Miscellaneous. NOT ALL IN BRINGING UP. It isn't all in bringing up, Let folks say what they will;
You silver-wash a puter cap—
It will be puter still.
E'en he of old, wise Solomon,
Who said "train up a child,"
If mistake not, had a son,
Gay, rattle-brain and wild.

A man of mark, who fain would pass
For lord of sea and land,
May have the training of an ass,
To bring him up full grand;
May give him all the wealth of lore,
Of college and of school Another, raised by penury
Upon her bitter bread,
Whose road to knowledge is like that
The good for Heaven must tread,
Has got a spark of Nature's light,
He'll fan it to a flame,
'Till in tis burning letters bright
The world may read his name. If it were all in bringing up, In counsel and resulaint, Some rascals had been honest r I'd been, mysell, a saint. Oh! tisn't all in brining up, Let folks say what they will; Neglect may dim a silver cup— It will be stiver still.

Farmer gone to see the show, Daughter at the piano, Madame gally dress'd in satin, All the boys learning Latin, With a morigage on the farm. nesday, March 24, 1869.

Remarks of Hon. Wm. Sprague, of Rhode Island, in the Senate, Wed-Mr. Sprague—Mr. President, I took oc-casion the other day to express an opinion, based upon deep reflection, that the con-struction of this body was of such a character as to make it unit to check or to interfere in any form with the action of the President in his removals from office. It may be remembered that I did not then point to the individuals of this body, with many of whom my relations are of the most satisfactory character. My statement was that overlast the education to the exwas, that owing to the education, to the experience, and to the members of the body, it preference and to the members of the body, it was dangerous to the liberties of the American people to clothe it with the power contemplated, or to continue to clothe it with the power which for the past year or two it had exercised. For the performance of that duty, and that privilege, and that right, on my part, it became the province of the charlatan of the Senate to attack me personally in my Individual character and my individual capacity; and, sir, he brought to bear as a part of his argument the laughter of the galleries, chood here by the members of the Sonate.

I have one word to say to the galleries, they are here; and it is proper for me, in view of that direction, proper is the senate of the senate of the senate of the content of the limits of the senate of th

I favored the election of Gen. Grant in opposition to the aspirations of one connected with me by family ties. I did that because I felt that Grant had not learned the practices of those who had had charge of the Government; that he would have capacity to see through the intricacles of the things about him, and would judge more correctly of the exact condition in which things were, unblased, unprejudiced, uninfluenced, I watched his inaugural with anylety. I listened to every word that he me, as it were, separated from a grea become, as it were, separated from a great rebellion. And what position do we occupy to-day? Is there peace at the South? Is there a spirit of harmonious influence here in this Senate toward those people? Is there government among those people? Is there government among those people? Do their occupations prosper? A ret they not in a state of chronic revolution? And haveyou not had four long years in which to 'assure peace among the people? Is there justice in this land? Who that is a poor man dare take one that is rich before any court in this land? Is there individual protection—is there of the transprotection in this land? Mr. anxiety. I listened to every word that he uttered. I watched his countenance. I was nothing grander in the history of this age than the conduct of the British Government when she despatched her armies to distant Abyssinia to yindicate the personal ilberties of a few simple English citizens. Who is there in this assembly that would ask for like action on the part of the Government of the United States? I have called to the individual attention of Senators, and I have called to the attention of the body, the fact of the loss of nearly all—I may say to-day all of your industrial interests; but the apathy which seems to have been incoulated into every nerve and into every vein of this body and of the country, will not allow them to believe it until the mischief is upon them. Your immigration fell off thirty thousand last year from the year before. Why is that seems to have been inoculated into every nerve and into every vein of this body and of the country, will not allow them to believe it until the mischief is upon them. Your immigration fell off thirty thousand last year from the year before. Why is that New it until the mischief is upon them. Your immigration fell off thirty thousand last year from the year before. Why is that so? Is it not a clear case that it must be so? Is it not a clear case that it must be so? Is it not a clear case that it must be so? Where can these people obtain employment by coming here? If they take possession of the farms at the West, can they produce sufficient to supply them selves, at the cost of everything now, with the ordinary necessaries of life? Sir, it cannot be done. They cannot come here, and is it not a shame and a disgrace to all your legislation that it should be so? Three in the produce revolution and construction of the all your legislation that it should be so? Three in the produce revolution. I believe that the social, the material, and political condition of the country to this country with money in their pockets; and let me ask you of the Eastern States, do you send men and women and children to the West with money in their pockets? It ought to be known that the land on which at home those immigrants cultivate their crops, and maintain their families, and obtain the means to travel here and buy your property, is a patch of ground no bigger than this Senate Chamber?

