Chinese Theatricuis.

The company now employed at the Chinese Theatre, on Jackson street, consists of no less than eighty performers, the most of whom appear nightly on the stage. The latter consists merely of a platform without drop curtain or side scenes; the rear being lung with richly-embroidered curtains and tapastry interwoven with silk of various brilliant colors and gold. These stage properties are said to have cost some $7,000 in China, where goods of this kind are cheap as compared with the cost in this country. The expense of bringing these performers to California was $1,000 each; yet the management is likely to make the experiment a paying one, the theatre being crowded every night with spectators, at seventy-five conts admission each, this being the price to all parts of the house. The costume of the actors and the stage trappings are rich and gorgeous; but the performances are of the most profession and noisy kind, being of matter.

"English Grammar." This subject was discussed by Prof. A. R. Byerly, of the State Normal School at Millersville. The Professor stated that in teaching Gramma: two important rules should be observed viz: Grammar should be presented more viz: Grammar should be presented more in detail than it generally is; and that it should be repeated until the pupil is acquainted with the relation of each subject to the other. Two methods of teaching it might be pursued: lat, As a science; and 2nd, by means of sentences; the simplest form of a sentence to be presented at first to the pupil. Teachers too frequently in teaching Grammar by aiming at conciseness sacrifice precision. Prof. Byerly then proceeded by numerous examples on the blackboard to illustrate the best methods of teaching the properties and uses of nouns. The actors and the stage trappings are from and gorgeous; but the performances are of the most grotesque and noisy kind, being to "outsiders" quite incomprehensible.—

Like the entire fixting up and surroundings of the place, the acting is truly barbaric.—

Singular Habits of Crows.—A correspondent, residing in Conestoga township, writes to us that "on the banks of the Conestogacreek a short distance above Wabank, in this County is a Crow Roost. At this place thousands of crows roost every high, they leave every morning and return in the evening. They do not go singly or in focks, but in four divisions, one division going nearly due South, another nearly due West, and the other nearly due North and from these they branch off and spread over the country and in the evening they return from precisely the same points.

In the morning, as soon as daylight begins to dawn, they are stirring about and flying from tree to tree, keeping up an incessant cawing, which is very disagreeable and annoying to the people living in the neighborhood. About sun-rise they start off, going in regular lines and always in the same directions, each division taking its own route, and it is very probable that the same crows slways constitute the same division. Those which go in a Southerly direction, at a distance of five miles from the "Roost," never deviate above a quarter of a mile East or West, from their regular route, either going or coming; never deviating any except when the wind blows pretty strong, when they fly very low and along the more sheltered places, in order to avoid the wind as much as they can. It takes them on an average about thirty minutes to pass a given point, longer if the wind is against them, and less if it is in their favor. Thoir line being fully one hundred yards in width, and they flying with great rapidity it is impossible to count them or even to make an estimation that will approximate closely to the number; but their number is to this place to roost go during the day is not known to the writer, but they undoubted when the wind is great them, and they flying with great rapidity it is impossible to count them or even to make an estimation that will approximate closely to the number; but their number is to this place to roost g or more in every direction from the Roost. A few years and their optical been about a half a mile farther up the Conestoga, was destroyed by the clearing away of the woods which contained it, but they did not leave this section of the country, but immediately selected their present roost, to which they have come ever since.
