THE LAND ASTRUMENT INTERLIGENCE IN CONTROL OF THE PROPERTY OF

Major Deverel got as good a welcome as any man could have desired. He and my brother had been at school together. My brother had been at school together. My brother had gone to Cambridge, then to the bar, and had been going to the western circuit when his friend, Frank Deverel, had been through hard fighting in India. They had seen each other but seldom, but had corresponded without intermission; and now it was pleasant to see my brother of forty years of age and his friend, a few years younger, standing with grasped hands, looking in each other's faces, recalling old memories, both very happy in the old friendship so faithfully cherished, and so suddenly gratified by this pleasant appearance on Valentine's day.

We land bacakfast; and after bacakfast I heard Major Deverel saw how standards again.

Intrary now. He answered, "By and by by and by."

The word "full" was acted by a busy postman delivering valentines to a crowd who whose full bags they filled pockets, baskets, brown-paper parcels. It was made a very merry seeme parcels. It was mede a very merry seeme parcels. It was made a very merry seeme parcels

We had bacakfast; and after bacakfast I heard Major Deverel say how strangely fast my brother had seemed to run through life—only forty, and twice married; with three boys, and an eldest son shooting up into manhood. "Why, my life," he said, "the great struggle of youth carried into battle-fields full of danger, fuller of thought, and a responsibility that shuts self out of one's mind, is not the life that a man looks forward to. The patriarchal vine and fig tree life advances upon one in a sort of vision, and claim's one's sympathy. Yes; he added, thoughtfully. "and comes in some of men's best moment's, I think," I felt quite for the patriarchal vine and figure in the superior of the superior of the content of the superior of the superior of the content of the
