Tabal Cain. bal Cain was a man of might Id Tubal Cain was a man of might, In the days when earth was young; y the fleres red light of his furnace bright, The strokes of his harmer rung; and he lifted high his brawny hand On the iron glowing clear, searlet shower A ne fashing the stroke of and the spear. A ne fashing "Hurrah for any handlwork ! Hurrah for the spear and the sword ! urrah for the heart thatshall wheid them wel For he shall be king and lord."

For ne shari be ang and block. To Tubal Cain came many a one, As he wrought by his roaring fire. And userh men raved for a strong steel blade And is made hem weapons sharp and strong Thi they shouled loud for glee, And gave him gifts of pearl and gold, And spoils of the forest free. And spoils of the forest free. And they sang: "Hurrah for Tubal Cain, Who hath given as strength an w! Hurrah for the smith, hurrah for the fire, And hurrah for the metal true!"

But sudden change came o'er his heart, Ere the setting of the sun, And Tubai Cain was died with pain For the evil he had done; He saw that man with rage and hate. Made war upon their kind. That the jand was red with the blood they In their just for carnage blind. And ho said : "A has i that ever I made. In their list for earnings ofno, nd he said : " A hai? I toot ever I made, Or that skill of mine should plan, he spear and the sword for men whose joy Is to slay their fellow-maa?"

And for many a day old Tubal Cain sat brooding ofer his wor; ad his hand forbore to smite the ore, And his furnice smouldered low. at he rose at last with a cheerful face. But he rose at fast with a cheefful face, And a bright couriegoussye, And bared his strong right arm for work, White the quick thanes mounted high. And the sang: "Hurrah for my handlwork" And the red sparks lit the air: "Not alone for the blade was the bright ste-words". Mud he fishioned the first plowshare

And men, taught wisdom from the past, Ingriendship joined their hands, s Hung the sword in the hall, the spear sen

He subsequenty fitted out three vessels as privateers der the flag of the Republic of Counder the hag of the Republic of Co-lombia, and attacked the commerce of Spain. In six months the Colombian Government was changed, Lafitte's pa-pers were no longer valid and his large outif became probably a dead loss. He continued his cruises, and became a pirate. I believe he attacked none but nanish vessels. I remember when anish vessels were brought into bailton Islands near Last Island : they were laden with a certain Sparish wine and the citizens of the Attakapas went out to see them, and purchased part of the cargo. In 1814, when the English made their descent upon the coast of Louisiana, they made an offer to Lafitte to join them, which he refused. He sent their proposals to John R. Grinder and S. They were good gunners, and their pieces made great have among the enemy. They were placed mear the swamp; the enemy advancing diagonally a fittle towards the centre, the pirates' guns had full sweep of them. After the battle of New Orleans, bu little is known of Lafitte and his men They determined to seek some land where the story of their crimes had not penetrated. They quitted New Orleans and went to Galveston Island—some dutermined to seek some land and went to the purpose of colonizing others say to dig up treasures buri there. The last is improbable; men their profession are notoriously reckle and prodigal of their means; pirates and robbers never save. If they had treasures to bury it is safe to conjecture that would select some spot more connt to their usual haunts than Gal veston Island, when in adverse weather it must have taken several days to make the trip, and which, from its very re-moteness, must have been exposed to be plundered by faithless members of band. From Galveston Island it is uncertain whither they went. It is said that La-fitte sailed to South America. The abe of all intelligence is a proof that he was ashamed of his past career, and changed his name and profession as he had intended, and led a new life. 1 have heard it stated that he has a daughter living now (1863) in New Or-
