But difficulties infinitely more serious than petty rivalry were thickening round the Carlist. Ten thousand men garrisoned the fortresses, and Sarsfield was some on the ground, and then the whole great force gathered in a semi-circle round the guerillas, and bore them helplessly backward to the ridge of the Pyrenees, where 25,000 risons to battle. But though Mina, who had just come up, was in the last with 12,000 men, all declined the challenge. For the Government had issued a decree forbidding their troops to engage unless with a "decided superiority of num-
