Grant Made President by Force and Fraud. When the war ended the Radical leaders of the Republican party took a survey of the political situation.

The returns of yesterday's election, which we publish elsewhere, tell the result in terms plain to be mistaken. Blinded by passion and prejudice the people of the South have refused to listen to the dictates of political wisdom, and have granted a new lease of power to the Radicals who have already done so much to ruin the nation.

Grant will be elected as President for four years on the 4th of next March, if he lives. What policy he will pursue remains to be seen. Many Republicans are already hoping and predicting that the new President will be a man of peace.

Washington is famous for its foolishness and particularly for its foolishness in the matter of Reconstruction. The latest statement which has been made by the President's friends is that an effort is being made to have the Democratic States cast their electoral votes for Grant so as to make his election unanimous.

It estimates that Grant's majority in the whole vote cast in November will be about 270,000; but three States, Maine, Texas and Virginia, are not permitted by Congress and the military to vote; they would give him, if they had voted, a majority of 175,000 to Seymour, which reduces Grant's majority to 100,000.

THE NEXT CONGRESS. The Forty-first Congress will be composed of 143 Radicals and 85 Democrats. It is possible the number of Democrats may be increased two or three more, but they will certainly have no members in the next House of Representatives.

THE PHILADELPHIA MORNING POST GOES INTO OPERATION. The Philadelphia Morning Post goes into operation on the adoption of universal suffrage. It is a paper which has been established in Philadelphia by a majority of the Democratic party.

Wendell Phillips, Charles Sumner, and all that class of fanatics. The local item which suggested the editorial item and the attempt of the Express to publish the names of the subscribers to the paper should not change the existing condition of affairs brought about by a Radical and infamous majority in Congress.

Foreign Bondholders. The Democratic party encountered the most gigantic combination of capitalists in the late election, which was arrayed together in the United States every National Institution, the bulk of the large Manufacturing Companies, and the Bondholders as a class.

The laboring men of the United States might successfully have completed with the national banks and the home owners of the South a five-twenty bond in Europe was held under contribution.

Yet, after having done all this the Radical leaders of the Republican party do not feel secure. When their Convention met at Chicago they were not recognized as representative men among them.

It is true that Gen. Grant has not made much of a political record for himself, but in what has been said he has admitted that he had done so.

THE OFFICIAL JOURNAL IN PHILADELPHIA. The official Journal in Philadelphia is published at the November election and thirty-seven (237); the Republican vote being 61,351 and the Democratic vote 100,000.

Radical Morals. The Philadelphia Post has at length made up its mind that Justice Reed had no right to direct the election officers in Philadelphia to refuse to take the votes of the six thousand foreigners who were naturalized.
