The entre building beverages. The entre building is well and neatly kept, the officers appearing to understand their 'duty, but cannot for want of room, carry out the intention of the law, which is that prisoners must be kept separate, where the building is adapted to it. The officers in reply to my printed inter-rogatories say that one of the defects of this prison is "an occasional want of more cells"' and that the only plan whereby this can be remedied is "the building of an additional wing, in which to keep the convicts separate from prisoners awaiting trial, and va-grants.'' wing, in which to keep the convicts separate from prisoners awaiting trial, and va-grants." If this suggestion should meet the views of the authorities of the county, and be car-ried out, a more secure building than that how occupied by the convicts would un doubtedly be erected, and fewer escapes take place. I do not regard the present cells secure, as prisoners have with very simple instru-ments removed the stones from the walls, and thereby effected their escape. The workmanship on this jail is not of the best kind, especially masonry. Without much expense this addition can be made, which, with the raising of the wall that en-closes the premises five feet higher, would give to Lancaster county a jail where of-fenders could be safely held and humabely treated, and with the discipline which long experience has taught us in Pennsylvania as the best yet adopted, a large per centage of the offenders sent to the prison might, when relensed, become honest and useful citizens. These reforms have been made in convicts confined in other jails, and can be in this.

THE LOWER END OF THE COUNTY.—The Oxford Press of yesterday morning con-tains the following: Henry Carter, of Fulton twp., Lancaster county, planted two and a half bushels of Harrison potatoes lastspring and had there-from a yield of one hundred and seventeen bushels. They were all large and sound. This is the most prolific yield we ever heard of bushels. They were all large and sould. This is the most prolific yield we ever heard of. Samuel Gatcheli, of Fulton township, Luncaster co., died suddenly on Monday of last week. The time and circumstances of his death seem most singular. On Monday morning he was engaged in killing a beef, and held the animal whilst anotherperson attempted to knock it down jut the blows proving ineffectual, Mr. G. took the instru-ment and knocked it down and then applied the knife. He immediately went to the pume to wash his hands, and whilst in the act of doing so he fell down and died in a few minutes. His de..th was caused by heart disease, a complaint to which he was somewhat subject, and it is supposed the exertion and excitement attending the killing of the animal superinduced his own sudden demise. Mr. G. was a member of the school board of Fulton township, which passed the usual resolutions of respect to the memory of the deceased.
