udicial and political questions resulted from he organization of the government, execu-ive, legislative, and judicial, and from the positions and not present variable allows by this court. The distinction between the present production of the government, exceptive, legislative, and policyla, and from the production of the proper many countries. The production of the productio of the court on a political question, and not on one involving persons and property. No question of person or property, or threat-ened danger to them, was presented in the bill in a form justifying judicial action by the court. It was true the bill set forth pothe court. It was true the bill set forth political rights as in danger, and among other things that Georgia owned certain property, the State capital, the executive mansion, and other real and personal property—and that by putting those acts of Congress into existence the State would be deprived of the possession of such property. But it was apparent that this reference was only incidental, and not a specific matter of remedy.—The relief asked would call for a bill different from the one now before the court. Having, for the reasons stated, arrived at a conclusion, it was unimportant rived at a conclusion, it was unimportant o examine the question of jurisdiction in connection with the defendants. The court dismissed the bill for want of jurisdiction. decision, the judge remarked, also sed of the case of the State of Mississippi against Secretary Stanton, General Grant and Major General Ord, involving similar questions.

Chief Justice Chase said he did not concurr in all the reasons, but assented to the conclusion, believing the court had no jurisdiction in the case. A Japanese Funeral. esterday morning, at 10 o'clock, the teral of Ha-Yah-ta-Kee, the leader of the funeral of Ha-Yah-ta-Kee, the leader of the Japanese acrebatic troupe recently arrived in this city, took place from No. 20 Bleecker street, his late residence. During the morning the monotonous Japanese dead song was was kept up in a small room beside that in which the corpse lay. Lighted candles were placed near the coffin, and a document in Japanese was hung ag dist the wall. There were three rigitantes, one of whom officiated and chanted the dead song, the other two sitting silently opposite. The friends and relatives of the deceased and the other members of the deceased and continuity in which the corpse lay. Lighted candles were placed near the collin, and a document in Japanese was hung ag dist the wall. There were three nigitantes, one of whom officiated and chanted the dead song, the other two sitting sitently opposite. The friends and relatives of the deceased and the other members of the troupe were in an outer room. On the lid of the coffin, which was of rosewood, was a silver plate, having engraved on it in Japanese letters the name of the deceased. The custom of providing food, tobucco, and opium for the dead was observed. As soon as the body was removed from the house, an old Japanese woman took her place before it, and commenced sweeping the ground with a boom, this custom signifying the wafting of the soul of the dead to spirit-land. A number of carriages followed the heurse to Greenwood, which were for the most part occupied by Japanese. The body was placed in the strangers? Receiving Tomb, where it will remain until the return of the troupe to Japan, when it will be taken with them. It being unlawful in Japan for any person but a priest to say the prayer for the dead over the remains, and no priest being in this country, the ceremones at the grave consisted of the voluntary prayers and the singing of a hymn, after which end or the Japanese picked up a handful of clay and dropped it in the grave, with which eremoney the burial was concluded. It is denied that Ha-Yah-ta-Kee's death was superinduced, by a dispute between him here in place and the eighteenth centuries was uperinduced. by a dispute between the nine received no bounty.

Dr. Simmonds, the attending physician, states that the deceased came to his death by disease of the heart, and that the workings of the disease must necessarily have terminated in death on Saturday night. Ha-Yab-ta-Kee was the author of a number of dramas which are popular in his own country, and of several tales, essays, and treatises.

Choosing a Husband.
The Hcrald of Health for the current month contains an interesting article from Mrs. E. Oates Smith, entitled, "Choosing a Husband." Theauthoress in arguing that a woman has a right to marguing that a woman has a right to choose a husband just as much so as a man has to choose a wife, says:

"I am by no means willing to have it understood that I counsel women to go about 'popping the question' to men here and there like an army of grenadlers; far from it. A man rarely 'pops the question' till he is pretty well. pops the question' till he is pretty well saured in his own mind as to the kind assured in ins own mind as to the kind of response he will receive; and in all cases a refined woman prevents a lover from explaining himself where she is bent upon a denial of his suit. In any true relation there is very little of his question and answer form so muc talked about, and as to all that wearing taiked about, and as to all that wearing of a perpetual 'mask' upon the face, in the shape of concealed emotions; and that resolve to die rather than expose the story of the heart is all nonsense, very little of it occurs in real life. True aearted men and women are easier read than our romance writers seem to com-

"Let our women be free not only to reject, but to choose, also. Men and women are likely to do this without any great expenditure of language, for the vocabulary of love is more expressive than words. I have known several women of refinement and intellect who owned that their husbands were rather sought after by them then otherwise. sought after by them than otherwise, and these matches were certainly among the happiest I have ever known. Perhaps, if a woman deludes a man in this way into marriage, she feels bound to make his condition a happy one."

The Sergeant Bates who is promenading the South, carrying the stars and stripes with him, is doing so in pursuance of a bet, he being a Democrat, made with a Radical, who affirmed the life of no Union soldier was safe in any of the Southern States.
