OPPERTAND GEIST

There lives an editor up town Named Mister Elwood Greist; And yet another, further down, Named J. M. Willis Gelst. Pot-bellied, fat and short of neck Is Mister Elwood Greist; Long, lean, and lank, and scunt of "spock Is J. M. Willis Geist. Raw oysters, game, and roast beef rare.

Are gobblea down by Greist; While bran-bred stale and crackers tare Are ribbled at by Gelst. Old brandy, gin, and bottled ryo Are relished well by Greist; While cat-nip toz, (save on the sly.) Is all that's drank by Geist. A lond-mouthed, roaring, ranting pal Is Mistor Elwood Greist; A smooth-tongued, loyai Kadicai Is J. M. Willis Geist.

A champion of the Geary Thugs Is Mister Elwood Greist; A chief of Geary's water-plugs Is J. M. Willis Geist. The Inquirer is the sheet controlled By Mister Elwood Greist; The Express is the mouth-piece bold Of J. M. Willis Geist.

But these two loyal editors, By Beelzebub enticed, Are always quarreling like cors--These patriots, Greist and Gelst, A coal of hate burns in the breast Of Mister Elwood Greist; While venom swells the narrow chest Of J. M. Willis Geist. of J. M. wins detail bull-dog pup, The other like a "fiste;" And grievous words are thus stirred up "Twixt Meesrs. Greist and Gelst.

"You couldn't quite wear thaddy's shirt!" Succred J. M. Willis Gcist; "You wear a dickcy, daubed with dirt" Laughed Mitter Elwood Groixt. "The people's verdlet made you quail," Grinned J. M. Willis Geist; "Their verdlet once locked you in Jali," Replied quick-witted Greist, You shared with Kauffman and with Fry Our bribery fund!" said Geist; "There you incontinently lie!" " Roared honest Elwood Greist.

"You tried to cheat us of our vote !" Snarled J. M. Wills Geist; "Yes, but I never forged a note !" Retorted Elwood Greist. 'Of the Thug kite you are the tail," Yelled J. M. Willis Goist

And you a levier of black mall," Growled angry Elwood Greist. "You are the willing tool and slave Of thioving Thugs!" said Gelst; "And you a vilialn and a knave-A cheat—a fraud!" said Greist.

A chent-a iraud!' said offest, "What soldiers builts reared yon pile Of brick so high?" quoth Geist; "Not soldiers such as you, poer, vile, Convicted wietch!" said Grass. And thus goss on their war of word?, With criminations spiced!-Ah! should they change their pens

A FIZZLE.

Ahi should they change their per swords— These herces, Geist and Greist— There would be morial combat then, Till both were sacrificed!— And who would care for Geary then? And who for Goist or Greist?

FINIS.

The Republican meeting held mittee on Applause became ashamed of clapping their hands at the empty air, and the Band very appropriately ended the fizzle by playing "Not for Joe."