You have lost in they take about all that I desire to say. What I have said about all that I desire to say. What I have said about all that I desire to say. What I have said has been in the performance of a duty. I know that I have said has been in the performance of a duty. I know that I have said has been in the performance of a duty. I know that I have said has been in the performance of a duty. I know that I have said has been in the performance of a duty. I know that I have said has been in the performance of a duty. I thank the senate for the attention which they have given to me in these remarks, I trust it will not be in their province to think for one moment that I have aimed at the body for any other purpose than upon high considerations of public duty. I trust that they will believe that I have looked into this question with environ with theory of the consideration with environ.

property, is a patch of ground no bigger than this Senate Chamber?

You have lost yeurcommerce. You ask the reason for it; and there is not a mantin this chamber that gives a satisfactory reason for the loss, except and because we are not paying specie for our bills. The reason is plain and simple that the construction of your Treasury is such that you, in common with the capitalists of this country, are speculating upon every industry and upon every laboring occupation. That is the reason, and there is no other. I told you the corps of the South were placed, consequent on high prices, was the most dangerous and disastrous position that it was possible to place them, for the apparent high prices here give a stimulus to the operations in and the production of cotton in Egypt, in India, and in Brazil. It is my deitherate judgment, and nobody can gainsay it, that in five years you will be clamoring here for a tariff to keep out foreign cotton. How are you going to pay your debts with that state of things? Send more bonds to Europe; send more of your capital away from the industries of the people! send more of your capital away from the in-dustries of the people!

I have mentioned and read the history of England prior to the revolution of 1688.—
Her people were distressed beyond measure, her people were persecuted; the Po-this her beotal vore III revealed; the control of the property of the p past. You have been educated to laugh at and to make light of the most serious things. You have been indoctrinated into a frivolous, thoughtless, senseless disposition. The education of the past has given to you that character; and it is not surprising that you should exhibit it here in this body and it is believed. Is it worth while for nor is it aurprising that the Senators themselves should exhibit it here in this body and it is believed. Is it worth that state of things. I am reminded of the idilotic inhabitant of a burning dwelling, invited and expostulated with, that he might seek a safe and expostulated with, that he might seek a safe and secure refuge, declining to do so on account of his teaching; the dwelling and its immate fell, and when the rubbish was cleared away nothing remained of him but the borror of the scene around him, rendered still more horrible by the outcries and the joering and laughter amid the ruins.

Mr. Sprague then proceeded to argue most conclusively against the Tenure-ot-Office Bill, showing its unconstitutionality and exposing the ills it had worked and the evils which were sure to follow its retention. He then proceeded as follows:

Sir, so far as I have been able to judge and compare, there is less individual responsibility and accountability in the Government of the United States than in any other government on earth. There is no one of the departments that is carried on upon correct and experienced business; independent and one overcome that difference that difference is the soot for the department of the United States than in any other government on earth. There is no one or the departments that is carried on upon correct and experienced business; independent the nower of instant removal.

Both the area of the departments that is carried on upon correct and experienced business; indegment. Take any one of them, and no business man would run it as it is now run for one moment. He could not do it. The fact is, if you deny or refuse to give to the Paratlant the nower of insta who were to be the agents in the execution of the laws, but I will reserve that for a future occasion.

I have spoken as to the material interests of the country, I have spoken as to the political influences that control them, but I have not spoken of the condition of American stellar and anything to console and comfort them in their examination of the state of domestic society and society condition among the people of the United States? I know something of the character of the people whom you have been taught to despise under other than the state of American society to day has less virtue, less morality in it, than that is the state of American society to day has less virtue, less morality in it, than that ithe fault of your legislation? The difference between those who powsess accidental fortunes and those who live by their dully labor is the cause of that demoralization. It is that atriving of those who served the control of the control of the contest virtue is lost. Where is there a father who is there a mother who sends her son into the contest to the contest of th the assistant assessor charged with the duty of assessing taxes on gains, profits and income of the person charged shall cause notice to be served on such person fifteen days prior to the day of hearing, notifying him to appear and show cause why the penalties prescribed by law should not be assessed on him by reason of such neglect or refusal. I did, for one, and I was among the very few, "seem the battle from afar off," and having performed that function and duty then, I have come up here to day to take there is the seem to the second that I is an intelligent of the time of the country. I have come here and have endeavored to impress it upon each individual member of the Senate and of the country. It is in that view and with that end that I speak to you now. Let me give you an incident in English history I read from the new American Cyclopedia.

Mr. Sprague here read the accounts of the came of the unity I have read any incident of this country to day, in my judgment, is not dissimilar to the condition of that in which this bad man wielded and exercised the power he did. There was a revolution, and this man was sout to exercise the revonge and hate of the gentle of the condition of the revonge and hate of the despotic power which held sway and dominion over Great Britain. An Exciting Incident.

