these all the articles that were found on Booth?" If he had been asked that question he would have answered that he took Booth's dlary from his pocket, as he lay tion he would have answered that he took Booth's diary from his pocket, as he lay there gasping in death. I do not know what would have been the verdict of the Military Commission if that evidence had been produced. That evidence, found on Booth's person, should have been produced. I understand the theory to! be, that the reason it was not produced was, lest Booth's glorification of himself should go into the case. I think that a lame excuse. If an assassin can glorify himself, let him do it; there is no danger of it. there is no danger of it.

Therefore, I again say, here was a most remarkable piece of evidence found on the body of the great conspirator, concealed. I will take that back. I mean it was not put forward; not brought before the great public mind. I believe that piece of evidence would have shown what in my judgment the whole case now shows, that Booth, up to a certain hour, meant a capture and abduction of Mr. Lincoln, and that he changed his courses and expected to assessing them. duction of Mr. Lincoln, and that he changed his purpose and resorted to assassination. Mrs. Surratt may or may not have known of the change of purpose. What I find fault with in the Judge Advocate, who did not sum up for the prisoner, is that there was no notice by him brought to the mind of the Court in his very able but very bitter argument against the prisoner, of this change of purpose. If Mrs. Surratt did not know of this change, she would have had no knowledge of the intended assassination, and therefore could not have been convicted.

nation, and therefore could not have been convicted.

These are the reasons why I say I am glad the blood of that woman, whether she were innocent or guilty, is not on my head. I meant by no means to say a word against the officers who composed that commission. They were military men, who relied for the law upon the Judge Advocate, who thought they had all the facts before them, but before whom all the facts were not put. I do not mean to say that they had.

The point which I made, and the point which should stand made before the country, is that all the testimony was not before that

The point which I made, and the point which should shand made before the country, is that all the testimony was not before that tribunal. If all the testimony had been presented we should have been able to pursue the accomplices, and to find out who it was that changed Booth's purpose from capture to assassination; who it was that was to profit by the assassination, and that would not profit by the capture of Mr. Lincoln in case the bullet made a vacancy. In some aspects of the case that diary might not have been legal testimony, but its moral evidence would have carried conviction to the mind of everybody, because it was the dying declaration of a man who, assassin though he were, was telling the truth between himself and God. How was Booth, by coming back to Washington, going to clear himself of the great crime committed. That question still remains. Were the eighteen pages of Booth's diary gone when it came into the possession of the learned Judge Advocate? If so, why did he not inquire what became of them? whether Lleutenant-Colonel Conger gave the book to somebody; whether it went from his hands into other hands, and whose knife it was that cut out those leaves? I should not have pursued this matter further except that the gentleman (Mr. Bingham) charged me with having made the assertion I did without an examination of the evidence. He has chosen to bring the matter here—not I; and I desire now that in sertion I did without an examination of the evidence. He has chosen to bring the matter here—not I; and I desire now that in some form this matter shall be fully and thoroughly investigated.

Mr. Blingham asked and obtained leave to reply. He concluded as follows:

No. sir. I do not care about it. Having refused to let me inspect the book on which he based his charges, he may now imitate the example of the vision seen in the Apocalypse, and turn around and eat it. calypse, and turn around and eat [Laughter.] The gentleman talks o spoliated book. Who spoliated it? T spoliated book. Who spoliated it? That is about as interesting a query as that to which I referred the other day—"Who killed Cock Robin?" Who knows that it was spoliated? If John Wilkes Booth tore pages of it, was that spoliation? The gentleman's words are as impotent as they are unwarranted. "Let the galled jade wince, my withers are unwrung." I challenge him and dare him, here or anywhere, in this tributual, or in any tribunal, to assert that I spoliated any book. Such a charge as that, without one tittle of evidence, is only it to come from a man who lives in a bottle fit to come from a man who lives in a bottle and is fed with a spoon. [Laughter.] Buried Alive.

An Italian in Mobile was put in his coffin while in a trance, as he was supposed to be dead. Upon arriving at the graveyard the friends of the deceased found that the coffin had been partially broken open, apparently by force exercised within. They at once held a consultation, which resulted in the opening of the coffin, when the apparently dead man was found to present the most unmistakable signs of life. Although there was evidently life, there was no consciousness. The whole strength of the almost buried man had been thoroughly exhausted by his efforts to make his condition known to his friends, and his consciousness deserted him simultaneously with the burst-Buried Alive.

For restoring hair upon bald heads (from whatever cause it may have fallen out) and forcing a growth of hair upon the face, it has no equal. It will force the beard to grow upon the smoothest face in from five to eight weeks, or hair upon bald heads in from two to three months. A few ignorant practitioners have asserted that there is nothing that will force or hasten the growth of the hair or beard. Their assertions are false, as thousands of living witnesses (from their own experience) can bear witness. But many will say, how are we to distinguish the genuine from the spurious? It certainly is difficult, as nine-tenths of the different Preparations advertised for the hair and beard are editirely worthless, and you may have already thrown away large amounts in their purchase. To such we would say, try the Reparator Cappilli; it will cost you nothing unless it fully comes up to our representations. If your Druggist does not keep it, send us one dollar and we will forward it, postpaid, tagether with a receipt for the money, which will be returned you on applica-lon, providing enthe satisfaction is not given. THE AMERICAN JEWELERS' ASSOCIATION call your attention to the fact of its being the largest and most popular Jewelry Association in the United States. The business is and always has been conducted in the appreciation of our patrons for this method of obtaining rich, elegant and coetly goods. The suddenstagnation of trade in Europe, owing to the late German War and recent disastrous finantial crisis in England, has caused the failure of a large number of Jewelry Houses in London and Paris, obliging them to sell their goods at a great sacribe, in some instances less than one-third the cost of manufacturing. We have lately purchased very largely of these Bankrupt Goods, at such extremely low prices that we can afford to send away Finer Goods, and give better chances to draw the most valuable prizes than any other establishment doing a similar business. Our Alm is To Plexast, and we respectfully solicit your patronage, as we are confident of giving the utmost satisfaction. During the past year we have forwarded a number of the most valuable prizes than in the cost of the country. Those who patronize us will receive the full value of their money, as no article on our list is worth less than One Dollar, retaft, and there are no Blanks. Partles dealing with us may depend on having prompt returns, and the article draw will be himediately sent to any address by return mail or express.
