About 10 o'clock Mr. Samuel Wolf and his son commenced loading the car, then standing on his siding; and while in the act of loading, and before they had finished, there being five or six barrels of Wenger's flour still on the porch, or inside of the warehouse—about three o'clock in the afternoon, Wenger drove up and stopped the loading, giving as his reason, that he had just been informed that Brown had become insolvent. He ordered the men to take out the twenty-five barrels of Brown's flour, and load the car with his, (Wenger's) flour. This was accordingly done, and the car loaded and sent to Phitadelphia. No manifest or bill of lading for Brown had been made out, and the verbal order to the teamster entered in the freight-book, was profits.
