The Grand Jury made the following report:

LANCASTER, August 23, 1867. To the Honorable the Court of Quarter Sessions of Lancaster County:

The Grand Inquest of Lancaster County

The Grand Inquest of Lancaster County for August Sessions, do respectfully report that they have had 104 cases presented to them for action by the District Attorney; and of these they have returned 76 as true bills, and ignored 28. In examining these bills, they were struck with the trivial nature of many of the complaints made, through which, in too many instances, the county is put to needless expense.

Placed as it is upon the girders and rafters, it is swayed and rocked more or less by the wind, by which the roof is sorely strained, the sheeting parted, and the joints in many places opened. They would recommend, therefore, that some means be promptly devised, by which the further injury and defacement of the building will be prevented, consistent with economy and durability.

REPAIR AND IMPROVEMENT OF SALVE

REPAIR AND IMPROVEMENT OF SAINT MAIV'S CATHOLIC CHURCH,—St. Mary's Catholic Church, of this city, has been undergoing a thorough course of repairs and improvements. The old roof was very flat, and not being constructed on proper architectural principles, its weight gradually and not being constructed on proper architectural principles, its weight gradually pressed the walls apart, threatening to impair their stability. This rendered a new roof necessary. The one which is now being put on is finely proportioned, being some twenty-odd feet higher than the old one, giving a height of elevation, from the floor to the apex of the gothic ceiling inside, of seventy instead of fifty feet. The space between the walls is sixty feet in the clear, and to construct a roof with gothic arch spanning that breadth of space requires the collection of an amount of material which, with rafters of ordinary construction, would crush out very strong walls. This difficulty has been completely obviated by the use of rafters framed after the plan adopted by the best church architects, the design having been prepared by Mr. Edwin F. Durang of Philidelphia. They are very heavy, but are so braced and poised as to bind the ure so braced and poised as to bind the walls together rather than to press then apart. Even to an uninstructed eye, their walls together rather than to press them apart. Even to an uninstructed eye, their adaptation to the purpose they are irtended o serve is apparent. Mr. Daniel McLaughlin, under whose supervision the work has been done, is a skilful and intelligent builder, and the details of Mr. Durang's plan have been so far most faithfully carried out. The gables have of course been considerably elevated, and this has given an opportunity to tastefully adorn the front of the church. A most elegant design has been prepared, and the representation of what it would be when completed was shown to us by Mr. McLaughlin. There are to be two finely proportioned and elaborately adorned towers, one on each corner of the front, rising to a proper height above the roof of the building. These we understand will not be finished at present. Between them, however, will be completed a corniced gable, which, being surmounted by a large and exquisitely carved cross, will present a exquisitely carved cross, will present a most attractive front. It is a pity the whol most attractive front. It is a pity the whole work cannot be at once put through. The sauctuary floor is to be raised and a new aftar erected. When the proposed repairs and improvements are completed, the St. Mary's Catholic Church of this city will not be surpassed in beauty or commodiousness by any church edifice in the interior of Pennsylvania. The Right Reverend Father, Bernard Keenan, has been pastor of this congregation for upwards of forty years, and we are glad to know that he is recovering from a rather severe illness. years, and we are gain to know that he recovering from a rather severe illness. We hope he may not only live to see his church completely repaired and beautified, but that he may be spared for years to a community in which he is so universally loved and respected.

POST OFFICE AT CHIQUES .- The Colum-

Post Office at Chiques.—The Columbia Heratli calls attention to the fact that there is no post office at Chiques. It is a smart manufacturing town about two miles and a half north west of Columbia on the Pennsylqunia Raiiroad, has a flouring mill, distillery, steam saw mill, rolling mill, seven furnaces, which turn out 500 tons of pig iron per week, and shops to accommodate these establishments, and and yet it has no post office. The Columbia post office is closed on Sunday, and the laborors at Chiques are forced to travel over two miles in the evening after their work is done, or to go without their letters and papers. We have no doubt the Postmaster-General would order the establishment of a post office at that point if, the case was properly laid before him. The cost to the government would be little or nothing and the accommodation to the people great.

The Philadelphia papers of this morning have no notice of it what-ever. No Baltimore papers have reached us, owing we suppose to the damage to the Northern Central Railroad between the town of York and that city. We append such further reports as we have been able to gather. Yesterday morning the two middle arches of the bridge on the Harrisburg Turnpiko across the Chiques creek, about 8 miles from town, fell down. What the loss is we have not heard. A Case of Infanticide-Coroner's INQUEST.—Coroner Leonard held an in-quest last Sunday upon the body of the infant child found on the banks of the Lit-tle Conestoga during the flood of last week. Suspicious circumstances led to the belief that it had been foully dealt with, and inthat it had been foully dealt with, and inquiry was set on foot which resulted in a second view of the body and an examination of witnesses which was had on Saturday. The same jury summoned last week being present, the clothes which were upon the body of the child when discovered were produced and Mrs. Dean being sworn and examined the stified that she recognized the petitions as testified that she recognized the petticoat as one she had made for the child. She made this clothing when the child was three days old. The name of the mother is Margaret old. The name of the mother is Margaret Lennings, her maiden name was Snyder. Her husband left her the next morning after marriage, and has not lived with her since. The father of the child was Charles Demorrow She also testified to having made a slip which was shown—recognized it from a rent in the material of which it was made. The child was born on Sunday and was 11 days old when the mother left Mars Medilinyle.

