The Pennsylvania Railroad in Virginia. There is at present extraordinary quietude in legislative affairs at Harrisburg; which we presume is mainly owing to the fact that the Pennsylvania Railroad officials are now busily engaged at Richmond, in laying siege to the Legislature of Virginia. These famous manipulators, although perfectly competent to manage one State at a time, seem to doubt their ability to properly attend to two big ones at once; and so we may expect the quietude of Harrisburg to continue for a week or two, until, Virginia being swallowed, the boa-constrictor is ready for its old meal upon Pennsylvania. Virginia being a virgin State, which has never heretofore en corruptly approached by the seductive managers of the Pennsylvania Railroad, has naturally given them a great deal of trouble, and there are even indications that they may be unsuccessful in their present vigorous attempt to take possession of her. readers will naturally what railroad connections the Pennsylvania Central Railroad, running east and west, can possibly want with roads running north and south in eastern Virginia; since it would seem to be physically impossible for the latter to throw any important trade upon the former The simple answer, probably, is that the Pennsylvania Railroad has no such wants or interests, but its managers and the freight monopoly barnacles that are attached to it, may obviously have important private interests to subserve in controlling freights any where ; and they are sufficiently unserupulous, to use th immense power and resources of the ailroad which they manage in obtain ing this control. The Pennsylvania Railroad managers are striving now to get possession of a through line of rai road from New York to New Orleans, along the Atlantic coast and through the cotton States : their object being t obtain control of the cotton and other freight of the South and Southwest, o which they will probably throw what they can upon the western connections The of their main line at Cincinnati. cannot otherwise get any of this freight upon the line of the Penn-ylvania Railroad, unless they take it around from Baltimore by way of Harrisburg or Lancaster. They, however, act in concert with the direct lines from New York to Baltimore, from which latter city they have lately finished a road of their own Washington. They have a charter for a railroad from Washington to Fred ericksburg, in Virginia. They also con trol the line of railroad from Richmon to the Southwest, passing through Dan ville, Va., Columbia, S. C., and Augusta Ga. There is, therefore, wanting in their through line only the short link between Richmond and Fredericksburg and this is what they are striving no to obtain from the Virginia Legislature

They are encountering fierce opposition and have found it necessary to buy newspaper in Richmond to obtain an organ of their views. The proprietor the Richmond Enquirer could not b bought to advocate their schemes, bu he sold them his newspaper, and under their conduct this ancient organ of the Democracy is daily demeaning itself by advocating the surrender of Virginia b the mercenary cohort of Pennsylvania Railroad managers. The Press of the State is nearly unanimously opposed to assuming the voke which these me would impose upon Virginia, and it i to be hoped that they may be successful in their effort to evade it. They ar aided by divers railroad interests, the parties concerned in which, though they

Prospects of Peace.

- Pennsylvania - Railrot people, are still doing a good work striving to prevent the people of Vi ginia from being laid, bound hand at foot, at the feet of a gigantic, soulles railroad corporation. It should be the bolicy of the Loris lature of Virginia, as of the Legislature of all other States, in chartering railroads to carefully guard against the possibility of their creature acquiring great power, and becoming greater that its creator. They should be anxio always to create diverse and conneting railroad interests within their borders and should strive to make them, a much as possible, of equal power; aim ing to so control them that nonthem may ever grow to be such his fish as to attempt to swallow th smaller ones whole. With several competing railroads in a State, none of which are allowed to become so power gut us to enculf the others, the local in gerests of the State will prosper; and th people will govern their State and their railroads. New Jersey and Pennsylvanin are shining examples of the fate which overtakes States which are traversed by manusority through-lin ailroads of over-whelming power : they are governed by them. The number of large and distinct railroad interests, which now exist in Virginia, will render it comparatively easy for her Legis for the best interests of the State. Th aim should be to keep their power in shadowing another. With the Baltimore and Ohio, Chesapeake and Ohio. Atlantic, Mississippi and Ohio, Pennsylvania and other great railroads, to play off against each other, this should has it should be, and the mass of private ot be difficult. Local interests along the line of the Rond are ruthlessly sacrificed and manufactories are prevented from springing up thereon be cause of the discrimination in freights made against the towns on the line for whose carrying trade the Railrond has no competition, and in favor of localities outside of the State which are blessed with a choice of railways to take their goods to market. Here in the City of Lancaster, a town of 22 000 population, no less than three passenger trains a day rush at rapid speed across our streets, not deigning to stop an instant within our limits to accommo date the travel of our city. Such may he the fate of Richmond if this road gets its charter to Fredericksburg. Some of these days it will see passenger trains being driven rapidly across its outskirts without stopping, because the exigencies of competition for "through" travel forbid the accommodation of local traffic. Even Philadelphia is treated in this way new Judicial Districts are being created, by the Pennsylvania Railroad, and a through train rushes through it every night from New York to the West with
