Young Paugus.

The old French War was over. The banners of England had long streamed above the towers of Quebec. The Indians had left the woods and lakes of New Hampshire, for the broader waters and deeper forests of Canada and the West. Time had benumbed the iron sinews of the rangers...

Jim Nelson's Revenge.

I always like coming straight to the point, so if I am going to tell what I know about this, I ask you to leave to do it in my own way. For I'm a plain man with plain words and a knowledge of writing fine, so here goes: I was married to Susan Gately on the first of February in the year 1835, at St. Paul's Church, Highford street, and may be seen by looking at the writing in the books. Her father is...

The Married Life of Prince Albert and the Queen Victoria.

The long expected volume prepared under the directions of Queen Victoria, and entitled "The Early Years of Her Majesty the Queen Victoria," has just appeared. It is a most interesting and valuable work, and will be read with interest by all who are interested in the history of the reign of our Queen...

How the Negro Vote was Polling in Tennessee.

The N. Y. Herald published copious correspondences from different points in Tennessee showing how the negro vote was manipulated. From a Nashville letter we make the following extracts: The prompt, quiet and orderly manner in which the negroes polled the polls and deposited their votes seems to give a color of truth to the charges which are now made all over the State that nearly every negro who participated in the election had been thoroughly drilled in the job...

Explosion of a Well.

In St. Louis, on Saturday evening, Mr. Charles Senneville, a carpenter, was severely injured by the explosion of a well. The explosion was of a well which he was leveling at the time. The well is on Mr. Senneville's premises, and was being leveled for the purpose of a well over which he was leveling at the time. The well is on Mr. Senneville's premises, and was being leveled for the purpose of a well over which he was leveling at the time...