Mrs. McGlinn's.
Mrs. McGlinn beingsworn, said Margaret Mrs. McGnin being sworn, said Margaret Lennings or Snyder came to her house just before her confinement and asked to be al-lowed to stay. She at first refused, but finally consented. She was delivered of a male child. She staid until the child was I days old and then left. At one time the nother gave the child five drops of laudanum, reinarking that she did not care if she gave it a bottle full. After Margaret left gave it a bottle full. After Margaret left she heard from her sister that she had left her child at the Poor House. Mrs. McGlinn identified the clothes. The child was per-fectly developed and healthy. Miss Lannigan corroborated the state-ment of the toregoing witnesses in regard to the clothing.

The jury returned a verdict that the child came to its death by violence at the hands of its mother.

Margaret is supposed to have gone to Philadelphia, and has not been arrested. ENT MOLOGICAL.-The following munication from Mr. John M. Fridy t Mr. S. S. Rathvon, and Mr. R's, reply i regard to a very destructive insect found on a pear tree in Mr. F's, orchard, has been manded us for publication:

MOUNTVILLE, Aug. 20, 1867. S. S. RATHVON-Sir :- Enclosed you will S. S. RATHYON—Sir:—Enclosed you will find something that I have taken from my pear tree, which destroys the foliage as it goes. Would you be kind enough and let me know whether you are acquainted with it, and to what extent they destroy. I have taken them all off the trees and have noticed none since.

Respectfully yours,

JOHN M. FRIDY.

JOHN M. FRIDY.

REPLY. The above communication, together with seven specimens of the larva of Empretia stimula, enclosed in a small box were sent to me by mail., These larva are found not only on the pear trees, but also on the plum, apple, and others of a like mature, as well as on other kinds of vegetation, but they have apparently a partiality for the pear. I have never known them to occur in any have never known them to occur in any very great numbers at any time or place, but if such should happen to be the case, they have the capabilities of being very destructive to the foliage of trees and plants. At the end of the summer, or earlier, they spin themselves up in a globular shaped cocoon, about the size of a marrow-fat pea, and, the next season come forth a small moth, with the body and forewings of a uniform dark ferruginous color, with two small subapical white spots on the forewings, of the female, and in those of the male, two additional ones near the base. very great numbers at any time or place two small subapical white spots on the forewings, of the female, and in those of the male, two additional ones near the base, under the mediaro nerve. The hind wings are a pale reddish brown, and the insect when expanded measures about an inch and a quarter across. The larva era semicylindrical in form, and obliquoly truncated before and behind, with two posterior fleshy horns, and two anterior ones of the same size, with two smaller ones beneath them back of the head. These horns are supplied with spines, which produce an exceeding painful sensation when they come in contact with the back of the hand, or any other soft part of the human body. The color of the larva is a light brown, but between the posterio and anterior horns there is a saddle-shaped patch of a fine bright green color, bordered with white and having a large brown velvety spot in the centre. They are without prolegs, and seem to glide over the surface of the leaves, like a "marine ram" over the surface of the water. Hand picking, cautiously executed, or a solution of tobacco, strong lye, or whale oil soap, are effectual remedies for their removal. I know of no generally recognized English name for them, and therefore we will have to be content with its scientific name for the present.

ent with its scientific name for the present. P. S.—One of these larvae was covered with the cocoons of a small parasitic fly belonging to the order Hymenoptera, which s no doubt a check upon the rapid increase of these insects.

of "the sere and yellow leaf" are here, but the country around Lancaster looks as fresh and green as in June. The over abundant ains of August have started a most luxurious growth of grass, and even the trees are without visible indications of the ap-proach of the end of summer. It has been a remarkable season in this vicinity.

Correction.-In our report of Monday afternoon's Court proceedings, published in Tuesday evening's issue, we were in error in stating that John Brubaker "plead guilty to two charges—fornication and bastardy." It should have been, the jury returned a resulted with WHISKY CASES.—In the case of Albert Bonson, of Columbia, who was charged with violating the revenue laws, the United States District Attorney, at the session of the District Court in Philadelphia, agreed o enter a not, pros. The other cases from ancaster county have not been sent to the Grand Jury yet. It is thought most of the parties accused will escape without any punishment, there not being proof of their having committed any offense.

