physical or moral intimidation, he was prevented from voting.

An actual judicial examination would thus test the existence or non-existence of fraudulent naturalization certificates. If they exist, I would prove the fact (it may be by their production,) and denounce them and I would at any rate thus protect and defend the vote of a naturalized citizen with the same energy and determination with which I now defend the rights of legal electors throughtout the committee of the robitical opinions.

Thus upon both sides of these causes, by an unfilinching determination, would I arrive at the real merits of the cases, and in the investigation as I know myself to be headless of the result of which I must now be profoundly ignorant.

It is a remarkable fact that, in the nearly three hundred election divisions of the city, in four (one having returned a majority in four (one having returned as majority in favor of contestants and three in favor of respondents) does it appear by evidence that a crowd of voters, known as repeators, made their appearance; and these did so, from 15 to 20, at certain specified hours during the day. In one of these divisions where the majority was for respondents the masority of the Court have purged the poll; in the other three my brothron have rejected the vote altogether.

First. Unless the vote of whole divisions is rejected absolutely in the computation of majorities, each of the respondents received a majority of votes at the election in October, 1868.

Second. Adopting even the rule of the majorities not contested, the unassessed votes proved or acconned for, Furman Sheppard was elected District Attorney, and Daniel M. Fox was elected Mayor.

Third. If eyery illegal and unassessed vote is rejected in the floal count, the respondents, with the possible exception of vote is rejected in the final count, the respondents, with the possible exception of the Receiver of Taxes, received a majority of the votes cast in October, 1868.

MR. SHEPPARD WITHDRAWS.

Mr. Sheppard said:—If your Honor pleases: On Saturday last the majority of the judges of this court, acting upon certain views of the law and of the facts which wore expressed in the opinion, decided that the present incumbent of the office of District Attorney has not been legally and truly elected. There has been a certicoraritaken, and I desire to avoid, and not even to be the occasion of any unseemly diccussion as to how far that writ will operate as aupercedeas, or as to whether the learned so he are occasion of any unseemly discussion as to how far that writ will operate as a supercedeas, or as to whether the learned gentleman who is my contestant, or myself, is really entitled to administer the office in the meantime. Matters of that office in the meantime. Matters of that gort may affect seriously the interests of the Commonwealth and the administration of justice, and might have a legal bearing upon the causes to be tried in this court. It is my wish to do everything in my power to prevent the public business heing effected by such entauglements. Bealdes, it is not agreeable to be discharging official duty before a tribunal which has decided that the officer is not entitled to the cosition. It have therefore come to the position. I have therefore come to the It is due to the public; due to the Court and it is due to the public; due to the Court and its business; due, perhaps, to myself, if a personal consideration can be referred to here, that I should not prosecute the pleus of the Commonwealth. While the writ is pending, I, therefore, with profound respect for the court and all its members, decline any longer to represent the Cummonwealth while the case is awaiting the action of the appellate court.

The act of assembly provides for such a contingency, and, as we are beginning a new period of this term, with a now jury, the change can be made at this time with less prejadice to the public interests than upon a fature occasion.

JUDGE LUDLOW'S RESPONSE.

Ludge Endlow said—Of course the district attorney of the county has a perfect right to adopt whatever steps he deems necessary in the present juncture of affairs. I entirely concur with him in the propriety of abstancing from presenting the pleas of the Commonwealth, under the decision of the majority of this Court, from which it is known I dissented on Saturday last. It is proper for him to the decision of the majority of this Court, irom which it is known I dissented on Saturday last. It is proper for him to abstain from conducting the pleas of the Commonwealth until some disposition is made of the writ of certiorari, which I understand is now pending, and upon the reords of the office. I must, however, see to it that the public interests de not suffer. There is a heavy griminal calendar, including a large number of homicide cases and a triatof special importance which was fixed for Wednesday of this week (Brooks case). It is therefore my duty, in the absence of the district attorney of the county, under the act of assembly to appoint a district attorney project. The authority is derived from that agt and from that agt alone; and in making this appointappoint a district attories min from that act alone; and in making this appoint ment I am governed by considerations which affect the public interests alone. If the gentleman is whom the certificate of election would be awarded is successful before the Supreme Court, he will be called upon to proseents the pleas of the Commonwealth. If that judgment should in any way be disturbed or reversed, the present district attorney would be compelled to again take charge of the other. It therefore, seems to me that the course pursued by the district attortey is proper, in that by no act of his shall the public interests be injured; and I am sire that by no act of his shall the public interests be injured; and I am sire that by no act of his shall the public interests be injured; and I am sire that by no act of his shall the public interests be injured; and I am sire that by no act of his shall the public interest be injured; and I am sire that by no act of his shall the public interest be injured; and I am sire that by no act of his shall the public interest of mine will such a respective public for me put to appoint the gentleman declared elected by the court district attorney pro tem. I therefore direct the following order to be entered:

A failure to obtain a new nomination for

In 1829 Joseph Rituer was nominated for Governor by the rising faction of anti-Masons, at the head of whom was Thaddeus Stovens. In this contest, his vote was small. He was again nominated against George Wolf by the anti-Masons in 1832, and although defeated, the heavy vote which he received gave evidence of popularity and strength among the people beyond that of the faction to which he belonged. Divisions among the Democrats in 1835, enabled Ritner to gratify his long-cherished ambition of becoming Governor. There were two democratic candidates in the field, George Wolf and Hanry A. Muhlenberg, and between them Ritner slipped in. During his administration the great system of Public Works inaugurated by Governor Wolf was continued. Some extravagant railroad schemes were started, among them the notorious Tape-worm road in Adams county, the rulned culverts of which are still to be seen. Thos, B. Burrowes now President of the State Agricultural College, was Ritner's Secretary of State; James Todd, of Fayette county, was the Attorney Genoral, and Thaddeus Stevens, a member of the Canal Board, was the leader of the administration. The large the people, made the administration of Ritner extremely unpopular. When presented for re election, he was defeated by David R. Porter by an immense majority. At this election, for the first time in the political history of the Commonwealth, the most corrupt practices were resorted to to insure success. The Canal Board raised from contractors and others employed on the Public Works what Thaddeus Stevens irreverently called a Missionary Fund to be employed in elections, and the returns of the votes at Millerstown in Adams county, and other places showed a capacity for fraud in that early day which taight well exoite envy in the breast of a Covode. In the midstof the storm raised by the attempt to defeat the will of the people in the elections in ISSS, the administration of Ritner closed. The lawfully chosen representatives were admitted to their seats and the Buckshot War ended without the shedding of blocd.

On retiring from office Governor Ritner purchased a farm in Cumberland county, on which he continued to reside almost to the day of his death. He never again emerged from private life, though he made one or two unsuccessful attempts to obtain office. He was an applicant for the Treasureship of the Mint, under President Taylor, but, being disappointed, he was never again emard of in politics.

Though he was the object of much denuciation and ridicule while Governor, yet he was a man of considerable intellect and force of character. Although a violent partisan, some of the worst acts of his administration must be attributed to the recklessness of his official advisers and the party spirit which prevailed at the time. Without possessing much education, he had no little knowledge and experience in public affairs. He was one of the Governors of the "Farmer Commonwealth," has disappeared.
