The funeral expenses were borne by the Railroad Company, a very neat walnut coffin having been provided. Father Reilly officiated and administered the last rites of the church. Deceased was an orphan, and had no relatives in this country except a cousin whose name we could not learn, who resides at Port Richmond, Philadelphia. At the time of the accident deceased had on his person some $300, principally in gold, which was taken in charge by a railroad official, and has been or will be sent to his cousin. An inquest was held on the body last evening, by Coroner Dysart, and the following mamed jurors:—Henry Swentzel, J. O. Steinheiser, William M. Compton, M.