A MIRACLE!-WHISKEY TURNED INTO A MIRACLE!—WHISKEY TURNED INTO WATER.—One of our Distillers sold the other day 50 barrels of whiskey at 35 cents a gallon, tax to be paid by the purchaser. The whiskey was sent to Baltimore and our Distiller gave to Collector Wiley a transportation bond for its delivery there. When it got into the bonded warehouse in Baltimore, however, the Government Inspector found that the barrels contained water instead of whiskey. The Railroad Company say they can prove that they received whiskey here and delivered whiskey in Baltimore. The transformation must therefore have occurred in the passage of the liquor from the freight depot in Baltimore to the Bonded Warchouse in the same place. It is proper to add that the Distiller alluded to is entirely acquitted by Collector Wiley of any knowledge of the fraud, if fraud there was, but that suspicion attaches to the parties to whom the liquor was consigned. got into the bonded warehouse in Balti FARMS FOR SALE IN HUNTINGDON CO. FARMS FOR SALE IN HUNTINGDON CO.— We call especial attention to the advertise-ments of farms for sale in Huntingdon Co. We are assured that a great bargain is to be had in them. They are both excellent properties. Parties in this county desiring any further information, would do well to

The rot has appeared among the potatoes, and in some varieties has already become quite destructive. A great many of those freshly dug are covered with small white specks, and many of them are quite rotten. In some patches rine-tenths of the potatoes are thus affected.

CANNING FRUITS.—The committee appointed at the last meeting of the Lancaster County Horticultural Society, to make a report upon the subject of canning fruits, beg leave to offer the following:

It is but of late years that attempts to preserve fruits for use after their season, and so as to retain, in a great measure, their natural fresh flavor, have been practiced in natural fresh flavor, have been practiced in many households throughout the land. We look almost in vain for instructions on the look almost in vain for instructions on the subject in books published so long as 25 years ago, and it may therefore be supposed there is something yet to learn before we understand the best way of doing it. Many housekeepers at present still have vague notions upon the points which are essential to success. To understand these more or or less perfectly, will be to avoid the loss and chagrin of frequent failure.

The jars, in popular use for the purpose, are composed of various materials—tin, earthenware, stoneware and glass. A lead are composed of various materials—tin-earthenware, stoneware and glass. A lead ing object of this report is to examine some of the merits and demerits of each. In commerce, tin cans are extensively used, principally, it would seem; because they are strong and bear transportation for long distance with little danger of being injur-ed. But the tin can is liable to serious

ed. But the tin can is liable to serious objections. One now before us, which contained peaches for several months, is corroded entirely around its upper circumference on the inside, and is no longer fit for use. The persons who purtook of the peaches it contained, of course, also consumed the tin which had been decomposed. Dr. Pereira says "it appears that acid, fatty, saline, and even albuminous substances, may occasion colic and vomitacid, fatty, saline, and even albuminous substances, may occasion colic and vomiting, by having remained for some time in his tin vessels," and as all fruits usually used for canning, contain either malic, eitric, tartaric, or (according to Ure) after fermentation lactic acid, it would follow that tin vessels can be used only by running more or less risk of eating contaminated food. Furthermore, if they are to be closed by soldering on the lids, closing and opening them is attended with considerable inconvenience. Cherries. considerable inconvenience. Cherries, strawberries and blackberries, become strawberries and blackberries, become discelored, acquire a bad taste, and prove worthless if kept in them. Cans made of earthenware and glazed, are liable to have the glazing exfoliate on the inside, knocked off on the outside, or to have imperfect spots; and in either case the contents are subject to oze through the jar. Through these pores the air will enter, and the fruit consequents indexes forward the second of t these pores the air will enter, and the fruit consequently indergoes fermentation. In rare instances the glazing has dissolved, and becoming mingled with the contents, violent sickness has ensued. But they have the merit of being cheaper than any of the other kinds mentioned. Stoneware jars are open to some extent to the same objections just noted with regard to the earthenware, but if they are dark colored, well baked and made of good material, they will generally do well. In material, they will generally do well. In many instances they have imperfections or many instances they have imperfections or are sufficiently porous to allow some of these contents to escape; and there has been so much complaint against them that they can-not be recommended. They are less costly than glass. We believe therefore from all that has already been said, that glass jars have advantages which will bring them into general use in families, and will finally have advantages which will bring them into general use in families, and will finally supersede almost altogether the others. They are more attractive to the eye, they never absorb their contents while they always show them, so that if, as sometimes will happen, fermentation should supervene in exception cases the accident may be seen and the remedy applied. They are also durable if care is taken always to heat them slowly and handle them with moderate care. If plunged suddenly into hot water, or if filled while cold with bot substances they are liable to crack. One of substances they are liable to crack. One of substances they are liable to crack. One of the principal objections urged against them is that being translucent they admit light which initiates fermentation. Air, warmth, and moisture are the agents which promote fermentation, and we can find no authority for-assuming that light possesses any such influence under the circumstances in which such vessels are usually kept. There are some points worthy of careful attention in selecting a jar. It should be so contrived that it can be easily and surely closed air that it can be easily and surely closed air tight, and what is of great importance also, that it can be easily opened. We have betight, and what is of great importance also, that it can be easily opened. We have before us some jars which have been in use for several years, and which after giving satisfaction on most of the above points, are still in good condition for future service. Without recommending any particular made jar, or wishing to be understood as saying that there may not be others as good or better, we simply call attention to Willough by's patent for the purpose of illustration. Reliance is here placed upon a gum ring to exclude the air, and if the ring is put properly in place to begin with, the can is easily and quickly closed hermetically. But after the ring has been screwed down for months, it often happens in jars having this contrivance in some form or other, that it becomes adherent to its surroundings, and the cover cannot be pulled or screwed off without trouble. Such is the case in expell

