truth of it is nowhere more evident than in the treatment of the milch cow, that the prevention of an evil is better than the cure. The difficulty of calving, and the mortality afterwards, are in a great measure to be traced to the improper management of the cow. So far as the udder is concerned, there is a plan usually adopted, and a very necessary one—the cow is dried six or eight weeks before calving. Two reasons are diven for this: the first is, that after a long period of milking, the strength and constitution of the cow require a little resolite; a more important reason, howover for this: the first is, that after a long period of milking, the strength and constitution, which defects can not be readily remedied. The pigs often constitution of the cow require a little respite; a more important reason, however, is that from some cause that has never been fully explained, the mixture of the old milk, and the new secretion that nature prepares for the expected calf, produces frequently great irritation and inflammation in the udder, and chestinate garget is apt to ensue.

During the early period of gestation the animal may, and should be, tolerably well fed, for she has to provide milk for the dairy and nourishment for the focus, because the should be moderation and care; but when she is dried, her food should be considerably diminished. She should not be too fat from the womb, continued several days. and which is observed to a greater or and which is observed to a greater of less extent in all quadrupeds, that gives the notion of anything being retained. Medicine, nevertheless, is necessary in order to prevent that access of fever to which the cow in high condition is lia-ble; but that medicine should be administered, not in the form of a stimuministered, not in the form of a samulating cordial, from the false supposi-tion that the animal wants support after the fatigue and pain it has undergone, but in that of a purgative, in order to prevent an attack of fever to which the animal is so naturally exposed after par-turition, and which is so often aggravated by absurd management. The mother requires little care after calving, except that of protection from too great of weather, and this more especially if she had been much nursed before parturition.—American Stock

Prepare Your Hot-Beds.

In the course of a few weeks from now—say about the middle to the last of February, hot-beds should be filled with fresh stable manure and seeds of tomatoes, early cabbage, celery, pepper, lettuce, egg-plant, etc., sown, if ye would have have an early supply of these vegetables. In order to avoid depredations of rats, a pit should be dug about 2 feet deep and lined with brick, stone or stout plank running the frame up about a foot and a half above ground in the rear, and about one foot in front; bank up all around with dirt firmly. In this pit, at the proper time as above suggested, place your fresh manure about two feet deep, pressing it firmly; and if it is dry wet; all through slightly. Over this put three inches of good, rich, light loam or chip manure, finely sifted, and in three or four inches in some of them three or four inches in some or them three or four inches in some of them three or four inches in some of them three or four inches in sending it would not yield to ordinary trement, I discover the tend. moderation and care; but when she is drifted, her food should not be considerably diminished. She should not be not fat or full of blood at the time of ealying for that is the frequence cause of difficult along garget, milk fiver, and death—there are lew things in which the farmer errs more than in this. There may be an error in starving her before she calves, but it is a much more dangerous one to bring her into too leigh condition.

Some cows are apt to stark their captures. Some cows are apt to stark their frequence date of their time. This generally happens about the middle of their pregnancy, if about that time a cow is uneasy, feverish, off something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and of the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and of the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing of the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing of the food something for which she seems to have a "longing," or most greedly and the food something for which she seems to have a "longing of the food so

If she is not quieted, she should be mashed and physicked again in the course of three or lour days. She should be immediately removed from the other cowe; for should she slink her calf among them, it is not improbable that some, or even all of the others will do the same. This is not easily accounted for, but it is perfectly true.—The cow that slinks her calf will often require much attention. She should always be physicked, and in some cases bled, and after that, the best thing to be done with her is to fatten her for the butcher; for she will probably do the same again and teach others to habit.

the Rural New-Yorker:

I write to inform you of a surve cure for all kinds of catarrh in sheep. Take a quill from a hen's wing, immerse the leather in spirits of turpentine, run it up the nostril of the sheep, the whole length of the feather-end, twist it round to the street with the wing to write the sheep. before withdrawing it; wipe it off clean each time before immersing. One application will cure ordinary cases; the second or third, at intervals of two or second or third, at intervals of two or three days, will cure the worst.

There are two kinds of catarrh in sheep, one will yield to ordinary treat-ment, like tarring the nostril, and one will not. In the fall of 1865, my sheep had an attack of the latter kind; the ucus would hang from the nostrils of ome of them three or four inches in

Take the crumbs of a new-drawn white loaf, mold it until it becomes as close as wax, and very pliable; then beat it and roll it with a rolling-pin as the sash a little, and give your rapidly growing plants plenty of air. Be sure, however, to put down the sash tight before sun-down; and if a cold spell comes on, throw straw or hay, or old clothes over the sash until the weather moderates. Water as required, and you will be independent of the professional gardener or green-house proprietor, whose plants, too often, are delicate and worthmarks. The same plants are supported by the sash until the professional gardener or green-house proprietor, whose plants, too often, are delicate and worthmarks. To often are delicate and worthmarks.

ceedings of the American Institute Farmers' Club we clip from the Rural New Yorker:

Cornat Wilson, Springyale, N. Y., asks as to "the relative merits of the Suffolk pig and the Chester White; also, as to the cross of the Chester with the common pig, as compared with the similar cross of the Suffolk; and thirdly, is there anything to be gained by crossing one of these breeds with the other?"

The Commander called upon Col. Curtis of the Suffolk; and thirdly, is to reply. Mr. Curtis said: If I should tell you exactly what I thought I should say the best breed was my own, the Victoria. The most fashionable breed to-day is the Berkshire. They are smaller and better hogs than the old Berkshires that were so strongly of the suffolk. The most fashionable breed to-day is the Berkshire. If the House agrees to the amendment which the Senate has made to the Executive and Legislative Appropriation bill, providing for the consolidation of all the Government reservations lying between the Capitol and White House into a park, Washington will have a liner park than any city in the country has, within its thickly-peopled limits. The new park will be about, two miles long by half a mile wide, running parallel with Pennsylvania Avenue, and but from one to four squares distant from the city's great thoroughfare; and, as all the land is Government property, and much of it is already improved with walks, drives, and shade trees, the cost will be but trifing. The park will include the Botanic Gardens, Armory square, the Smithsonian Institute, the grounds and buildings of the Agricultural Department the Washington Monument grounds, and the large reservation south of the Presi-dent's house. A circular drive of five miles in length could be laid out, and there would be abundant space for lakes, fountains, walks, and a zoological garden.

NEW STEEL ENGRAVINGS! A GIFT WORTH FROM $1,00 TO $25,000 GIVEN WITH EACH ENGRAVING! We have obtained the entire control of the ollowing engravings, which we offer at the although they are really worth $5.00 each.—
They are lexit inches, and each is a gem of art.

A Legend of the Rhine. A female of race beauty sits on the shore of the river, where the rocks are the most dangerous, and with her song and music charms the unwary sailors to near her, when they meet a watery grave. The subject is full of life, full of emotion, and is altogether a success.

THE DISINHERITED! with deep sorrow in examining this subject so well drawn.

THE CHILD CHRIST!

A child with human body and dress, angelic acc, and divine eyes, is represented so well that words cannot tell half its worth. We do not think that any engraving has yet reached the excellence of this, in touching the heart and lifting it away to a higher world. The eye never tires to look. The more it is seen, the greater the desire to look again and again.

Also, a correct Lithograph Likeness of CEN, STONEWALL JACKSON. The best, largest and handsonnest ever published, 19x24 inches, worth $5.00, which we will self on the same terms, for $2.00. It is truly a gent of art. N E W

FORTUNE FOR YOU! With each engraving, till we have sold 50,0 pies, we will give FREE, one share or ticke stitling each shareholder to one of the follow ng gjfts.
