An Abyssinian Beau The natives distil a spirit from their bailey, which is said to be something between gin and Hollands in flavor. I have not yet tasted any. Thick is throng round a Parsee belonging to throng round a Parsee belonging to the commissariat, who is buying up all he can get for government at a dollar for can get for government of the commissariate mployee is similiarly engaged in buying up ghee—that is, clarified or boiled butter—for the native troops. It does not look very nice, and what does not make the sight the pleasanter, is that the women, when they have emptical the iars into commissariat casks, that the women, when they have emptited the jars into commissariat casks, invariably wipe them out with their hands, and then plaster the remainder upon their heads.

upon their heads.

An Abyssinian does not consider himself properly dressed unless his hair is shining with oil, not put on or rubbed on, but plastered on, and running down his neck as the sun melts it. The idea is not, according to our ideas, pleasant, but yet it is a matter of taste. When an Abyssinian really wants to make a great effect, he uses butter not obee and reat effect, he uses butter, not ghee, and outs it on until his head is as white as that of a London footman. Then he is and walks with a dignity befitting his appearance. There were several swells of the period so got up at the market, and as they stood under the shelter of their straw umbrellas-for the sur would melt it and destroy the whole effect—I could not but wonder at and admire the different forms which hu-man vanity takes.

gentleman, visiting a house in Al ria, says : "In a few minutes a door opened and a lion entered the room; the man only leading him by the tult of his mane. He was a magnificent animal, two years old, and full grown all but his mane, which although but a foot long, made, however, a respectable appearance. He did not seem to care about our being strangers, but wandering about the room like a large dog, permitted us to take liberties with him, such as patting him, shaking a pay, and making him. him, shaking a paw, and making him exhibit his teethand claws. He showed exhibit his teeth and claws. He showed a marked predilection in favor of old acquaintances, and lying down before them, turned on his back to be scratched. After a scratch or two he began to yawn, and was fairly settling himself for a nap, when a cigar was puffed in his face, a proceeding he evidently did not approve of. Rising in a burry, curling his line. Rising in a hurry, curling his view a splendld set of teeth, a sure sign that he was not pleased. A heart sneeze seemed to restore him to go sneeze seemed to restore him to good temper, and bearing no malice, he re-turned a friendly pat bestowed on him by Captain Martenor, who had been the aggressor, by rubbing his head caressingly against his knees. -- Kenneay a and Tunis.

Agricultural. &c. COMPLETE, MANURE MANUFACTURED BY HENRY BOWER.

MADE FROM Super-Phosphate of Lime, Ammonia at WARRANTED FREE FROM ADULTERATION

WARHATTED FIRE FROM ADULTERATION.

Price $50 per Ton 2,000 lbs.
Liberal discount to dealers.
It has raised good crops of Wheat, Corn, Oats, Polatoes, Grass, Cotton, Tobacco, and Vegetatablee of all kinds. Furmers would do well to inquire of their nearest dealer in fertilizers as to the results obtained from the use of Complete Manure. The growing crops of Wheat, at this time, freely, attest its virtues.

It is highly recommended by all who have used it up to this time.

We have numerous testimonials to the effect that it is an invaluable Fertilizer, and we recommend thighly as a top dressing for Wheat and Gruss.
