THE LANCASTER WEEKLY INTELLIGENCER,

TO CREATE OF TOTAL PRINCESS TO THE COMMENT OF THE PRINCESS TO THE COMMENT OF THE COMMENT

FASHIONABLE HATTERS. It has long been notorious that Butler is a coarse, corrupt, worthless sort of man. This was known by the President, the Sec retary of State, and the Senate when he was appointed and confirmed. Egypt was also known as the most corrupt and vicious country on earth, and they seut Butler there with their eyes open, to make what he could; and by adopting and possibly extending the system to which President Grant has given such development in this country, he is making what he can there.

But why should Butler be demounced with such severity by those who upheld Grant, and have no fault to find with him for keeping a proved bribe taker at the head of the State Department?—N. Y. Sun.

more profitable than hens. It may be the impression, that in order to keep ducks a person must have a pond or stream of water near by, has deterred many from keeping them, but there is no need of anything of the kind. It is true that it is better to have a pond or stream but you can raise ducks just as well elsewhere. I know of parties that are very successful in raising them, they have only a shallow tubset in the ground, and filled from the pump occasionally. In fact, the trouble of raising ducks, and about the only one, is letting the young go into the water too soon after they leave the nest. When I speak of the profits from ducks, I do not have reference to the ducks, I do not have reference to the common duck that is seen every day.

I mean a breed of ducks that will weigh twelve pounds to the pair, alive, such and being very large and excellent for the market, and it costs no more to rear them than the common duck, that will pounds to the pair. The Rouen is a very handsome duck in plumage; the drake has a glossy green head and neck down to a white ring on his neck, and the lower part of the body is a beautiful green-brown gray, and shaded with brown on the back. The duck is of a beautiful brown, with about every feather shaded on the outer edge with black. They are acknowledged the best of the varieties, laying very early, and continuing through the season, and late in white, both the duck and drake, and about the same size as the Rouen. Both become very familiar, and being very familiar, and being very samiliar, and being very familiar, and familiar familiar of about ten rods. In the course of the day, if the lime is applied in the morning, the bugs nearly all betake themselves further down the rows where no lime was scattered. The next day he scatters lime on the vines, for a like distance, and thus continues day by day till the bugs are driven on to a smill area, when they are destroyed by Paris green or by other means.

The Apple-Tree Borer.

If there is any plague of Insects, next to the potato-bug, which has baunded my sleephing hours, it is the apple-tree combined any amount of eternal vigilance, cold steel, and knee pads, only to be event, and the trutistic power of the third to the little pests, with their trutisk looking as if they had received a double does of malignant small pox. Not content with attacking the base of the treesthey would go so high as the lover branches and drill themselves into the exothers.

I was in despair; when I had written to some great light of horticulture of my trouble, and was coolly informed "that the fruit-grower in every new country was subject to such little inconvenience," perhaps I was something else. I was about to give up vanquished, and after committing my orchand the was advised for the past two years has proved with me a decided success. In the Spring, just before vegetation starts, level the ground, and pack it firmly around the foot of the tree, in a circle from two to four feet in diameter, according to the size of the tree, encording to the size of the tree, and under the production of the proping in the formation of the proping in the feet of the production of the proping in the feet of the production of the proping in the feet of the production of the proping in the production of the pr business paramount to every other consideration, He must board at home, and dress in good taste, but must avoid all extravagances, such as wearing a locket (I care not whether it be Milton gold or any other kind of gold) on his watch-chain. He must be polite, and wear either siders or a moustache, not both, and part his hair in the middle. He must be sober, and have no associations with Blossoms or Poor Boys, but I have no objections to his joining any of the clubs whose object is morality alone. I have in my family four daughters between the ages of 21 and 30 who are marriageable. I do not desire to have my family disgraced by any one whose antecedents are not above suspicion, and who would not reflect honor upon us all. Now, if I can obtain the services of a young man who answers the description I have given, he will have a fair chance of eventually succeeding to an interest in my business, and perhaps yet become a shining light in the commercial world. If the Sua will give any light that will enable me to lind with me a decided success. In the Spring, just before vegetation starts, level the ground, and pack it firmly around the foot of the tree, in a circle from two to four feet in diameter. Take unleached ashes and air-slacked lime equal parts, well mixed, adpply to the circle thus made, covering the ground well over two or three inches in death. Then take strong soap-sade way. One by one hegota hen in training for every row of potatoes in his field, and apply to the circle trus made, covering the ground well over two or three inches in depth. Then take strong soap-suds, or better, a solution of half-a-pound salsod at one gallon water, and wash the trunk and base of the lower limbs thoroughly. Repeat this operation in the Fall of the year, just before freezing weather,—ashes, lime, washing, and all,—and if any one who is as badly troubled as I have been, has never seen this simple receipt will try it, all I have to say is, that if his experience equals mine, he will send me the largest apple, postpaid, his rejuvenated trees bear, that Uncle Samuel will allow in the mailbags.

the commercial world. If the Sun will give any light that will enable me to find the object of my search, I will be greatly favored. I remain, yours truly, Wm. Brown, Merchant—Broadway, N. Hens, sparrows, cats, &c., might rid us altogether of the animated pest that now make life miserable.—N. Y. Times. Enoch Arden on Long Island. Twenty-seven years ago, a young and interesting couple were married in one of the principal villages of Queens county. The bride had been the belle of the village celery in trenches dug deep with the spade has been abandoned by the market gardeners and is now considered a uscless expense. It is found to do much better grown on the surface, making a quicker and a greater growth, on which the quality so much depends, and the labor of digging the trenches is saved. We hope, therefore, it will be found more easy to grow it, and that it will come into more common use.

Celery does best on a deep, rich loam. If the land is not sufficiently rich, apply old well-gatted manuer. It may be sown. for the sake of her children, who needed a protector and an education, she accepted another husband.

The new family have been moderately prosperous. Although not possessing a large amount of this world's goods, they had enough to make life pleasant. The son and daughter were educated at the best schools; and if the wife thought of her lost husband at times, she was not unhappy with her new one. One Monday an arrival of more than passing importance to this family was announced in the village, and soon the former husband and father presented himself to his astonished wife. He
