For the Intelligencer. Thunderbolts and Lightning Rods. MESSIES, EDITORS:--On Tuesday night, the 9th of August, 1870, the weather being warm and sultry, with a display of still lightning to the North in the early part of the ovening, the barometer standing at 29.7 thermometer at 85 deg., the air humid, causing languor and prolapse of the norry-ous system, I determined to dovot the head. The humid atmospheresemend to be superhead-thead. The humid atmospheresemend to be guined at the superhead-guine head. The humid atmosphere seemed to be conducting the caloric from the superheat-ad earth to the clouds after sunset. Although the thermometer ranged no higher than 89 degrees through the day, it was feverishly but in the sun.

At midnight the clouds began to the ken overhead, coming from the northwest and the southwest with very little wind below. From the peculiar dingy appearance of the clouds, the quiescense of the air below, and the prolapsing sensation of my nervous system, I anticipated shocks of earth quakes. Soon, however, the elements above denoted what was coming, and about one o'clock the heavens immediately over the city were one contering a comiumetion of two From the peerliner ding's appearance of the construction. In two meantime the whole city was aroused by the ery of fire, the ringing of clurch bells, and the rumbling and plping of steam fire origines. It was a night long to be re-membered by the people of Lancaster city. On the morning, in company with several gentlemon of the city. I male a tour of in-vestigation, to see and learn how the ques-flor stool concerning thunderbolts and lightning rods; for never before in twenty years did the natter present itself so full and fair, and within my personal reach for investigation. Mrs. Kelley's dwelling, a orres-house standing on their corner of Orange and Shippen streets, on the highest ground in the city, was struck on the lighthing rod, the point slightly bent and fixed. The barge boards running up within two feet of those ignited the wooden structure of the roof, between the slate covering outside, between the slate covering outside, laster covering inside, permuting and ing the whole roof. After that the remen came and put it out. The cellar vall, on a line with the rod outside, was which on a time with the role consider, was riven, and the mortair driven out between the stones. The copper bell wire, running along the ceiling and middle of the cellar was dothgrated, leaving a corresponding streak of simeke up to the bell at the ceiling of the first floor. A. Evans appointed foreman of the Orand Jury, Judge Hayes, in his instructions to the Grand Jury, concluded, by remarking that, wherever the testimony was couclusive in any accusation brought before them, it would be their duty to find a true bill in the case, without consulting their own opinions as to the expediency of the law, under which the bill is presented to them, or the trivial nature of the charge; as it was a maxim of law and conceded by the com-enkindled by a flash of lightning, and in the mind of all the ideas of death and de-townships. The different candidates for truction were commingled. The rain fell in torrents while the engines rattled with loarse notes of the firemen's horns rose above the din caused by the war of the ele-ments. It was truly a night of terror. When morning broke, affording us a chance for gathering up the particulars, we found the city full of rumors about the damage done, from which we glean the following facts: The residence of Mrs. Catharine Kelly, on the corner of East Orange and Shippen streets, was struck by lightning at the west end, and took fire therefrom, burning the set of the grant of the fire last to the lightning rod, running about half way down and then separating it, when it fell to the ground. Hereit ran along the ground to the toror of the house and communicated with the door bell, burning up all the wire save a half-inch. The steam fire engines were on the ground and rendered prompt and efficient service, though the Washington burst two sections and the Friendship and American each one section of their forcing hose. Two or three firement were slightly hurt by falling slate from the roof of the house. The residence of Henry Deerr, butcher, in Water street, was also struck and set on fire, but not seriously damaged.