the cover cannot be pulled or screwed off without trouble. Such is the case in a small degree with the jar under observation. To open it, we first take off the screw altogether, which is easily done if it has been oiled at iron plate, and here lies its defect. If the plate had an eye or small projection (which it has not), near its edge, it could be pulled off. After taking off this iron plate, it is easy to loosen the gun ring, which lies exposed, at some point, with a pointed instrument, when it can be grasped with the fingers and pulled out. The lower or tin lid fits loosely and is no obstacle. The committee would recommend the members, this season, to use, for the sake of experiment, a few each of the following kinds of jars: The Hero, Squires patent, the Franklin and Willoughby's patent. A year hence we may thus be able to give our preferences with more freedom. iron plate, and here lies its defect. If the hence we may thus be able to give our preferences with more freedom.

As to the mode of canning—the following is the method of a gentleman of experience, and we give it pretty much in his own words, assured that if carefully followed, satisfaction will be the result:

"Put the fruit into the jar, then fill nearly full with gold saying medicals half to three satisfaction will be the result:

"Put the fruit into the jar, then fill nearly full with cold syrup, made of a half to three quarters of a pound of refined sugar to a quart of water. More uniformity is attained by using a sachometor in which case for good ripe peaches a specific gravity of fifteen degrees. Baume is sufficient. Very acid fruit requires more sugar. Put upon the bottom of a suitable vessel a wooden strip on which set the jars, and fill the vessel with cold water up to the necks of the jars. Boil from ten to fifteen minutes; fill the jars brim full with hot syrup and seal quickly." Care should be taken before sealing to wipe the mouths of the bottles clean of the syrup before sealing, as this will make it more easy to remove the covers. Strawberries, cherries and black-berries need not be boiled so long. The general roles would seem to be—use sound, ripe fruit, sugar enough to make it pulatable, boil long enough to heatthrough all the fruit, fill the jars to the brim, and seal hermetically without delay. The jars should afterwards be placed where they do not touch the walls of the house.

It is said that the shares of the Washington Library Company of Philadelphia are being disposed of with unexampled rapidity. The absence of all concealment, the housety of purpose manifested by those who first inaugurated the enterprise, the fairness with which the proposed final distribution is to be conducted, and the patriotic purpose to which the entire surplus is to be applied, have taken firm hold upon public confidence. So large have the sales been thus far that the trustees hope to anticipate the time originally fixed for the dispensation of the citis, amounting to $300,000 thus piacing the funds collected much some than they expected in a channel to carry out the noble act of benevoience which was the object of their enterprise. All those, therefore, who desire to participate with them in the pleasure of doing a good action should subscribe without delay. They will receive a once a fine engraving, worth at retail more than the money invested, besides a gitt of such value as their share may be entitled to in the final distribution. CLIMAX.

A plain statement of facts, I inherited Scrofula, and many of my relations have died of it. In 1829 my case was frightful. Tumors and ulcers spread until in 1812, under the advice of my physicians I went to Avon Springs. I received no benefit—tried every medicine and did everything I could! I had to rest my arm on a cushion, and had not been able to raise it to my head for over a year. The discharge from two ulcers was nearly a plut a day. Amputation was recommended; but pronounced dangerous. I could not sleep, and my sufferings were intolerable. A friend brought me an English physician who applied a saive with which he said he had accomplished extraordinary cures in the hospitals in England. It commenced to relieve; persisted in its use; it finally effected a perfect and entire cure. It is now 1848, It is five years since I had the appearance of a scrofulous sore, and my health has been good ever since. I procured the receipt of his wonderful article—this blessing of humanity—and have called it "PAGE'S olessing of humanity—and have called it "PAOE'S PLIMAN SALVE," and allow the public to use it or not is they choose.
