Proposing by Letter. A Sad Mistake.

Eleven o'clock-at least so said the reeven o clock—at least so said the golden tide of sunshine, creeping over the velvety turf of the village green, and losing itself in the murmurous follage of the big maple trees; and so said the little clock in Judge Cornell's law office on the main street, speaking in a Harry Grover glanced quietly up at the uncomprising little dial, as he entered the domain of "Coke upon Lyttleton."

"I'm late this morning," he muttered hanging up his hat behind the door; "but, as good luck will have it, the Judge has not made hisappearance yet."
He was a straight, handsome young fellow, with curly brown hair, limpld hazel eyes, and a healthy flush on his sun-browned checks—one you could trust, a l'outrance, as you looked into his frank, honest face. There was not trust, a l'outrance, as you looked into his frank, honest face. There was not many such—more's the pity!

"Whew—whew—whew!" whistled Mr. Harry Grover, turning over his pile of legal documents in a very unmethodical sort of way, "Law and love were never meant to go together; of that I am certain. Pretty Ariel Browne's blue eyes are shinting roguishly out at me from every bit of parchmentor printed blank I touch. The Coming Landlord. It is a marvel to me that country land-lords do not better arrange their houses, lords do not better arrange their houses, with a view to keeping their Luests later in these lovely autumnal days. The absence of gas, and the omnipresence of bad smelling kerosene, are great drawbacks to enjoyment in the chilly evenings which follow these golden days. Fires which get low at the very moment

Harry, frankly, "but you see Judge Cornell was watching me, and—" and that was the end of all misunderstandings between Harry Grover and Ariel Browne, thenceforth, for ever more.

Miss Experience was rather disappointed in two things. She would like to have said that once, in the course of her fifty-five years of life, she had an offer of marriage.

"However," said Miss Experience, "Ariel is very happy, and may be things are best as they are."

"Of course, any reasonable expense."
"Well, that's just what I've been doing. I have been boarding around at the various hotels and restaurants, testing expense to see if I could find any ting. I have been containing the various hotels and restaurants, tasting sausage to see if I could find any traces of your dog; but I haven't yet."

He was excused from any further search in that way.

Once, in Cleveland, Fred was soliciting passengers at the docks for the Buffalo boats. As the boat was about to leave, a carriage drove furiously to the dock, and out got a ponderous puffy man, with an immense expanse of white shirt bosom, followed by an equally fat shirt bosom, followed by an equally fat with a nurse and several children.

save us from inpending ruin but an imme diate change of rulers and policy. Elect one more Radical Congress, sustained by a Radical Executive, and nationat repudiation is inevitable. The people can change the position by a change of policy, as indicated by the elections this fall. After that it will be too late.

THE SITUATION SOUTH.

The Purposes of the Southern People-An Eloquem: Vindication of Hon. Her-schel V. Johnson. Hon. Herschel V. Johnson, the Demo-cratic candidate for Vice President of the cratic candidate for Vice President of the United States in 1880, in a recent letter addressed to the Democratic Executive Committee of Tronp county, Georgia, eloquenty indicates the Southern people from the unscrupulous charges of Radical orators and presses. He says:

The position, designs, and sentiments of the Southern people are grossly misrepresented. Why and with what motives I shall not attempt to say. It may be from honest ignorance of the truth, or it may be with the design to influence the people of the North in their choice between the two opposing candidates, and thus to prevent our restoration to our rights in the Union. But from whatsoever consideration, we are misrepresented. I know it so far as the people of Georgia are concerned, and I fully believe it in reference to those of the other States. It is asserted that we are ready and willing at any moment to renew the war, willing at any moment to renew the war and are rebellious against the Government No facts exist to sustain such a charge. Or No facts exist to sustain such a charge. On the contrary, the conduct of our people since the surrender demonstrates its false-hood. We have acted in good faith. True, we opposed the reconstruction scheme of Congress; but we did so, first, because we had already organized our State government under the President's policy; and secondly, because the scheme was unconstitutional and fatal to our every interest-social, civil and political. Was there any crime in this, and especially when it was remembered that Congress graciously invited us to accept or disapprove it, though with threats of confiscation and disfranchisement if we did the latter? But the The heaviest is for the War Department in Carrying out the reconstruction measures of Congress. It would be better to say, however, that this wast expense has been for keeping the South in a disorganized and disturbed condition, for that is what this so-called reconstruction amounts to. Then the enormous appropriations by Congress for all sorts of schemes, bounties, Freedmen's Bureau, and private enterprises must soon drain the Treasury dry when the income is falling off. The stupendous frauds in the internal revenue, and the demoralization of that department through the dead lock between Commissioner Kollins and Mr. M'Gulloch and the President, threaten to reduce the interest from that source far chisement if we did the latter? But th scheme has been consummated in Georgia with threats of confiscation and disfranchelsement if we did the latter? But the scheme has been consummated in Georgia, and what is our deportment now? Are we offering any forcible resistance to the State government that has been formed for us under the dictation of the bayonet? No, not all. We recognize and obey it as the Government de facto established in lieu of that which was acceptable to the people, but overthrown by milliary power. If we deny its validity, de jure, we appeal, not to force, but to the ballot-box—to the patriotism and justice of our countrymen—for redress. We have had enough of bloodshed. We desire nothing so much as peace—the peace of concord and fraternity—the peace of constitutional Union.

We are charged with the design to remit the negroes back to bondage. Perhaps the poor, deluded creatures, having their apprehensions excited by designing, bad men, are preparing to resist such an attempt.—This may possibly explain their military organizations and secret drilling. But they, and all, the world, may rost assured that no such design exists among the people of Georgia. The loss of capital invested in slave property was a heavy blow, and the derangement of our labor system checked our prosperity, and was felt throughout the whole country; but we have in good faith submitted to it. We could not, if we would, and would not, if we could, reduce the negroes again to bondage. We consider their freedom as a fact accomplished, never to be disturbed. We recognize slavery as staked upon the issues of secession, and that being decided against us, we realize that he institution fell with it. Hence, the Constitution formed by the seceding States, under President Johnson's policy—every one of them—contained the prohibition of slavery. Great as is the loss in property to the people of the South, caused by emancipation, the change is not vold of some compensatory features. It has relieved slave-owners of a weight of responsibility that was burdensom; it has freed us from the slanderous tongues and pens