Persons on the lower wharves of the city, a little after six o'clock this morning, witnessed an incident that occurred then in the river, the mortal agony of which, during the short time it lasted, rendered it intensely interesting. A gull had, with a swoon, struck its taions deep into the back of a fish, the size of which it had evidently mistaken, for instead of bearing it away, as it had intended, the fish not only remained in the water, but swam rapidly about on the surface of the river, mounted by its fluttering and now alarmed assailant, which was unable to disengage its claws from their fast-An Exciting Incident, among the people? Is there justice in this land? Who that is upoor man dare take one that is rich before any court in this land? Is there individual protection—is there cities in the state of the discount of the law, and the string protection in this land of liberty? Mr. President, if a railrond, or manufacturer, or a rich man is brought to the bar of any court in this land by a man not as well off as he, or a poor man, all the nice points of the law, and the stringements and knowledge of judicial procedents are brought to bear to defeat the poor and the weak. If in despotic France you interfere so as to injure the meanest of its citizons, the whole power of the Government comes in for his protection. It is not that the cather that the cather that the cather that had past on the poor and the weak. If in despotic France you interfere so as to injure the meanest of its citizons, the whole power of the Government comes in for his protection.

It is not be over y word that he processed in the despotic of the champion of free-tone that he should be independent and fearless in the discharge of his duties; but I went away with a sorrowing. The bring it away, as it atken, for instead of bearing it away, as it the discharge of his the protection in this land?

I watched his countenance. I watched his ecountenance. I watched his countenance. I watched his exponded to the words wherein he protection in this land? I watched his countenance. power of the Government comes in for his protection.

It is my intention, if I know how, to give the exact condition in which this country is now, hoping and trusting that by thus speaking what I know there will be a remedy for the difficulty.

I have mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned heretofore that there was a speaking that be mentioned by the speaking that the speaking that

The Sultan and Turkish Harems. A series of letters from Constanti-nople, recently published in the Perse-veranza of Milan, contain some inter-esting information about Turkish court-life. The Sultan is described as an incolent man, of lymphatic tempera-ment; he has not had much education, and understands no European language but French, of which he can speak a few words. His favorite occupation is new words. His favorite occupation is to look after his poultry-yard, which contains the rarest specimens of hens, ducks, geese, swans, etc. He gives enormous prices for rare birds, and spends hours in feeding his hens and watching his cocks fight. Among the higher officials of his court there are a few shie men, but the creek relievity of few able men, but the great majority of them, like the general body of the em-ployes of the State, are ignorant and inefficient. All the places under govnementar are given by favor, which is usually gained by services that cannot be openly acknowledged. But the inefficiency of the administration and the nullity of the sovereign are a small evil compared with the influence exercised by foreign diplomacy and foreigners in general. There are really at Con-stantinople as many governments as for-eign representatives, each of whom gives his countrymen far more protection than they would be entitled to at home. Though the interior of a harem is—notwithstanding the spread of European nations among the Turks— strictly closed to all male visitors, the society of foreign ladies is eagerly sought by the wives of all the higher function aries. The rooms they occupy, even in the wealthiest houses, are low and dark the wealthiest houses, are low and dark and furnished in very bad taste, chiefly owing to the mania of the Turkish women for tawdry ornaments from Vienna or Paris. By the side of the finest specimens of Oriental art may be frequently seen a vase of common Bohemian glass, with dusty wax flowers, which they prize more highly than many of the beautiful ornaments of their native manufacture. The same is the case manufacture. The same is the case with their dress, which is a caricature of the fashions of Paris. They have dis-carded the velvet jacket and trousers for stays, shiny boots, long trains, and immense chignons. It has also become the fashion to learn music, and a teacher on the pianoforte (of course a lady) has made a fortune by giving lessons in the harems. Another fashion is to have your portrait taken. Their favorite artist is an Englishwoman—a Miss Curtis. Some time ago this lady was commissioned to paint a full-length portrait of one of the Sultanas. The Sultana was short and stout, and Miss Curtis painted her accordingly. This, however, gave great offence, and the Sultana insisted on being made a foot taller saving that a share and was a sultana in the sultana saving that the sultana saving the s taller, saying that as she was only nine-teen years old she would be sure to grow to that size. But instead of growing taller, the Sultana only grew stouter; so that at the end of twelve months the portrait was almost unrecognizable. Miss Curtis was then requested to paint the picture a third time, and it is now nailed up to the ceiling of the harem.

These letters are dated March 12, 18 and S. 1861, and run thus: Now, Frank, this is the best office, in my judgment, in the gift of the President, and I would resign to-day if I were sure I could keep it four years. If you get it, I want to unito with you as a full partner in all land speculations and town sites." **
