The advantages are, that you save the time of taking your grain to the mill, the toll, and having your grain-always at hand in a proper condition to use them is a steadiness about the food that is one of the main elements of success in feeding fattening animals.

An addition of a twy quarts of rye and an escasional peck of oats, making a lictly variety, is always a judicious plan; either of which are as easily cooked as the heavier and barger kernels of corn.

To fatten well, hog- must have nelean pen and a combridate hest. An addition of muck or mould or dry leaves should he made to the yard at least twice in each week, and the bed should have special attention as often as every other inght. We have lose been at the opinion that there was not that attention paid to the curing and saving of the corp fadder that its value demanded. Every good farmer must know that cattle eat it greedily through the winter, and it cut and steamed it is as good for them as the best hay and feally more milk-producing.

Where is the necessity of allowing it to remain in shocks until the middle or end of November? Corn should not be cut down until the stalks are dying and the create and schools. It is so no of the most Valuable Estates in the stalks are dying and the create and schools.

Where is the necessity of allowing it to temain in shocks mutil the middle or end of November? Corn should not be cut down until the stalks are dying and the grain is pretty hard, and then it should remain no longer in the field than is absolutely necessary for the drying of the grain. It should be husked as early as possible, and the fodder
