One reason why grass crops run out is because they are fed too late in the full, or over fed. In the spring they should not be fed at all. Cutting some kinds of grass too low is often very injurious. When the top of the root of herdsgrass is taken up by mowing or feeding too close by sheep, it begins to fall and the owner is at a loss to know why it has run out so soon, little thinking that this close shaving of the roots is the cause of his loss and disappointment.—Maine Farmer.

Farmer's Horses in Autumn.

Farmer's Horses in Autumn.

Farmer's Horses are often neglected in the autumn—perhaps we should be justified in saying alused. The heavy work of the season is done, and, though there are almost daily jobs for the horse to perform, it is frequently considered well chough to drop their grain, and let them thrive as best they can on the pasture. Another serious complaint the horse would make, had he the power, is that proper and timely shelter is not furnished. There is scarcely a night after the middle of September during which the farmers' work horses should not be sheltered in the stable. Preservation of their health and ceonemy in their kepping demand this. Suppose it is a cold, windy, frosty night—we will not discuss the absolute cruelty of main to a furtious storm—after feeding awhile they become chilled and resort to running to get warm; they accomplish their object, but often at the cost of a stumble and fall in the dark, a cut or a sprain which puts a blemish on them for life. Then, being warm and irred from running, they are inclined to reserve the word to be presumed it was parain which puts a blemish on them for life. Explosive Agents.

The caution that should be observed in storing away explosive agents in safe places is inculcated by an accident that occurred recently in Greenock, Scotland.—Twelve young men took roinge from a shower in an unoccupied smith's shop.
