Forly-six Years' Experience.

A farmer who has had experience as a farmer for forly-six years, gives to the American Agriculturist some notes on his farming practice. Among other things he remarks: "Some men say that corn will degenerate and run out. My father got a kind of yellow twelve-orded corn in the year of the great eclipse, in 1806, which I remember very well. I took it from him in the Spring of 1820, and have it now. It is an early sound corn, very easy to husk. I can raise eighty businels of shelled corn to the acre, with no extra labor, planting three and a half feet apart each way. I have another kind of cight-rowed yellow corn, which I got in 1828, which will grow and ripen in ninety or one hundred days. Wheat, oats and potatoes will degenerate and wear out (with ordinary culture.)

We do not harvest our grain and cut over hay early enough in this country. When I commenced farming I was closely watched by my neighbors, who said I ploughed too deep, cut my hay too early, and cut my grain too green. I have farmed on twelve different farms and the result has been I have tripled the crops on an average.

I understand, gentiemen of the convention, that I have been selected to perform the duties of this chair, not as the represented before you; but the duties of this chair, not as the represented before you; but they close of any one of the candidates, whose sentitive of any one of the candidates, whose in the duties of this chair, not as the represented before you; but the duties of this chair, not as the represented before you; but the duties of this chair, not as the represented before you; but the duties of this chair, not a
